A Doomed City The Chilean Army Now Marching on Lima.

A special to the S. F. Call, dated New York, December 24, says: The Star and Herald of Panama has a letter from Panama, dated December 1. The writer says: Although the Chileans are scarcely one hundred miles off, the melancholy fact attracts but little attention. There can be no doubt of the result if the army and reserve fight well. They are well armed. An unlimited sack is promised the troops in the event of victory. The Chilean forces encamped in the vicinity of Tacna had to be marched through it unarmed, they having demanded the privilege of wrecking it entirely before leaving, on the ground that after their departure the Peruvians might reoccupy it. The Peruvian army is increasing daily in numbers. Several battalions have recently arrived from the interior, and one from Cajamarca having marched 900 miles. All the captains of foreign men-of-war were in a meeting in Lima with the Ministers, respecting the hulks in Callao Bay. The Peruvians order them out, whilst the Chileans say if they are moved they will seize them. All are foreign property, and the greater number have been fitted up to receive women and children during the fight and tedious time evidently opening.

The first division of the Chilean army continues at Pisco awaiting the arrival of the second. The two divisions will consist in all of 18,000 men. They have occupied Tambo de Mora and Chincha, whilst 3,500 of them have paid a visit to the town of Ica, where the customary scenes of pillaging occurred. In Pisco the troops were allowed to do as they chose, and innumerable outrages were committed. The Chilean Minister of War and Gen. Maturana are at Tambo de Mora. Gen. Villageran and Commander Lynch were both in Pisco. The Chileans are re-issuing the 10-sole notes seized on board the Islay. They pay their troops with them, and the soldiers force their acceptance. Several sugar cane plantations have been destroyed. The Chileans expect to march from 30,000 to 34,000 men against Lima, and with this force hope to capture the city. As soon as the whole Chilean army arrives in the vicinity of Lima, Dr. Pedro José Calderal will be invested with a dictatorship, as Plerola intends to devote himself to the army, of which he is Commander-in-Chief. La Patria asserts that the war can be carried into the Cordilleras and waged there for years to come. H. B. M. ironclad Shannon went to Anticon and took on board specie and other articles in silver soles, which were shipped unsecured. They would not be exported. She received 600,000 piros. Most of the foreign vessels will be expected to accept storage of similar character.

The principal families of Lima are leaving precipitately, taking with them whatever they can carry. The better dwellings are being stripped of their more valuable furniture, which is shipped north. But few families, and those of the poorer classes, await the Chileans. Haciendas, near Pisco, have been plundered and destroyed. Ica also had a visit from the Chileans. Officers of foreign men-of-war will accompany respective headquarters of combatants. Iquiqui papers claim that Commander Lynch obtained more than $500,000 in specie and merchandise in his raid in the north of Peru. Callao and Molando are the only ports closed to commerce. New currency is put in circulation. The notes are called "locase," and represent silver value. They are intended to replace the depreciated paper notes, of which 300 are required to purchase a $20 piece. Valuable silver mines have been discovered in Huanuavelon. The French bark Adolph has been wrecked near Valparaiso, valued at $80,000; uninsured. The Pacific Steam Navigation Company has increased the number of steamers, and have raised rates of freight, owing to the rush of people leaving South Peru with their property.

Progress of the Northern Pacific Railroad.

Fred. Billings, President of the Northern Pacific Railroad, told a Times reporter yesterday that Gen. Anderson, Engineer-in-Chief, just returned from the Yellowstone Valley, has already contracted for ties and timber for 200 miles on that division, and his instructions are to accomplish in the coming year the largest possible amount of mileage construction up the Yellowstone Valley, with the view of closing up the central gap of 820 miles, and having the road running through in 1883. This central gap is from Glendine, where the Missouri division ends, on the Yellowstone to the east end of Pen d'Oreille division, which extends 2010 miles from Ainsworth, on the Columbia river, west to Lake Pen d'Oreille. The Pen d'Oreille division will be completed early in the Spring. It is nearly all graded, materials are provided on the spot, and the track is now going down. As soon as it is completed, the work will be continued without interruption eastward, and with vigorous progress up the Yellowstone, going west, and from Lake Pen d'Oreille going east, the company confidently expect to close up in 1883. In addition to this activity in the heart of the continent, work is to be commenced this Winter on 120 miles across Northern Wisconsin to Montreal river, being the extreme eastern division of the road, and steadily carried forward to completion. This division will form a part of the Lake Superior South Shore line, running to Saulte Ste. Marie, and connecting with the Canadian roads, and the Straits of Mackinaw, connecting with the New York Central and Pennsylvania system.—N. Y. Times, Dec. 24.

Wolves in Finland.

It is certainly a little startling to hear, at this advanced period in the history of European civilization, that wolves are threatening large districts within hail of populous towns on the northern shore of the Gulf of Finland. Such, however, appears to be the fact, and men are now, as in the Middle Ages, sustaining a mortal combat with the wild beast of the forest. A correspondent at Hango states that eleven children have, during two months, been carried off by these ferocious marauders, stealing down from the neighboring woods to the very thresholds of the peasants' houses. His challenge to the English lovers of adventurous sport is one that may be taken up in earnest, the promise of excitement being more likely to tempt keen sportsmen than the offer of a reward which has been placed by the Finnish authorities on the head of every wolf killed or captured. Two kinds of dogs are indicated by our correspondent as most serviceable in wolf hunting. These are sheep dogs and bull dogs—the former, we suppose, to drive the game and bring it into a circle, and the latter to pull it down. Wolfskins are handsome trophies, and if some scores of English hearths should before the end of this Winter be ornamented with such tokens of manly sport it will enhance the value of these picturesque rugs to know that every one means the removal from a suffering peasantry of a cruel and deadly scourge.—London Telegraph.

What "Free Ships" Mean.

Since the adjournment of the Boston Shipping Convention it has been widely accepted as an established fact that "free ships" means the utter extinction of ship building in American yards. With all our resources in timber, iron and skilled craftsmen—after having gained a world-wide distinction for splendid models and unexampled speed in sailing—we are to surrender the field to rivals, and on conditions as humiliating as they are disastrous. The large and thrifty communities of skilled mechanics, who were justly proud of their own achievements, and who, in the past brought honor as well as emolument to the American flag, are to throw down their tools, confess themselves vanquished, and seek a subsistence in some other way. They cannot accept the degrading conditions imposed upon European labor, with all the squalor, ignorance, and privation which these conditions entail. They will not consent to wear the galling yoke from which the workmen of Europe are now fleeing to our own shores.—American Ship.

Trees in the West.

Probably fifty years hence there will be an abundance of trees in the West. Agriculturists are rapidly awaking to the necessity of planting them. The Fort Scott and Gulf Railroad Company has begun the planting of hundreds of acres of trees on its land. A Boston capitalist has engaged a company of raisers of forest seedings in Illinois to break and plough a large area in Kansas, and plant no less than 2720 trees to the acre, and cultivate these until they shade the ground. At the end of that time—say ten years—the plantation will be delivered over to the owner. No trees less than six feet high are to be counted. The Fort Scott Railroad has adopted this plan, one advantage of which is that the tree enterprise will be attended to by experienced men, whose interest it will be to make as much of a success of it as possible.

MAKING GLASS CLOTH.—The thread for the glass cloth, now made at Pittsburg, is drawn out of a molten bar by means of a rapidly revolving wheel at the rate of 2,000 yards a minute. The weaving is done on looms about the same as with silk. The coloring is done with minerals when the glass is originally melted.

The Trade in Human Hair.

"Several tons of fair hair are annually exported to England and Germany." Such is the amazing announcement contained in a recently published report of the hair harvest in France, concluded a fortnight ago. The hair harvesters, however, do not confine their operations to France, but gather in huge crops periodically from German, Bohemian and Hungarian villages, while Italy, Spain, and even Russia, are also laid under regular contribution, but at longer intervals, by their travelling agents. It appears from the report above referred to that the most luxuriant heads of hair in France are to be found among the peasant women of Normandy. Brittany yields plentiful crops, but of coarse quality and lacking in lustre. Limoges and its neighborhood are productive of exceptionally long and glossy "back hair." Throughout the north of France dull hues characterize the capillary growth—a fact which the dealers attribute to the influence of the sea air upon the human hair, which in inland mountainous districts is generally found to be dark and bright in color, and to grow with great rapidity to abnormal length and weight. The French hair dealer's chief customer is America, whither is annually exported as much of the commodity in question as to Great Britain and the Fatherland. Seeing that the last named countries are supplied with several tons of fair hair alone every year, it would seem probable that trans-Atlantic belles are even more dependent upon artificial adjuncts for their "capillary attractions" than are our own native beauties.—London Telegraph.

SOME years we had in our employ a man who several times a day ran out of the office to buy a drink of whisky. Every time he went the cashier was instructed to drop ten cents into the drawer to our credit. At the end of seventeen months the man who had gone out so often had drank himself out of a good situation, and the drawer, when opened, was found to contain four hundred and nine dollars, which we loaned to a young mechanic at seven per cent interest. He used it to purchase a set of tinners tools. On the 16th of November, 1886, he returned it to us with interest, saying in his letter that he now has a wife, two children, and property worth five thousand dollars. The other fellow is a bummer hunting for food. —Exchange.

IT is a fact that there is an actual block of freight from the Mississippi river to the Atlantic ocean. This is no rhetorical exaggeration, but a fact gained from railroad men in the city. The Rock Island Road offered to one line here a contract for 400 cars of freight from now to the 1st of May daily. The lines out of Chicago are utterly unable to handle the business that is offered. Erie and New York Central send no cars west of Buffalo, and cannot begin to move the freight from that point.—Chicago Journal of Commerce.

THE Stocton Mail raises an excellent point in the Schroder case. It says that under the law a wife cannot testify for or against her husband in a criminal trial. Under this ruling neither side could put Mrs. Schroder on the stand. Schroder swore that his wife confessed an intimacy with Lefevre, although there was no testimony whatever to substantiate this theory. Thus, as the law stands, a man tried for murder may swear that his wife confessed an intimacy with the victim and there is no way known to the law to disprove his testimony.

THERE is another side to the ironing question—the sanitary one. When garments are brought from the clothes yard they are fresh, pure and fragrant, filled with sunlight and magnetism which the ironing process dissipates: thus is this most valuable health giving element lost to the wearer. Nurses are learning the value of vitalized clothing for the sick, and one who understands her business will remove the heated, fever-charged bed clothing as often as the patient is moved, substituting fresh sheets directly from the sunlight.

THE life of an apparently moribund lady is said to have been saved by playing to her on the banjo. Mr. Paroquet recalled this incident when his aunt was on her death-bed, and he got his banjo and played several airs. The life of his aunt was not saved, but he hadn't played five minutes before she lost all her former desire to live, and declared that death had been shorn of all its terrors. But Mr. Paroquet meant well. —Norristown Republican.

THE Catholic World, in discussing the Irish situation says: The Irish land struggle is one of universal interest, and it can end eventually in only one way; not in the spoliation of the landlord, but in securing to the people who live on and by the soil all the opportunities that it fairly affords of yielding a livelihood in return for their toil.

FOUR Chicagoans, headed by a Mr. Keith, have paid out $100,000 for lands in Tennessee, and founded a town on the Cumberland River, intending to colonize their tract with Northwestern people. A number of the colonists have already arrived, and are engaging in the lumber trade.

THE young fellows are already beginning to think upon good resolutions for the new year. Something in this style might suit the occasion: Resolved, to make love to no girl whose father keeps a bull dog.

ANOTHER MINING BILL.

Senator Teller has introduced a bill in Congress which provides that any person owning six or any less number of mineral ledge or blanket claims adjacent to each other, or not more than half a mile apart, on which the assessment labor for the first year has been performed, may thereafter perform upon any one claim of the combined number the entire assessment labor due upon the whole number of claims. If pay mineral is reached on the claim worked, it shall then cease to be counted as one of the combination, and another shall be selected on which to work the assessments of the remainder, and so on until mineral is reached or the ground abandoned. The bill also provides that mining claims located since the 10th of May, 1872, whether located by one or more persons, shall not exceed 1,500 feet along the vein or lode, and that no claim shall extend more than 300 feet on each side of the middle of the lode or location at the surface.

It would be a decided imrovement on this bill and all existing mining laws if the number of claims pertaining to one ownership, individual or otherwise, could be limited. The "location fiend" is the curse of every mining district. We have known one such to boast of being the "owner" of sixty thousand feet of mining ground—and for a year at least he could make forty actual mining men stand off and suck their thumbs, unable to stick a pick anywheres in the district without being confronted with one of the fiend's notices. And yet it is not on record that any location fiend ever made a dollar out of any of his locations. The privileges of the proposed law should not extend to any man or company claiming to exceed a half a dozen undeveloped locations at one time; nor should any man be permitted to hold a larger number of such at any one time under any circumstances.

WHAT with the troubles with the Land Leaguers in Ireland and the Dutch Boers in South Africa, the British Government has its hands more than full. A crisis is pending in both South Africa and Ireland, which facts have raised the excitement in London to an almost unprecedented degree. Nothing else is talked about in places of public resort, "and," remarks a correspondent, "scarcely anything else is thought about by thoughtful people but the grave troubles which beset the Government on every side. The disaster in the Transvaal is almost universally ascribed to official blundering, and the number of those who ascribe the troubles in Ireland to the same cause is by no means small. It is openly charged that the Natal authorities were long aware of a contemplated uprising by the Dutch Boers, and that they paid no attention to repeated warnings and took no precautions to protect themselves. When the storm broke they were utterly unprepared to meet it, and of course, suffered shameful defeat and disaster." The flower of the British army is rapidly leaving England for Ireland and the Cape.

IT seems to be by no means a foregone conclusion that the site has been definitely settled upon for the holding of the World's Fair at New York in 1883. Mr. Cross, of the Society of American Engineers, who has for years been employed in surveying and laying out the upper part of the city and has a practical knowledge of all its localities, comes forward and says that Inwood is unsuited for the purpose. He asserts that before the necessary buildings could be erected, 500,000 cubic yards of earth would have to be removed; and further, that the borders of Sherman Creek would have to be piled for the erection of the structures. This puts a new complexion on the matter, and it is possible that all the proceedings of selecting a site will have to be commenced de novo.

THE quinine production of the world is estimated at from 230,000 to 260,000 pounds per year, as follows: Germany, 56,000 pounds; Italy, 45,000; France, 45,000; England, 27,000; America, 63,000; India, 12,250. Efforts are being made to acclimatize the cinchona in Italy. Its successful culture in India and Ceylon encourages the belief that it will grow wherever the soil is dry, the rainfall large and the climate temperate.

THEY are having exceedingly rough Christmas weather along the Atlantic coast, and throughout the Eastern States generally. The severest gale they have had since 1877 raged along the coast during Christmas Day, registering 68 miles an hour. No great disasters are reported, however. Ice and snow blockaded rivers and railroads almost everywhere.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE PRESIDENT ELECT.

There are lots of people in the world who think it would be "just splendid" to be a great somebody, say President of the United states, or something of that sort. Now, there are numerous reasons showing that this is a mistake; that, to most people, not made of hard brass, it would be exactly the reverse of "just splendid" to be President. Believing this, we hope none of our own readers will waste their substance and self-respect in trying to get a place which deprives the holder of every particle of self-ownership— every snub's servant and nobody's master, not even his own, as to his own personal, family and home affairs—office-seekers, interviewers, reporters, politicians, beggars, the curious, the general adviser, and all other kinds of bores in multitudes after him in season and out of season, begging, advising, pumping, boring, prying, staring—no, $50,000 a year is not compensation enough for the persecutions of these kinds to which a new President has to submit. Nevertheless, we all like to know about the private doings of a public man, though feeling no interest at all in similar doings by a private man, so here goes to tell something about Gen. Garfield, whose personal affairs have become public since the 2d of November last.

Time was when Gen. Garfield had to pay up his subscription to every newspaper he received. Then, in the elegant parlance of the present day, he didn't "bite off any more than he could chaw"—that is, he read all he subscribed for, and no doubt attained wisdom by so doing. Now days he receives thousands almost by every mail. He doesn't have to pay for his papers like he used to, neither does he read them, although hundreds of them come with marked articles, overflowing with wholesome advice about how to form his Cabinet, and how to manage everything of like character. No doubt but the able editors who elaborate these editorials fondly hope he reads, digests and appreciates them; but he don't; not one in a thousand; it is impossible for even the man whom he keeps hired for the purpose to even scan them. So cart loads of editorial wisdom go to waste.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune has, like ten thousand others, been to Mentor to see about all these things. An extract or two will show the how President-elect conducts himself and is esteemed at home:

The Postoffice is half a mile from Gen. Garfield's residence, and he often goes there on horseback and carries home a sack of mail on the pommel of his saddle. I have seldom seen a more striking figure than this "man on horse back" presents as he gallops down the road, erect and graceful in the saddle as a trained cavalryman, but dressed like a plain farmer, and the broad brim of his slouch hat flapping in the wind. His neighbors never tire gazing at him as he passes by in this fashion, and his unassuming manners help to confirm them in the belief which they most devoutly cherish, and which they most emphatically declare on every proper occasion, that "he is the greatest man in the world."

The same correspondent says the General's vast correspondence is attended to with scrupulous care, and every visitor is accorded as much time and courtesy as the inexorable demands of business will permit. "Fortunately his physical basis is exceptionably sound and substantial. If not, his health would be broken under the heavy burdens which his hard master, the public, imposes upon him." And all this and a very great deal more of a worse sort is but a foretaste of what is to come. Presidential felicity is doubtless much over estimated.

THE Educational bill, especially designed to meet the problem of illiteracy at the South, has passed the Senate with but six opposing votes. Senator Teller offered an amendment providing for the expenditure of the net proceeds of the public lands and the revenue from the Patent Office in the work of education, instead of the original plan of funding the amount and using only the interest, which amendment was adopted in Committee of the Whole, but lost in the Senate by a tie vote. In its present form the bill will furnish at the outset only an insignificant sum of money, and is regarded by some of the Senators as practically inoperative.

CANADA is going into the manufacture of beet sugar on an extensive scale. A French firm contemplates erecting five factories near Montreal, with a capacity sufficient to turn out two and a quarter million pounds of sugar annually. The French are proficients in the manufacture of beet sugar, and will, no doubt make the industry an important one for Canada.

THE influx of European immigrants still continues. Since January 1, 1880, nearly 319,000 have arrived at the port of New York. Intelligence from abroad indicates that this large number will be surpassed in 1881.

A DISPATCH from St. Petersburg, December 26, says the Russians have retaken, with a loss of 20 men, 2,000 camels that were recently captured by Turcomen.

The Convicted Settlers.

No one acquainted with the facts of the case can doubt that the trouble between the Mussle Slough settlers and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company was caused by the greed and injustice of the corporation. Had the company been willing to settle the controversy upon principles of fairness and common equity instead of goading the farmers to the point of desperation by its oppressive and extortionate demands, the unfortunate collision with the United States Officers would never have occurred. In regard to the equities of the case there is no room for two opinions. When the settlers entered upon possession of the lands in Tulare and Fresno, those lands were not estimated by anyone at a higher value than $2 50 per acre. But the settlers, relying upon representations made to them by the agents of the company, anticipated fair treatment, and never dreamed that the improvements made by their own labor and expenditure would be seized upon as a pretense for raising the price to be paid for the land. They accordingly went to work to build up for themselves comfortable homes. They made an extensive net-work of ditches to bring down an ample supply of water from distant sources for the purposes of irrigation. They built houses and barns and fences, set out trees, enriched the soil, and made all manner of improvements by which the value of the land was raised from $2 50 to $25 or $30, and in some instances as high as $40 per acre. It required years of patient labor, and the expenditure of large amounts of money, to accomplish these results. When it was seen that the road did not take the route originally agreed upon the inference was natural that the land-grant was forfeited through the violation of the conditions upon which it had been made. The claim of the company is that, though it did in the first instance divert the road from the prescribed route, it afterwards extended a branch through these lands. This however, was not done until after the lands had been made so valuable by the industry and investments of the settlers as to excite the greed of the company; and the side branch was evidently constructed for no other purpose than to lay a legal foundation for the claim of the company and to enable it under the forms of the law to rob the unfortunate farmers of the fruit of their toil. Under such circumstances it can hardly excite surprise that, when the railroad company pressed its claim to the enhanced value of the land, refused to entertain any proposition of compromise, and finally proceeded to invoke the aid of the law to oust the settlers, the latter should have been betrayed under the excitement caused by a natural sense of wrong into acts which cannot be justified. Nor do we pretend to defend them in offering forcible resistance to the officers of the law. We do, however, invoke for them the sympathy of humane and fair-minded men and the interposition of the President of the United States, if the time shall come when the exercise of Executive clemency shall be necessary to prevent them from being subjected to punishment more severe than the nature of their offense, considering the provocation, fairly calls for.—S. F. Chronicle.

SOME newspaper correspondent writes: "The body of A. T. Stewart has never been recovered. That is the information I have from persons close to Judge Hilton. The thieves who stole it relied upon a woman's weakness to redeem the bones at a costly price. But to the same religious feeling Mrs. Stewarts friends appealed when they told her no man would lie safe in his grave; that they were not necessary to the repose of her husband's soul; and that, if he could appear to her in spirit, he would tell her never to give one cent to keep alive such an example. Hence the grave-robbers had their nasty work and subsequent expense and long waiting on a reward for nothing. I once asked Judge Hilton for information on that subject, and he said: 'I would probably tell you if I had anything to say, but the newspaper discussion of the subject is mainly designed to assist the thieves and extort money from Mrs. Stewart. When the subject dies out and the wounds of the hour are healed, it may be time to talk up that question.'"

THE Southern Pacific road is now within fifty miles of El Paso. As El Paso is on the south side of the Rio Grande and in Mexico, the road will not touch at that place, but probably go through Franklin, the American town on this side of the river. A branch railroad will at some time cross the river at this point, and with El Paso as its base, start out through the States of Chihuahua and Durango to the City of Mexico. We believe the Palmer concession includes this route. At some future time El Paso is destined to become a very important railroad centre.

THE jury in the Mussel Slough case has rendered a verdict of guilty against the settlers. The indictment found against them contained two counts—first conspiracy to resist the U. S. Marshal; second, actual resistance of that officer when attempting to execute a legal process. The prosecution relied mainly upon the fact that the settlers belonged to a secret League to sustain their first count, and upon the facts that transpired when Hart and others were killed at the time the U. S. Marshal went to Mussel Slough to dispossess Brewer and other settlers, to sustain the second count.

THE health of Justice Clifford of the Supreme Court has grown worse rapidly in the last few days, and he is liable to die at any time. His mind is wholly gone.

No Hanging for Murder

There is no hanging for murder in California, and particularly in San Francisco. 27 murders in 15 months and not one judicial hanging. What a shame and a disgrace. The last terrible crime is that of the murder of the poor old German woman on Tuesday last on California Street. We do not know who the murderer in this case is, but we are well assured that in the year "one" his ancestors were all insane; and we sincerely trust if the case comes before Judge Ferral he will issue a lunatico inquirendo, so as to prepare testimony for the Jury when impanneled, and thus enable the poor individual charged with the crime to secure his freedom. But joking aside, this matter of murder, unpunished murder, is getting to be a foul blot and stain on the good name of the community. The idea of giving a scoundrel like Wheeler the slightest chance of escape from the consequences of his awful crime. We supposed he was insane when he seduced his wife's sister; had a child by her, came to this country with her, cohabited with her, and then through jealousy murdered her in the most demonical manner, to keep her from the embrace of another. All this of course was insanity. Bah! The act of Judge Ferral makes a mockery of justice. This bloody minded fiend Wheeler should have expiated his offence long since, and would have done so, if even-handed justice had been meeted out to him. 27 murders in 15 months, and not one judicial hanging; and yet we boast of our respect and obedience to the law; and how disinterestedly it is administered. Why, in no other country in the world is there such a sacrilege of justice as there is in this community. Look at the infamy of the "misfit" of the Kaplan, Kalloch, Desmond et id omne genus, indictments. Is any one that can read fool enough to believe that such a total disregard of law, justice and decency, was the result of accident? Not much. The result was intended as it came out; and yet the ones guilty of it, are allowed to pursue the even tenor of their way, commit more official crime, until the patience of the people will cease to be a virtue, and they will rise in their might and sweep from existence the criminal, and the criminal's friend. We are seeking by every means in the power of those interested in the progress and prosperity of the State, to induce the right kind of an immigration to settle in California, and we meet them at the portals of the Golden Gate and at the point of debarcation with a banner inscribed with the inviting words "Come to this land of law and justice; where in its chief commercial city there have been 27 murders in 15 months and not one judicial hanging." What a blistering shame to courts and people. Is there a remedy? Yes. One sure remedy. It is in the people.—S. F. Spirit of the Times.

PRESIDENT HAYES is showing a good deal of backbone in retiring veteran Army officers who have passed the age contemplated by the law as the limit of active service. As a rule such officers want to remain on the active list as long as possible on account of the pay and authority, and they bring strong social and political influences to bear in opposition to their retirement. It is only fair that younger officers should have a chance for promotion, and that the service should have the benefit of vigorous brains and bodies in the men who manage the Military Bureaus and Departments.—N. Y. Tribune.

A TOUCHING ELOCUTIONIST.—The American Register, published in Paris, says a young American lady, who is to make her debût on the stage as soon as Worth gets her dresses done, recently recited "Mary had a little lamb" before the American colony in Paris so pathetically as to drown the drawing-room in tears. In fact, they had to take up the carpets next day and send them to the steam drying machine.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 1.....1881

THE BALL.—Times and conditions generally here were not such as to give promise of a very large attendance at a social gathering of any sort, but, we are pleased to say, the outcome of the Masonic ball Monday evening last belied the unfavorable promise. The attendance was larger than was anticipated, and it was a brilliant and well-enjoyed affair throughout. We never had better music and prompting combined than that furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Glenn and Mr. Macmillan, upon the violin, organ and guitar respectively; as violinist and prompter, Mr. Glenn is without a peer in our acquaintance. Director Conklin and others responsible in the immediate management performed their duties to general satisfaction, and there was no drag or confusion to check enjoyable progress. Our reporter neglected to take his note book, and having a poor memory when it comes to names of gentlemen (of which gender there were between fifty and sixty present), he will pass them, but will see how many he can recall of those of ladies who were present, as follows: Mrs. A. H. Johnson, Mrs. W. K. Miller, Mrs. Julia Betts, Mrs. L. Lasky, Mrs. Kate Phillippay, Misses Blanche, Celia and Mary Meysan, Miss Minnie Lasky, and Miss Maggie Sappington, Lone Pine. Miss Lou. Joslyn and Misses Luella and May Shepherd, Georges Creek. Mrs. I. Harris, Mrs. M. Conklin, Mrs. V. G. Thompson, Mrs. J. D. Blair, Mrs. E. Johnson, Mrs. A. Banker, Mrs. J. Crough, Mrs. J. N. Rose, Mrs. A. Robinson, Miss M. Parker, Misses Lillie, Minnie and Lena Harris, Miss Nettie Thompson, Miss Julia Cook, and Miss Wheaton, Independence. Mrs. H. D. Gelatt, Mrs. C. A. Walters, Miss Mallory, and Misses Minnie and Annie Thomson, Camp Independence. Mrs. D. P. Macarter, Misses Mary and Jennie Hessian, and Miss Dora McMurry, Big Pine. Miss Ada Inman and Miss Lillie Drake, Bishop Creek.

AT BISHOP.—The untamed pedestrians of Bishop Creek, having allowed the excitement of the Independence foot-race to reflect its effulgence upon them, broke out in a new place last Wednesday. About 10 o'clock in the morning the town was much excited over a contest to take place between two distinguished citizens, one of them a respected farmer and the other the proprietor of a well-known manufacturing establishment. The race was a very spirited one—one of the contestants being not very lean and the other not very fat. After the start nothing was seen of the runners but a cloud of dust and two pair of heels. The judges were unable to decide who came in first, causing confusion among the parties who had their money bet. The distance was 100 yards, and the time made, according to the best timers on the coast, was 6¾ minutes.

SMELTING.—The last run of the Defiance furnace at Darwin, which last week shut down for a short time, yielded 4,422 bars of base bullion. Counting the average weight 85 pounds this would amount to nearly 188 tons. During 48 hours on the 23d and 24th instants 553 bars were run out, of 23½ tons weight, the furnace keeping right along afterwards. It is a 5-tuyer furnace only, and the yield in that length of time is the best yet attained in this county, or probably anywhere else with a furnace of the same class. Upon one occasion at Cerro Gordo a run of 305 bars was accomplished in 24 hours, but for some cause or other the furnace was cooled off the next day.

OFFICERS INSTALLED.—At the meeting of Inyo Lodge No 221, F. & A. M., on Monday evening last, the following officers were regularly installed to serve for the ensuing Masonic year: Alvah Russel Conklin, W. M.; T. F. A. Connelly, S. W.; William Harris George, J. W.; John Clemence Irwin, Treasurer; James William Smith, Secretary; George Washington Brady, S. D.; Pleasant Arthur Chalfant, J. D.; Webster Hilton Walker, Marshal; John Shepherd and Helaire Philibert Cartier, Stewards; Thomas Parker, Tyler.

PANAMINT.—The business of mining and milling has been steadily carried on in Panamint for some time past, to the handsome profit of chloriders and all interested. Many of the unpatented mines are being relocated. An important strike is reported in the 900-foot level of the Wyoming, samples of which have been sent to the old Company at San Francisco. Some Eastern parties recently there propose either buying the big mill of the Surprise Valley Mill & Water Co. or else putting up entirely new works, to reduce custom ore.

REFORMATION DAY.—This being the first day of the new year, it becomes, "ex officio," Reformation or Good Resolution Day. Go in, all of you who hope to reform your ways. If you hold out a week longer than you did last time your case is not entirely hopeless. That rate of gain each year will insure complete reformation in a little over fifty years. Meantime, pay the printer. That is the first step in every moral reform.

DEEP SPRINGS.—W. A. Greenly was in from Deep Springs a day or two ago, and reported that all the mines being worked "look a great deal better than the owners expected"—which is saying considerable. Samples of ore from a new location on the Indian Scout ledge, assayed by Mr. Woodhull, yielded an average of $58 per ton.

AT OLANCHA.—Uncle Billy Walker, down at Olancha, stood in on the foot-race $100 on the Crough side, but we have been requested not to let the boys know it.

TAXES.—Up to and including Monday last the amount of taxes paid in aggregated $29,000, leaving about $12,000 delinquent.

The "Sprint."

On Monday last the weather clerk for this section, with his wonted urbanity and condescension, provided a splendid day for the foot-race—the human race, as it were—between Daniel Crough and D. W. James. The event, which had been the all-absorbing topic amongst all gatherings for a week or more before, sufficed to attract a town-full of people. A great many explained that it was necessary for them to come in and settle up the blank tax business; others came with sacks more or less filled, in response to the invitation, while the ladies came of course as all-important participators in the ball of that evening. Before noon the streets were filled, the hotels, stables and saloons attending to the rush of business as naturally as if accustomed thereto, or as if the proprietors expected a similar experience within the next year or two.

Aside from the stakes, amounting to

ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS,

The betting did not seem to be lively, and probably did not exceed $1,000 more. The strangers, backing James, displayed the most money; but certain advices, received a day or before in regard to the identity of the "dark horse," rendered takers scarce. Still, many of the Independence boys staked their money on Crough in the faith that he was the fastest man, anyway.

The track, as made, extends from a point even with the rear of the Court House eastward to near the School House. Every foot of the 100 yards had been smoothed, packed and placed in good order. The outcome of the track is 5½ feet lower than the starting point. In the midst of the assembled crowd of men, women and children the preliminary measurements and marking was soon accomplished, and about 3:30 the contestants stepped upon the ground. As James dashed through upon a "flyer" over the track it appeared that his racing costume, with the exception of his shoes, was so abreviated at the top and bottom as to leave him with but the smallest portion of covering. Crough sailed through in white stockings and gaily colored tights, winning the heartiest applause.

Judge J. A. Hannah and John Shepherd had been agreed upon as Judges at the outcome; J. J. Gunn and Uncle Abe Parker—the latter balancing his broken leg across his crutches and an extra chair—stationed themselves as timers, after making careful comparison of their costly stop watches.

THE "MOVING START"

Was considerately left to the principals in the trouble, without outside instruction. Being at the score, James inquired, "Well, Crough, hadn't we better turn loose?" As the speaker stooped to adjust a shoe string and take up the little round wooden sticks which he grasps in the palms of his hands while running, Crough threw off his overcoat and quietly responded, "Yes, I guess so." They moved up to the mark twice, Crough going over the first time and James the next, but on the third they sprang off so nearly even that no eye could detect any difference. According to the time reported the supreme effort of the men was over in

TEN AND ONE-HALF SECONDS,

Mr. James winning the race and money by three feet. Up to the sixty yards point Crough held about even, having been slightly ahead at twenty yards, but from that on James gained so that they reached the outcome in the relative order stated.

THE MEN.

The winner, Daniel W. James, as he states his right name to be, is an experienced, if not, indeed, a professional runner. Under the name of J. W. Day he has run at Denver, Col., and in the Territories. At San Francisco, we believe, he made a tie race 100 yards with "California Davis," and has never been beaten. He is a young man, 5 feet 7½ inches in hight, weight 140 pounds and powerfully developed from knee to hip. Mr. Daniel Crough is 5 feet 9 inches in hight, and tips the beam at 144 pounds. As is well known, he is by profession a school teacher, a graduate of the State Normal School and a favorite and successful educator. In the nature of his business, which he never neglects, it is hardly possible for him to attain, by training, that physical condition necessary to cope with racers of Mr. James' class. However, this was his first and only defeat.

GENERAL NOTES.

Mr. James and his party have conducted themselves in a manner so thoroughly gentlemanly as to leave nothing but commendation to record on that score. Our losers (speaking from a local stand-point) at once accepted situation gracefully, and admit that they know a good deal more about foot-racing than they did before. It is on dit that a challenge has been sent by Mr. Crough to Mr. Johnson, the noted Nevada foot-racer, to contest with him their respective speed in a 100 yard sprint for $500 to $1,000 aside.

["Sprint" is a term not laid down in the dictionaries, but is being used by Eastern sporting papers in about the same sense as "sprunt" (obs.), "to spring forward or outward," corresponding with a "spurt" of speed. It is not a common word, and therefore must be a good one, which will probably be designated in future vocabularies somewhat thus: "Sprint—A short foot-race. [Sport. & Colloq. Local. U. S.]"

SICK.—We are sorry to note that Under Sheriff J. J. Moore has been quite ill for the past week or longer. He is, however, slowly improving. During his absence from the Sheriff's office Sher. Stevens has been efficiently acting as Deputy.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The Methodist Quarterly Meeting will be held at Bishop Creek, beginning on Saturday, January 8, 1881, and to conclude on the Sunday evening following; services on Saturday and Sunday evenings both.

THE FESTIVAL.—We learn that the Church Fair recently held at Bishop Creek was quite a success socially and satisfactory in pecuniary results. The sum of $128 was taken in, being $76 above expenses.

SCHOOL.—Mr. Daniel Crough begins a three months' term of school Monday next at the Milton or Camp Independence school house.

On the Lone Pine Track.

LONE PINE, Dec. 26.

MESSRS. EDITORS—I have only time for a very brief account of the races.

I believe it was Burns who said: "The best laid plans of men and mice 'git up and git'" or words to the same effect.

The first race, on Friday, between Wake-up-Jake, Sea Gull and Major, was easily won by Jake—Sea Gull only having succeeded in gulling a few into pool buying—Major proving a minor consideration.

The second race was another case of "gray mare proving the better horse." Julius Roper, of George's Creek, came down with a grayhound looking little mare and was the butt of a good many jokes in consequence; such as, "going to roper in Jule." "Don't pay your two bits for pools, Jule, save it to buy feed;" "Where will you be when the race is over?" etc. Still he went on buying all the pools he could get. When the race was called there were four entries; Wake-up-Jake, Kittie Clyde, Mollie and Kate, the Roper mare. An even start was secured and the little Roper mare, that no one took any account of, shot out from the others like a rifle ball and came away a winner by a length, mare, rider and owner receiving an ovation.

Of the race on Saturday between Wake-up-Jake and Billy Moore the least said the soonest mended.

Friday night there was a school exhibition and after that a ball, both of which were successful. Further deponent knoweth and saith not.

Yours, JOE COSE.

THE DIFFERENCE.—Just before sunrise this New Year's morning the thermometer here marked 40° above zero; soon after, the mercury rose to 50°. This indicates about the style of weather we have been having for several weeks; in the middle of the day almost as warm as early Summer; grass and flowers are growing nicely in all favorable localities. Of course we will get a "snifter," or a "blizzard" pretty soon, and these young things will get nipped. It is the more remarkable, this mild spell, because we are 4,500 feet above sea level, and the normal metereology should range from zero (during nights) to the freezing point. Gen. Hazen has just been put in charge of the Weather Department at Washington, and being new to the business, it appears that he don't know how to regulate the weather machinery; leastways, the mercury at Boston and that region is reported at 40° below zero! eighty degrees cooler than we have it, even before sunrise. But the General may not be to blame.

Mining Property in New York.

It is much easier to sell a mine in New York than it was six months ago. There is not the boom which made the Fifth Avenue Hotel a mining rendezvous, a year ago, but there is not the horror of the word "mine" which was felt after Little Chief joined Chrysolite and Pittsburg in its farewell to dividends. Mining is upon a better basis than it has been before in this city. Capitalists are willing to invest in good mines, but they want to be assured that they are good. Large sales of mining property have been negotiated during the past month with noticeable ease. A man who came here recently with a twenty-day bond on a $200,000 property closed a bargain within ten days after his arrival. It was, however, an extra bargain. There is less disposition to overcapitalize than there was a year ago, and a diminished tendency to stocking mines at all. Sales this Winter seem to be largely to men who are not in for a stock deal, but who propose to work the properties bought. The revival of some of the properties which have been under a cloud, and the genuinely rich developments of the past season in Colorado, Arizona and New Mexico, have had an excellent effect in restoring that desideratum, a cautious confidence in mining properties.—N. Y. Mail.

How to Prevent Carelessness with Fire-Arms.

The careless handling of firearms continues in spite of the shocking results chronicled almost daily. There is no apparent diminution in the number of damphools, no matter how many people are maimed or killed by the discharge of firearms supposed to have been unloaded; and it is now the duty of the authorities to take the matter in hand and produce a remedy. The Stock Report suggests that a law be framed making it a penal offence for any person to point a firearm at another, save in self-defense. Such a law is an imperative necessity. Within the past six months many people have been killed or maimed for life in this State by criminal carelessness in the handling of firearms. The victims, as a rule, have been young ladies or children. In each instance the carelessness of the person at fault was inexcusable. Let us have an end to this business. The person who points a firearm at another for the fun of the thing should be considered a criminal in the eyes of the law, and dealt with accordingly. With such a law in force grown people would not only be more careful themselves but would take some little pains to keep pistols and guns from the children. We make the suggestion that the Legislature pass a law in the interests of humanity to prevent carelessness in the handling of firearms.—Stock Report.

THE reports from every agricultural section of the State are of the most encouraging character. If the bright prospects of the present are realized the wheat crop of 1881 will be the largest ever harvested in California.

AFTER January there will be only one Democratic Governor in the Northern States—Ludlow, of New Jersey, while there will be only one Republican Governor in the South—in Tennessee.

Useful Hints.

A few drops of strong acetic acid put in melted glue will maintain it in a liquid state.

Soft soap should be kept in a dry place in the cellar, and not used until three months old.

A weak tartaric acid lemonade, taken after quinine, is said to hasten absorption. It relieves gastric irritability.

Use white oil cloth, bound with red, for wall protectors back of the kitchen table, and under the hooks where pans, etc., are hung.

Potato water, in which potatoes have been scraped, the water being allowed to settle, and afterwards strained, is good for sponging dirt out of silk.

If anyone desires a plant which will bloom through the winter, with no cessation, nothing will give greater satisfaction than the double pink petunia.

Furniture needs cleaning as much as other wood-work. It may be washed with warm soap suds, quickly wiped dry and then rubbed with an oily cloth.

To stiffen a crépe veil always keep it folded and pressed under a heavy book, and when it looks gray take alcohol enough to wet it thoroughly, then shake it dry, fold it nicely and press.

A nice soft soap for washing dishes can be secured by placing in an old dish (and occasionally adding water) all the scraps and bits of hard soap which are too small to use for washing.

When you clean your lamp chimneys, hold them over the nose of the teakettle when it is boiling furiously. One or two repetitions of this process will make them beautifully clear.

Sweep carpets gently. Even a rag carpet should be treated with consideration. A severe digging with a broom wears the warp and scrapes out the lint of the rags quite needlessly.

A good cement for broken glass and crockery: Mix half a pint of vinegar and half a pint of milk. When they have formed a curd take the whites of five eggs and boil together; sift into them sufficient quicklime to make the whole into a paste.

To make candied lemon or peppermint for colds, boil one and a half pounds of sugar in a half pint of water till it begins to candy round the sides; put in eight drops of essence; put it upon buttered paper, and cut with a knife.

Take a wineglass of cologne and another of lemon juice, then scrape two cakes of brown Windsor soap to a powder and mix well in a mould. When hard this will be found both pleasant and efficacious in rendering the hands smooth and white.

THE defense of Mr. Parnell and his colleagues will cost about $75,000. Six meetings were held in London a fortnight ago, with the object of raising funds, and subscriptions have been widely taken up in Ireland. The Land League counts, however, upon receiving the greater part of the fund from Irishmen in the United States.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Allgemeine Deutsche Unterstuetzungs Gesellschaft.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 28, 1880.

Messrs. Harris & Rhine, Independence, Cal.: DEAR SIRS—The undersigned, President of the German Benevolent Society, begs leave to call your attention to this truly benevolent institution, founded in the early days of California, and being now in the 27th year of its existence. The Society was formed to carry out three objects, viz.: to assist poor and worthy or deserving people by support, to find employment for those out of work, and to cure those who are stricken down with sickness. For the latter purpose the Society owns a magnificent Hospital, surrounded by extensive grounds, where all patients are under the charge of excellent physicians and a consulting board of the most eminent medical talent of this city. The Society has expended for hospital and grounds the sum of $188,895.

The object of this communication is to propose to you to act as agent for this Society, either personally or through one of your employees, suited for such position, for the purpose of enlisting new members.

The monthly fee is only one dollar and the initiation fee on becoming a member two dollars. Only healthy persons can become members, and only Germans or those who speak that language, also their wives and children. Any member who meets with sickness is treated in the hospital without any expense to him until he has been restored to health. All persons who are not members, or can not become such, not speaking the German language, are admitted for medical treatment in the hospital at as low terms as it is possible to make them.

In this city we have about 3,000 members, but throughout the interior only about 300. It is our aim to increase the number of members throughout the State to make the hospital as much as possible self-sustaining, to enable us to extend the charitable department in this benevolent institution. For the trifling sum of one dollar per month members have the best aid and care in the German Hospital.

Frequently sick people in the country are crippled for life by false treatment from incompetent doctors, or even brought to a premature death. Only too late do they find out that if they had become members they would have been restored to health, and their earnings of years would not have gone into the pockets of inexperienced doctors, as the hospital employs only the best physicians. If there are no earnings, the employers and the friends of the sick are generally called upon to pay for his support. All this can be avoided, if the employers would vigorously enforce the rule, now introduced in most of San Francisco's establishments, that every man employed should belong to a relief society in order that in case of sickness he might be well cared for and not be reduced to the rather humiliating necessity of asking aid from the purses of his employer and his friends.

Persons of all nations of the age of 50 years or over are admitted as pensioners for life by paying a certain sum to be agreed upon to the Society. They receive a home at the hospital, first-class board, washing and attendance in in case of sickness, free of any expense.

To enable Germans and others who do not know of the existence of this institution, neither of the hospital nor its great advantages, to become members, I have addressed you the above, and hope that you will cheerfully accept the agency and do all in your power to further the interests of this society by enlisting new members, and recommending our hospital to those who may be compelled to seek medical aid.

Your Obedient Servant,

JULS. BANDMANN,
President G. G. B. S.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

THIS HONEY WAS REMOVED FROM THE comb by centrifugal force, with a machine made for the purpose. It is therefore virtually the same as honey in the comb, only you don't have to eat the bees wax, which is indigestible and therefore disagrees with many persons. When first extracted the honey is liquid, but nearly all pure honey will candy or granulate in course of time, especially if exposed to the cold. Putting the cans in hot water for a short time will bring the honey to its fluid state without injury.

This Honey is put up in 10 pound cans, with patented screw tops, which renders it convenient for family use, and especially for the mines, to which it may be packed, even upside down, without leakage. A neat label on each can gives full directions.

Price, $1 75 per can, or 15 cents per lb at the Apiary, if customers furnish their own receptacle. For sale at Harris & Rhine's, Independence, and at the Apiary, at Henry Behrman's place, Camp Independence.

Assessment Work on Claims.

The year during which work on mining claims must be done to comply with the United States regulations begins on the 1st day of January. This is required by the amendment to the the laws which passed in March, 1880. We have published this several times, but here it is again, to make sure no miner will miss it.

"Provided, that the period within which the work required to be done annually on all unpatented mineral claims shall commence on the first day of January succeeding the date of location of such claim, and this section shall apply to all claims located since the 10th day of May, 1872."

Under the old law the year began from the date of location. Now, however, the miner must begin his work on January 1st, to expend the $100 on "labor or improvements."

A claim located October 1st, 1879, requires the expenditure within the year of 1880, and whatever may have been expended during 1879 will not answer the requirements of expenditure in 1880. It appears by reason of the change made in the requirements of the Act of May, 1872, by the amendatory law, that a claim located on any date subsequent to the 1st day of January, 1879, requires no further expenditure during that year than is made necessary by the local laws.

We hear that in several camps people are ready to jump claims on January 1st, if the miners are not present. People have gone from this city up country to relocate claims if the original owners are not on hand. In one camp a band of men have organized to go out at 12 midnight on the last day of the year, and relocate those claims where no one is at work. This kind of game, however, will not work, and if the owner was at hand on his claim at the usual morning working hour, his rights would no doubt be protected by the courts if it came to a contest.

It behooves all claim-owners, however, to look out for their property and see that it is not relocated.—Mining and Scientific Press.

ARIZONA.—The following is from the Bodie Standard-News: Ned Reddy, who left Bodie about a month since for the fabulous gold fields of the sunny South, arrived in Bodie yesterday. Mr. Reddy, in addition to visiting outside camps, made a specialty of the grand central point of attraction—Tombstone. This town is situated 28 miles from Benson, a station on the Southern Pacific railroad, a good line of stages connecting the two points. The town contains about 4,000 inhabitants. The resources of the town are the Contention mine, employing 12 men, and having a 30 stamp mill; the Toughnut with 17 men, and the Grand Central with 25 men. Thousands of men are broke, with no prospects of work. Business of all kinds is generally overdone. The games will give an idea of the prospects. There are seven ten-cent check faro games doing a starvation business. Arizona is about three years ahead of its population. At the expiration of that time it may be a good country to locate in, but at the present the great mass will do well to give it a wide berth. For my part, Bodie suits me. Of all the old timers I have met, not one but wanted to get back.

TOM FURBEE, of Bishop Creek, left Genoa last Sunday after a short visit among his friends. He reports two former residents of Genoa—Mallory and Joe Turner— as being wealthy and prosperous citizens of Bishop Creek. Mr. Furbee was for a long time Superintendent of the Sierra Nevada Mine near Genoa, and one of our best known and respected citizens. He left here about eight years ago to make his home at Bishop Creek. Leaving here a miner and confirmed bachelor, he is now an industrious farmer, a husband and father.

Carson & Colorado.

Three ships—the Western Belle, the Ennerdale and the Forfarshire—have arrived at San Francisco with steel rails for the Carson and Colorado Railroad. The rails will be brought here as rapidly as possible. The rails are sufficient to lay the track to the point beyond Hawthorn where it will connect with the wagon road to Bodie. There are on hand ties sufficient to lay the track the full distance. If the weather holds good the track will be laid at the rate of a mile and a half per day. The track can and will be laid at this rate of speed. The flat-cars are all in from New York and the box-cars are arriving. The passenger-cars are now lying finished at Dayton, Ohio, at Varney & Smith's manufactory, and will be here in February. The Baltimore Locomotive Works will ship two more locomotives on the 1st of January. The road is being pushed ahead as rapidly as possiple, and will be continued beyond Candelaria to the Gold Mountain mining region. Eventually it will be carried through to Colorado, at which point it will connect with some road running to or through that country. When completed the Carson & Colorado road will be not less than 500 miles in length. In its course it will tap and pass through the most promising mining and mineral regions in Eastern Nevada. Not only will it pass through and near to mines of gold, silver, copper, lead, iron, antimony and the like, but will also tap a country in which are large fields of salt, soda, borax, alum, sulphur and many other valuable mineral treasures, as chromate of iron, ochers and earths of various kinds and colors, not a few of which are likely to prove useful as fire-proof and other paints. Marble, gypsum, alabaster, jasper and other kinds of stone for various purposes are also found in the regions which the road will traverse.—Virginia Enterprise.

A NEW SPEAKING MACHINE.—The Journal of Science, reports that Herr Faber lately exhibited his new speaking machine before the Physical Society, London. It is designed to imitate mechanically the utterance of the human voice by means of artificial organs of articulation made on the human model, and it is worked by keys like a musical instrument. A bellows made of wood and india-rubber serves for lungs. A small windmill is placed in front of the bellows to give trilling sounds. The larynx is made of a single membrane of hippopotamus hide and india-rubber. A mouth with two lips, a tongue, and an india-rubber nose complete the organs of the apparatus. Fourteen distinct sounds were uttered by it, and by combining these any word in any language can be produced. Laughing and whispering were also produced, and the pitch was raised or depressed at pleasure.

A TOUCHING story is told of an Indian woman who had lost her baby. Watching her opportunity, she entered the home of a white family and seized their pretty baby in her arms. The white mother was horrified. She sprang forward and clasped her child in her own arms, when the poor, bereft Indian gathered up the corner of her blanket, as one would hold a sick child, and uttered a low mournful cry. Tears ran down her cheeks as the white mother put her own pretty baby back in the Indian's arms. She passed her hands over it very tenderly and gracefully, and departed. In a week she came again, bringing a peck of wild plums; and the next time two buffalo tongues. She asked permission, by signs, to kiss the baby, and it was granted. Then she departed, and never came again.

QUITE a discovery in the treatment of diphtheria has been made recently. A young man whose arm had been amputated, was attacked with diphtheria before healing took place; and instead of the matter incident to that disease being deposited in the throat, the greater portion appeared on the wounded arm, and the diphtheria was very light and easily managed. Dr. Davis profited by this, and in his next case of diphtheria blistered his patient's chest, and on this blistered part the chief deposits appeared. This also was on easy case of the disease. The theory is that diphtheria usually appears in the throat because of the thinness of the lining of the throat. Hence, when the blister breaks the skin upon the outer part of the body, the disease appears there.

THE news from Berlin in reference to the Hebrew persecution is one of the most peculiar signs of the times that has recently come to the surface. There is nothing in ordinary reason to account for it, since the Hebrew population all over the world is invariably peaceable, law abiding and industrious. As a matter of religion they never seek a proselyte and very seldom interfere with the business of other people unless invited to do so by the loan of capital. That such a meeting should have been permitted in Berlin is a distinct proof that Bismarck is at the bottom of the agitation and is shrewd enough to be fostering a popular movement to which he will gracefully bend when the fruit is ripe. But what his motives are few can even surmise at this moment.

LORD KENMARE is an Irish nobleman who last year borrowed $100,000 in order to give employment to his people. They have got the money and now his life has been threatened, his house is to be burned and he must leave Ireland.

A JUVENILE murderer in Pennsylvania says that his father advised him to use a knife or a brickbat when he got into a quarrel. If he is to be hanged it is to be regretted that his father cannot swing with him.

A Year of Prosperity.

The New York Evening Express, in its annual review of the past year's business of the country and the port of New York, says: Viewed from a business standpoint, the year has been a remarkable one, probably the most remarkable in the history of the country. There has been a great revival in trade, and the volume of legitimate business done during the year was beyond all precedent. This improved condition of affairs was a natural result of large crops, the good export demand for our produce, the growth of the country, the heavy influx of gold from Europe, and the complete restoration of confidence growing out of the success of specie payments. One of the most gratifying features of 1880 has been the great falling off in the number of failures and the amount of liabilities of suspended merchants. The growth of the country, and the large additions to the national wealth are strikingly illustrated in the products of the soil, of which we raised 475,000,000 bushels of wheat, 1,500,000,000 bushels of corn, 413,000,000 bushels of oats, 24,000,000 bushels of rye, 40,000,000 bushels of barley, and 6,000,000 bales of cotton, to say nothing of tobacco, sugar, and other crops, and hog and dairy products, which yield immense sums of money in the aggregate. In plain words, the United States now raises enough to feed her own 50,000,000 of people and to supply the deficiency balance of the civilized world. During the year more miles of railroad have been built, more consolidations and combinations have been entered into, more freight and passengers have been transported, more money earned, and more interest and dividends paid than in any former year. The commerce of the country during the year has made rapid progress and caused the United States to stand still higher, its rank now being third among the commercial nations of the globe.

A Roseate View.

The New York Herald's Washington correspondent has interviewed a prominent Republican, who says in regard to the Panama and Nicaragua canals: "It is my belief that both will be built, and besides them we may see in the course of the next three years work begun on a canal or railroad on the Gulf of Tehuantepec, which, if you will look at the map, is a true and strong point for an exclusively American canal. In building the railroads and canals of which I speak, probably not less than $200,000,000 or $300,000,000, and perhaps much more, will be spent during the four years of Garfield's Administration. A part of this will be our own, but all of it, substantially, will be spent in the United States to buy tools, material, provisions and supplies of various kinds, and this vast sum will thus be a clear addition to our usual and present trade, and will, I believe, stimulate American industry to a wonderful degree. We are to have an era of immense and costly enterprises, some of them, perhaps, speculative, but all of them spending great sums in short periods, and spending them here. America has never yet known such a stimulous to industry and enterprise, of secure peace, general confidence and 3½ and 4 per cent. rate for money."

ONE of the curiosities of Arizona is an ancient copper mine on the east side of the Verde. By whom it was worked it would be hard to determine. Possibly by the Aztecs; more likely by the Apaches. This is more reasonable, as the mine has not been worked for the metal in the ore, but for the paint. Thers are now on the dump rich and easily worked carbonates, while every spot where high colored, soft material showed itself has been worked out. Several rock tools which have been found, with battered edges, and staines of ore on them, prove that implements of stone were used. They ran a tunnel into the ledge nine feet high and from six to eight feet wide. It is about twenty feet long. In places there are walls built, and the waste matter thrown behind them.

THE famine in Armenia is terrible. A correspondent of the London News writes that the population of Mardin is reduced to dispair by famine. Two thousand men attacked the houses of the wealthy inhabitants, and the Governor had great difficulty in dispersing them, although for that purpose he employed his troops. Fifty have been put in prison, and hundreds have fled from the town to avoid starvation. At Nisibin hundreds of persons are dying from dysentery, brought on by eating grass. In the district of Passau the people are living on grass. In the village of Kurdali, a Kurd buried alive his son, 12 years of age, as he had no food for him.

MEXICO.—A miner recently returned from Guaymas says: Here I met Bob Hatch, an Inyo county man, who had just returned from Guaymas. He reports that country the worst in the lot —no money, no work, and nothing to make it out of. They are principally Mexicans, and all are waiting for the railroad, believing they will make fortunes out it.

THE cause of the war between the Boers of South Africa and England is the aid and comfort which the latter have, from time to time given to the border savages who have raided the British settlements. The Boers gained by conquest the lands they hold now, but nevertheless odject to losing them in the same manner as they got them.

ORGANIZED.

The California statute mill or Legislature, was put in order for a 60 days, run on Monday last. Everything has to be run through and cleaned up in the period named, or it don't go; at least, the hands won't be paid for any longer time, whether they shut down then or not. All this is according to the new Constitution, so it can't be gainsaid.

The Republicans have full control in all departments of the mill. W. H. Parks, of Yuba, is Speaker or Boss, of the House, which, in a mill of this description, answers for the battery department. Wasson, of Inyo and Mono, is a leading lubricator in this department; his duty is to see that things go smooth, and that there is no swearing. Wm. Johnson, of Sacramento, is President, pro tem., and Boruck is Secretary of the Senate, which is supposed to be the refining department.

We are told that this Legislature is ably officered throughout, and composed of men who are there to work and propose to do it. The toughest job they have before them is the Debris question, which has already come up in three different bills. Then comes the Irrigation problem and re-districting the State, pursuant to the late census, and then the repealing of about all the silly, and unconstitutional sand-lot legislation of the last session. The enactment of a suitable and constitutional County Government bill will give the ablest a chance to exercise their brains.

The question of who is to be the next United States Senator has been settled in caucus in favor of Gen. John F. Miller, whose election takes place next Tuesday, his party having sixteen majority on joint ballot.

SOME CASH.

It has been figured out by the Bureau of the Mint that the mines of the United States have produced during the last seven years about $280,000,000 of gold and $271,500,000 of silver, an average production during that time of $40,000,000 of gold and $38,750,000 of silver per annum. About 95½ per cent. of the gold and 60¾ per cent. of the silver found its way to the mints and assay offices to be converted into coin or bars. The Director of the Mint, from a careful consideration of all the data at his command, estimates that the amount of domestic bullion used in the arts and manufactures during the last fiscal year was about five and one-half million dollars of silver, and that the total consumption in all forms was about ten million dollars in gold and five million dollars in silver.

COMMISSIONER RAUM hits the nail on the head when he says in his Report that the removal of the tax on patent medicines would cause a large increase in the consumption of many of those articles, which are, in fact, nothing more nor less than substitutes for alcoholic beverages of the very worst kind. Chloral and morphine enter largely into those "medicines," and instead of the tax being removed, it would be well for mankind, and especially for womankind, if it were increased to an almost prohibitory figure.

THE country is growing in population. The Census Commissioner estimates the total of all the States and Territories to be 50,152,559. The following table will indicate the rapidity of the increase:

First census, 1790	3,929,827
Second census, 1800	5,305,925
Third census, 1810	7,239,814
Fourth census 1820	9,654,596
Fifth census, 1830	12,866,020
Sixth census, 1840	17,063,355
Seventh census, 1850	23,191,874
Eighth census, 1860	31,443,322
Ninth census, 1870	38,558,344
Tenth census, 1880	50,152,559

"M. D.," writing to the New York Tribune, says: "Two or three grains of the permaganate of potassa, dropped into a goblet of water and used as a gargle, and a trifle swallowed occasionally, is worth more in curing sore throat and diphtheria than all the sulphur ever thrown out of Vesuvius."

THE value of the wheat and flour shipments from California during the year just closed, according to the Bulletin, amounts to $19,975,094. On the first day of this month there were no less than fifty ships at San Francisco to be loaded with wheat.

THE NEVADA SENATORSHIP.

It seems that Uncle Jimmy Fair is not to have a peaceful walk-over for the Nevada Senatorship after all. There is a Democratic dark horse all ready to take the track against Uncle Jeems. No one seems to know who this dark horse is, nor does any one seem to care who or what he is, since it is positively asserted that he will bound in with a cool million's worth of arguments to prove his eminent superiority for the place. A press correspondent says: "Those who claim to know who the dark horse is answer all queries with a series of knowing winks and nods, and refuse to divulge the name of the mysterious man who is supposed to have designs on the Senatorial toga. They claim that the job which has been put up is of a character which absolutely precludes any disclosures of names, and that if things can be fixed, there is yet a probability that just at the proper time the new candidate, a prominent Democrat, will sail in and give Uncle Jimmy a wrestle. It is believed that Sharon is at the bottom of a scheme to 'walk Fair's log,' and already Judge Seawell, Col. Ellis, and Kirkpatrick are talked of as the men likely to be put forward. It is conceded already that Sharon is behind the scenes with a good heavy sack, ready to sink Fair's chances if there is a ghost of a chance."

It seems that a number of Republican members, who had first agreed to support some Democrat against Fair, have since changed front, and it is now firmly believed these unfortunates have been "hoodood" by that same sack disorder that prevails at Carson worse than any other place north of Mexico. When a man gets hoodood in Carson he falls down, and becomes troubled with a sort of a tight-looseness, so that no man not an adept in the sack treatment can even guess what next the hoodood man will do. As symptoms of hoodoo were manifest during the very first day's session it may cost a million dollars, more or less, to subdue it and save Uncle Jimmy.

THE Scientific Press in commenting on the proposed reduction works at Carson, Nev., says:

We learn from the Carson Appeal that the ore reduction works which it is proposed to erect in Carson are not intended strictly for the treatment of smelting ores, but for the reduction of ores of every class and character which cannot be profitably or successfully handled in the districts in which they are contained. Carson has cheap wood and plenty of water, and will soon have cheap railroad communication with the outlying mining districts. The works ought to be a success, and they will be if put in charge of a practical man. Put them under the control of a scientific individual and they will be a failure. A scientific metallurgist has never yet made a success in Nevada, but practical men who have had experience in smelting, leaching, chlorination and amalgamation have never failed. Science is a grand thing in the abstract; but, as applied to mining and ore reduction, it is a wretched failure in practice. We advise the Carson people to send to Eureka for their smelter, to Colorado for their leacher, to Austin for their chlorinizer and to Virginia for their superintendent. But by all means let them give the Freiburgers a cold shoulder. The Freiburgers are some of them good miners; they know the constituents of ores and are competent mineral chemists, but they know as much about running mills and furnaces in this country as Bob Ingersoll knows about heaven.

This is all very well. The Eureka smelters no doubt understand how to handle and reduce the ores from that district. They have leanred the ores thoroughly, and know what combinations to make for the furnaces. But, put an Eureka smelter in a new district where there is an entirely different class of ores from those he has been familliar with, and the chances are that he will have trouble in making his first run; he must become familiar with the new ores before he can smelt them successfully. We don't go a cent on scientific smelters from Freiburg or any other German burg, but we do claim that a man to be a successful smelter must be an assayer and have some knowledge of the chemistry of ores.

It seems that the Republican managers were guilty of a forgery during the last campaign that was about as contemptible as the Morey business. There was published and circulated a spurious extract from a supposed pamphlet issued by the Cobden Club, in England, declaring that English manufactures could not survive unless the Democrats carried the American elections.

THE first number of the new Weekly Appeal, of Carson, made its appearance on the 29th ultimo. It is made up of the spicy daily, and is bound to prove a successful venture. It is a very handsome sheet, and one of the best edited papers in Nevada. The subscription price is $2 50 per year. Old residents of Ormsby county now located in this valley should send for it.

IN taking charge of the Homer Index, Messrs. Townsend & Everett, announce that they do so for the purpose of making a living and not simply for their health. May the Index and Homer district prosper.

PRUNING THE VINE.

The following appears in the Los Angeles Express, and being the views of one of the most experienced viniculturists in the State, is worth reproduction for the benefit of such of our own readers as are interested in grape culture, no matter how limited the scale. The writer, Don Mateo Keller, is too widely known to need special introduction. He says:

Editor Express—A pernicious system of pruning the vine short has been introduced into the State of California by the French which comes, no doubt, from their being accustomed to prune very small vines, as in Burgundy and Champagne, where they cultivate 40,000 [?] vines to the acre, a practice that does not at all apply to California vines which grow large and vigorous.

In pruning the vine it is desired to accomplish two objects, viz: To obtain for the current year as much fruit as the vine ought to bear and to produce vigorous canes for the next year's bearing.

The life of a vine is shortened in two ways: First, by short pruning; and, secondly, by overloading it. The pruning of the vine leads to the uniform experience that the shorter it is cut the more wood it will grow, and the longer the more fruit it will grow. It is a result of observation of most kinds of vines that those eyes which are furtherest from the trunk are more fruitiferous, and that the first two or three eyes nearest the trunk do not contain the embryos of much fruit. Even if the lower eyes produce fruit it is mostly small and late, and not so good of quality as that which is produced in the upper eyes of the cane.

Guyot asserts that the finest vines possess as much fruit and can bring forth as many grapes as the commonest qualities, but they do not bring fruit in the same place, and do not yield it under the same conditions of cutting. They have their finest embryos in the highest parts of the canes. The Muscat of Alexandria produces the best fruit when pruned with seven eyes; the Pinneaux are also pruned long, and the Gamays are pruned short. No general rule can be given for pruning, but it is said that it ought to be very short, and applied to many branches for vines that have large pith; long on a small number of branches that have the wood hard and dry. All the European vines are pruned on a long, strong cane for fruit, and a spur to correspond with it, located in the most convenient situation to bear new wood for the ensuing year, which must not be cut back. The skillful pruner will leave to each vine as many of each as its conditions warrant.

Now, therefore, as the Mission vine is still largely in cultivation, and is a vigorous grower, it ought to be pruned with long canes, with at least four or five eyes, and a corresponding number of weak canes, or spurs, cut to two eyes, located correctly to make new wood for the next year's crop, which will also bear fruit as usual. The Mission grape thus pruned, as well as most other varieties of vines, will yield at least one-third more grapes than they have borne by being crippled by short pruning.

All branches cut from the vine ought to be cut level with the stock, as fruit trees are pruned, in order that the wood may heal over the wound, to prevent dry wood projections that dry and rot, and by contact, rot the body of the vine, interrupting the circulation of the sap and causing premature death.

Pruning in Los Angeles county ought to be done in January and February, before the sap commences to flow. The practice is different in many parts of Europe, and in parts of this country, in order to protect vines against the inclemencies of the weather, which, I don't think, applies in a climate so mild and genial as that of Los Angeles.

Yours respectfully,

M. KELLER.

ONE day the difficulties of the railroad question will be solved by the people taking possession of the railroad tracks. With the roads in the hands of the government, every man could put his own locomotive on the track, just as now every man can put his own wagon on the turnpike or his vessel on the river or sea. The railroad barons are blind to the signs of the times. The people will not forever stand being robbed; and the worst way to reconcile them to the robbery is to tell them that they are are villains and Communists because they object to having the fruits of their labor confiscated by a handful of money kings.—Virginia Chronicle.

THE United States have had three national bankrupt laws: the first, passed in April, 1800, was repealed in December, 1808; the second, passed August, 1841, was declared unconstitutional and was repealed in March, 1848; the third, passed in March, 1869, was in force until September, 1878.

IT is reported that the stage from Wood river to Blackfoot, Idaho, got lost in the snow, and nothing had been heard of it or the six passengers for six days. The storms were very severe, and it is feared horses, driver and passengers have all perished.

BIG PAPERS. — The Sacramento Record-Union, San Francisco Chronicle and Scientific Press are each and severally deserving the highest praise for their big and really valuable holiday editions, and uniform excellence at all times.

THE enormity of stock speculation at the East may be estimated from the fact that $700,000,000 of new securities have been thrown into the stock market within less than a year.

THE cold weather continues throughout the Eastern States, although at some points it has slightly moderated. A young woman was frozen to death last Saturday in Cincinnati.

BEE-CULTURE.

THE HIVE.

The habitation of the honey-bee in its wild or undomesticated state is usually a cave in the rocks or a hollow tree. From the latter was derived the log-gum, which is merely that section of the tree in which the bees were found domiciled. In imitation of the leg-gum, and to contain the new swarms a simple square box was made, with a few sticks placed inside to support the combs. It is evident that the bee-keeper had no control over the swarm or its welfare in such a hive. Finally the necessity of examination and manipulation brought forth the movable-frame hive, which is now in use by all progressive bee-keepers. There are probably hundreds of different styles of frame-hives in use, but the simplest and least complicated is, as in many other cases, the best. This is, without a doubt, the Langstroth hive in its simplest form, which is merely a square box with loose or stationary bottom. The two sides, on which the frames hang, are either rabbited out to receive the shoulders of the frames or made lower than the end pieces, so that the frames rest directly on the upper edge of the sides, in which case two cleats, nailed on the outside, close the openings and at the same time serve as handles to lift the hives by. A simple cover of good, sound boards, cleated to prevent warping, and a little board for a door-step in front of the entrace, or an extension of the bottom board for the same purpose, complete the shell of the hive. The entrance should be three-eighths of an inch high and at least six inches wide. Some use an entrance the whole width of the hive. In cold weather or for small swarms the entrance should be contracted by blocks, pushed into the opening.

THE FRAMES

Are made of seven-eighths or one inch lumber, ripped into strips, three-eighths of an inch thick. The top-bar is generally made with a three-quarter inch shoulder or projection at the end, by which the frame is suspended in the hive. Many bee-keepers make the under side of the top-bar bevelling, to induce the bees to build the comb straight, but a small guide of wax answers the purpose as well, if not better; it is preferable to so much wood, and since comb foundation has come into use, the triangular comb-guide is generally discarded. The frames should hang about one and one-half inches from center to center, which will give ample space for the bees to pass between the combs. Thus a hive for eight frames should be twelve inches long; for ten, fifteen inches and for twelve frames eighteen inches long—inside. The space outside the frames should be three-eighths of an inch all round. If smaller the bees will glue the frames fast to the hive, and there is also danger of killing bees in manipulating the frames; whereas if the space is larger, the bees are apt to build comb between the frames and the hive. If everything is made right you can remove the frames almost as easily as you can take a volume from your bookshelf, without killing a bee or breaking a comb. It is hardly necessary to say that for convenience every frame and every hive should be made exactly alike, so that any part of a hive will fit its place in any other hive, and under no circumstances should more than one style or size be tolerated in the bee-yard.

THE CAP

Or upper hive is made exactly like the lower hive, but without bottom, and the frames come clear to the lower edge, to avoid a double space between the upper and lower set of frames. Where cleats are used on the lower hive, a pair of narrow cleats to correspond should be nailed on the lower edge of the cap. The same frame should fit both stories, and the same cover answers for both. For small or weak swarms a

DIVISION BOARD

Is used to contract the size of the hive. This is merely a board made to fit loosely in the hive, suspended like a frame, and coming within one-quarter or three-eights of an inch of the bottom board.

VENTILATION-HOLES.

Covered with wire-cloth are now generally discarded, as the bees usually glue them over anyhow. If the entranse is large enough, and the hive shaded during hot weather, the bees will get all the necessary ventilation through the entrance.

A cloth laid on top of the frames prevents the bees from gluing the cover fast, and stops all cracks if the cover should not fit snugly all around.

In conclusion I will say, that there is no patent on this style of hive or any part of it. Many farmers and bee-keepers have been duped into paying royalty to traveling patent-hive venders who pretended to have a patent on some part of any hive they came across, and threatened law-suit and heavy costs if the poor ignorant bee-keeper did not forthwith hand over a V. or X., as the case might be, for right to use the (pretended) patented feature of the hive. But since the advent of intelligent, wide-awake bee-journals these patent-sharpers find a precarious living. Still, there are some of them round yet, and it is well to keep a lookout for them. The most expeditious way of getting rid of one of that genus is generally to invite him out to look at your bees, then open the most vicious stock you have, and he will leave without even stopping to say "good by."

WM. MUTH-RASMUSSEN.

P. S. In my former article the word Apairist (printers error) should read Apiarist, which means "bee-keeper." Apiary is used both to designate the hives collectively viz: "my apiary consists of 25 hives;" and also the place where they are located, as: "Let us go out into the apiary."

W. M-R.

SNOOKS went home the other night afflicted with double vision. He sat for some time with his sleepy gaze riveted on Mrs. Snooks, and then complacently remarked: "Well, I hope t' holler 'f you two gals don't look 'nough alike to be twins."

IT is announced that negotiations are nearly completed for the consolidation of the Union Pacific Railroads.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

Relocations.

Since the 1st instant County Recorder Crough has had some work placing on record quite a number of relocation notices. In each instance the properties thus changing hands are quite well known, but the recorded notices do not state the old names of the claims. In all probability, next first day of January will find most of them in condition for another set of owners to take hold of and assume a mining proprietorship for the succeeding twelve months.

In the relocations in Swansea district it is understood that several of them cover claims acquired during the year by the Cerro Gordo M. Co., a New York organization formed by J. H. Ely and Dr. Cottrell, upon which no work has been done. Those upon which the assessment work has been done were of course untouched. Following is the list:

The Lake View, Slate Cañon, commencing at the south end of the Mollie mine and bounded on the east by the New York, by Reub. C. Speer.

The Cliff mine, by A. C. and W. B. Harvey.

The Gold Band, by David Rodgers, Frank Wemple and Thos. Ryan.

The Northern Light, by Bill McFee, Geo. H. Gregory and J. J. Stewart.

The Tough Nut, by D. Rodgers and Thos. Ryan.

The Last Chance, by John Lubken and Frank Wemple.

The Dexter, by Thos. Ryan and D. Rodgers.

WORK DONE.

Certificates and affidavits of assessment work done in the district have been placed on record:

On the Single Star, Dreadnaught, Warrior and Silver Eagle mines, by Thos. Moran and others.

On the Long John, by L. Lasky.

On the Flagstaff, by J. H. Dodge and Reub. Speer.

On the Coal Burner, by J. H. Hanger, J. H. Dodge and C. Meysan.

RELOCATIONS ELSEWHERE.

The North Union, on the east boundary of the Santa Maria and on the west boundary of the Union, by A. R. Conklin.

The Abalone, beginning at the northwest corner of the North Union, by A. R. Conklin.

The Toll Gate, beginning at southwest corner of Ventura mine, by John C. Irwin. The three foregoing are situate in Cerro Gordo District.

Russ District—The Janus, commencing on the north boundary of the Brown Monster mine, by A. W. Eibeshutz.

The Driskell, between Marble Cañon and the Big Pine wood road, by Jos. Driskell.

The Valley View, three-fourths of a mile south of the Cinderella, Deep Spring District, by John Chastine and Jos. Driskell.

The San Juan, situate in Tarrytown or Pine Mountain District, by Jos. Driskell and Alfred Jordan.

The Empire, in same district, near the old furnace on Wyman Creek, by S. P. Roberts.

CONCERNING A BRIDGE.—Citizens of this immediate vicinity should see to it that the necessity for rebuilding the Bend City bridge be properly presented to the Supervisors at the next regular meeting, with the view of securing an order to rebuild. Had justice been done the order would have been made two or three years ago. The losses occasioned by drowning horses, breakage of harness, wagons, etc., and hardships imposed on teamsters and others while fording the river would foot up to quite a sum, to say nothing of the extra cost of wood caused by the usual difficulties of the ford, which at times is not a ford at all. The bridge should be re built, let it cost what it may. Let a petition be presented accordingly, that the Board may have no excuse for ignoring the matter.

ARRESTED.—At Bishop Creek on Sunday last Deputy Sheriff Hollenbeck took into custody one Henry, alias Charles Baker, on a charge of stage robbery. Upon examination before Justice Sneden Baker was committed to the County Jail to await the action of the Superior Court, and in accordance was brought here on Tuesday night by Hollenbeck and Nate Mount. Baker was formerly associated with, or rather was employed by, the notorious gang of Panamint roughs. The evidence in the case is purely circumstantial, and the accused stoutly asserts his innocence. Whether or not he is identical with the "big man with the big gun" is a question of doubt with a great many.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.—The most pleasure giving and anxiously looked-for event in the lives of our little folks here is the Sunday School. To many, if not all of them, it is—everything. Its teachings, singings, bright papers, beautiful cards, and childish social interchange, etc., etc., will ever remain fresh and green in their memories, a standard of real pleasure never subsequently to be reached. A parent who will not cheerfully contribute a fair share toward maintaining such an institution ought not to be a parent. See the Superintendent's report and—"bear a hand," every one.

IS IT DEAD?—The mortality among Bodie newspapers has been quite fearful here of late. The Free Press was the only survivor a few weeks ago, but as we have neither seen nor heard of it in any manner for two or three weeks, we fear it, too, has succumbed to the no-money or parsimon(e)y epidemic. It was a newspaper without a peer—for timber claim notices.

NEW P. M.—James Mitchell of the new mercantile firm of McDonald & Mitchell, successors to J. N. Newlan at Big Pine, has received the appointment of Postmaster.

Letter from Sacramento—Legislative Matters and Prospects.

We take the liberty of publishing the following extracts from a letter from Assemblyman Wasson, which will be found of interest to our readers:

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 3.

DEAR ——: I got back from the South in time to help organize the Assembly. It is very plain that we have a vastly more useful Legislature over that of last year. The work of both parties was done in caucus this morning, and in one hour and a half after assembling according to law, Speaker, Speaker pro tem., Clerk and Sargeant-at-Arms were elected, and not half a dozen words of buncombe or spread-eagle indulged in. It shows that the State has improved on the first three years of political insanity. Carlyle said England's 30,000,000 were mostly fools; he would say our one million were mostly idiots, were he here and able—not being, I'll say it for him. It is a relief to see this body (the Assembly, at least) get off on its right foot so quickly. The Senators are all hold-overs, but it is not likely they will repeat the clap-trap of the last session. All hands seem to realize that solid and rapid work is required, and that there is but short time to do it in. Of course, the contest over the successorship to Booth may be sharp, but I don't think so so far as heard from.

The County Government bill will be re-enacted, with improvements and safeguards over that of last year. A town incorporation bill is incubated and will pass, for cities under 10,000 inhabitants. Several Constitutional amendments will be pressed. An irrigation bill will be attempted, and through my notes to the State Engineer, he will not omit Inyo county. But I doubt whether this generation will ever see a satisfactory general law under the present Constitution, unless all vested rights are appraised and condemned. So much for the outlook of the twenty-fourth session of law-makers.

There was much of interest and variety in the long trip I took into Arizona and New Mexico, going as far as Santa Fé, in all over 4,000 miles, much of it by buckboard and horseback, and rough enough at times to test the endurance of a salamander; especially the grub and cooking, both going and returning by largely different routes. The era of railroad building south is also creating an era of speculation second scarcely to that of '49, etc., and it will continue indefinitely or until the railroad to the City of Mexico connects with the Panama railroad.

Toombstone is the big mining district as yet, and it is big in ore developed, very accessible, easily mined and milled. If we set Inyo county over into those Territories there is no telling how much we could sell it for. But such is the way things go—by fits, starts, and in waves of excitement that no one need think of trying to make head against. Eastern capital has so far captured the whole southern country, and I doubt whether California influence can ever wholly retake any part of it. * *

I wish you would send in your suggestions as to law-making for local purposes, and at once. Committee work will begin soon and end as soon, in accordance with the shortness of the session. You remember the promise of the District Attorney in regard to this matter, etc. *

Yours, JOS. WASSON.

THE RACES AT BISHOP.—Up to date our special reporter at Bishop Creek has failed to send in his report of the races and general New Year festivities at that thriving burg, on account of which negligence his princely salary has been discontinued. The absence of these regular coin remittances will be deprecated by the stage robbers, but when resolved upon an important step we generally go ahead regardlessly. However, from a somewhat interested observer who was in attendance, we have learned the following: December 27—Match race one-fourth mile for $250 aside, between Field's mare Black Nell and Russell's bay mare Little Tricks. Won by Little Tricks.

December 30—Club race one-half mile for $100 purse. Entrances, Arab, Red Jacket, Elephant and Spotted Buck. Won by Barna Peeler's Arab.

December 21—Single dash of 600 yards, for purse of $100. Contested for by Russell's Brown Frank, Hutchison's Brown Abby, Horton's Steel Dust, Williams' Black Harry and Sharvey's "J. J." In this the horse with the initial-like name took the race by 18 inches. The five came out as "under a blanket"—Steel Dust second, Brown Frank third, Black Harry fourth and Brown Abby last.

January 1—Match race 300 yards for $200 aside between Bob. Russell's Little Tricks and Hank Lufkin's mare Coal Burner. Won by Little Tricks, "too easy."

Mile race, for Club purse of $150. Won by Horton's Calamity, over Russell's Red Jacket and Peeler's Arab.

The grand ball on New Year's eve is stated to have been a well conducted and most successful affair.

THE NEW ROUTE.—The stages of the Southern Line now leave this point at 5 o'clock A. M., arriving at Lone Pine at 7:30, and at Olancha at 12 M. Thence the route takes in Little Lake, Indian Wells, through Walker's Pass, and down the south fork of Kern River to Hot Springs, connecting at Kernville with the stages to Caliente on the railroad. The mail to Darwin is to be carried from Olancha; that to Cerro Gordo from Lone Pine. Wm. Hamilton and Supt. Taylor are expected at this end of the road soon, when we will give the regular time table for the whole route.

AN IMPROVEMENT.—Annexed to his present quarters, S. G. Sneden, Esq., of Bishop Creek, is building a commodious addition to serve as the new postoffice for Bishop Creek. A petition has been forwarded to the authorities asking that Bishop Creek be made a money-order office, which will doubtless be granted.

Superintendent's Report of Independence Sunday School Finances, Etc.

The attendence for the three months ending December 5, 1880, averaged about thirty per Sabbath. I have not the roll at hand, so cannot give the exact figures.

The receipts and expenditures for the year have been as follows:

Nov. 16, 1879, received	$19 10
At all other periods	10 10
Total receipts for the year	$29 20

The expenditures were as follows: November, 1879, three months' subscription to the following named Sunday School papers: Conqueror's Herald, Our Own, S. S. Paper, Royal Road and Gracious Words—20 copies of each at three cents per copy for the three months, amounting to $2 40; cards and tickets, $9; January, 1880, renewed subscriptions to the above named papers, 20 copies of each, at 11 cents per copy for the year, $8 80; 10 copies of Dew Drops, a weekly for the little ones, 22 cents per copy, $2 20; 20 copies of S. S. Scholar's Quarterly, at 9 cents per copy, $1 80; 4 copies Teacher's Quarterly, at 24 cents per copy, 96 cents; postal expenses, about 46 cents; tickets and cards in July last, $3. Total expenditures, $28 62, leaving 58 cents as the whole sum on hand.

Our school is out of debt, but out of supplies as well. We are not compelled to have so many copies of the Scholar's Quarterly, nor so many of the larger papers, but we need ten copies more of Dew Drops, and at least a few each of the other helps.

We ask the friends and patrons of the school to send in by the children their mites that we may renew our subscriptions for papers, etc., and give the little ones a good Sunday School for another year.

For the information of parents who have lately sent in money, I will state that we were not able to pay our entire paper bill at the beginning of the year, so $3 75 was paid quite recently. I have not given the date and amount in detail of each receipt and payment, as to do so would require more space than our good friends, the editors, might want to give.

All are invited to attend our Sunday School, which begins, at the school house, at half past one o'clock every Sunday afternoon.

MRS. EMMA WILLIS.

BOUND OVER FOR ASSAULT.—In Justice Sneden's Court, at Bishop Creek, a day or two ago, Hank Lufkin was held in the sum of $1,000 to answer before the Superior Court, on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. The papers in the case have not yet been filed with the County Clerk, but as near as can now be ascertained the circumstances were as follows: Lufkin has been stopping at Big Pine during the Winter, where his son attended the public school, taught by A. B. Hagerman. The boy, who is a man in stature, took occasion to throw an ink-stand at the teacher, and received a severe handling for his trouble. When Mr. Lufkin senior met Mr. Hagerman he plied a six-shooter over his head. Mr. H. swore out a complaint and the result so far has been as above stated.

THE BRIGADE.—It is high time that a Tar-Bucket Brigade was organized and started into business in this and neighboring localities. There are a number of miscreants, many of whom can be pointed out at any time, who make it a business of selling whiskey to Indians and white minors. It is for their benifit this Brigade should be organized. Drunken Indians are so commonly plentiful up in the vicinity of Camp Independence that schoool children do not feel safe in going to and from school; and for the same reason men hardly dare leave their families alone, especially after nightfall. Something must be done to check the operations of these persons who supply the Indians with whiskey, not only in this vicinity but at Lone Pine and other places.

ROAD OPEN.—Phil. Keough, Division Agent of the Northern Stage line, informs us to-day that passengers and the mail are now being taken to Carson on wheels, the snow having been so broken over the Race Track this side of Aurora, and melted elsewhere, that sleighs are not needed.

A TERRILLING accident occurred at the American Iron Works, in Pittsburg, on the 2d ult. While Robert Moore was at work at his rolls his catcher failed to sieze with his tongs a bar of white-hot iron which had been placed between the rolls. The iron twisted itself thrice around the roll, forming a "collar." The catcher struck the iron, when there flew off a piece in the shape of a ring with a stem 20 inches long running off at right angles to the circle. The band flew back and fell around Moore's head, resting on his shoulders. Quick as thought he grabbed the long stem with his tongs and the white-hot ring with his hand, and with steady nerve and gentle movement lifted the fiery thing from his shoulders. His face was badly burned and the flesh of his hand was cut to the bone. After the iron had cooled he put the ring over his head—it was but two inches larger in diameter than his head.

WE of the United States scarcely know what an epidemic is. The Governor General of Kharkoff, Russia, states that during the year 1879 7,000 inhabitants of that province died of diphtheria, and 5,500 during the first ten months of 1880. Typhus fever is increasing in South Russia. There are 300 cases now in the hospital at Odessa.

THE amendment to the constitution of Kansas, which has just been adopted by the people by a vote of 91,874 yeas to 84,037 nays, declares that the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors shall be forever prohibited in the State except for medical, scientific and mechanical purposes.

THE House of Commons is one of the best ventilated halls in the kingdom. However great the crowd or long the sitting, the air breathed is, with phenomenal exceptions, as fresh when the speaker leaves the chair as when he took it. The means by which this boon is secured are both elaborate and costly. The air is drawn in from over the river by an underground chamber in the South Square. It is sucked in by a number of fans worked by steam. It is next driven through mighty sprays of water, which not only cool and freshen it, but retain every evil odor or grain of dust. Thus clarified, the air is driven into an enclosed chamber that underlies the full length and breadth of the house. This chamber is crossed by iron galleries, on which rests, through summer nights, huge blocks of ice. Finally, the air passes into the house through the floor, which is composed of fine iron grating—a fact hidden from casual observation by the porous matting which covers it. In the roof of the house are apertures through which the heated air passes away by a flue that cunningly leads to a great furnace wherein the vitiated atmosphere is consumed. Thus a constant stream of air passes through the house, pleasantly feeding the lungs and making possible long speeches.

DURING the past week probably one hundred men have left the camp for other parts; some with the intention of returning in the early Spring, others with no intention at all. It is well for the town to be rid of the drones. The whiskey famine was very hard upon them. They could sleep in the brush and live without grub; but when it came down to total abstinence they lit out for Bodie.—Homer Index.

A GIRL at Dublin struck her croquet partner on the head with a mallet; brain fever set in and the young man nearly died. The girl was kept under arrest until his recovery, and when he got well she married him, and now he's sorry he didn't die.

A Happy Bird Family.

In Ithaca, N. Y., there lives a lady who has as many as one hundred canary birds in one room. Mrs. Ellis is the lady's name. The floor of the room is covered with nice clean sawdust, and there are two pretty trees, in the boughs of which the birds swing and sing and sing and swing until one might suppose that their musical little throats wear out. What is very interesting is that ninety-eight of the birds are the children or grandchildren of one pair. And such children! Some of them are as yellow as a ball of yellow zephyr; others are green, many black, a few nearly white, ank almost all are variegated. Mrs. Ellis knows every bird in the room, for every one of them has a name—Rob, Chick, Keet, Queet, Chewe, or some such name—and she can tell the exact age to a day, of every bird. The only door opening into room has a wire screen in the place of glass, so that the little fellows may have plenty of air, and in summer time a fire screen takes the place of the panes of glass. All around the room are little boxes or cages, with doors open and covers off, and in these the members of the family sleep, with heads under wing, all night. Perhaps Mrs. Ellis has the largest birdcage in the United States.

His Grandmother.

The editor of the Eureka Leader, who has been attending Moody and Sanky's revivals in San Francisco tells the following story:

Mr. Moody makes use of many anecdotes in his addresses, but, on the principle that every question has two sides, let me relate a little story which Mr. Moody will probably never use. He was speaking of the hereafter, and of the fate of those who died unquickened by the repentance of the sinner. He spoke feelingly of a dear grandmother who had passed away unconverted. "Although she was good and kind, and dearly loved by me, I fear she has met with the reward of all who die not owning Christ. I know she is in hell." At this juncture a young man sitting near the front arose and walked down the aisle toward the door. Mr. Moody said: "There is a man who is tired listening about Christ. He is going straight to hell." The young fellow, annoyed at being held up to public notice, turned and said in a quiet, clear voice, "Well, is there any message I can take to your grandmother, Mr. Moody?"

AS THERE is now so much talk about the misrepresentation of the Terry-Broderick duel, the Napa Regorter calls on Col. J. C. McKibben, second for Broderick, and Col. Jack Hays, Terry's second, to come out with the true statement of the affair. It would seem that this would be a simple act of justice both to Terry, to the memory of Broderick and to the public.

Allgemeine Deutsche Unterstuetzungs Gesellschaft.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 28, 1880.

Messrs. Harris & Rhine, Independence, Cal.: DEAR SIRS—The undersigned, President of the German Benevolent Society, begs leave to call your attention to this truly benevolent institution, founded in the early days of California, and being now in the 27th year of its existence. The Society was formed to carry out three objects viz.: to assist poor and worthy or deserving people by support, to find employment for those out of work, and to cure those who are stricken down with sickness. For the latter purpose the Society owns a magnificent Hospital, surrounded by extensive grounds, where all patients are under the charge of excellent physicians and a consulting board of the most eminent medical talent of this city. The Society has expended for hospital and grounds the sum of $188,895.

The object of this communication is to propose to you to act as agent for this Society, either personally or through one of your employees, suited for such position, for the purpose of enlisting new members.

The monthly fee is only one dollar and the initiation fee on becoming a member two dollars. Only healthy persons can become members, and only Germans or those who speak that language, also their wives and children. Any member who meets with sickness is treated in the hospital without any expense to him until he has been restored to health. All persons who are not members, or can not become such, not speaking the German language, are admitted for medical treatment in the hospital at as low terms as it is possible to make them.

In this city we have about 3,000 members, but throughout the interior only about 300. It is our aim to increase the number of members throughout the State to make the hospital as much as possible self-sustaining, to enable us to extend the charitable department in this benevolent institution. For the trifling sum of one dollar per month members have the best aid and care in the German Hospital.

Frequently sick people in the country are crippled for life by false treatment from incompetent doctors, or even brought to a premature death. Only too late do they find out that if they had become members they would have been restored to health, and their earnings of years would not have gone into the pockets of inexperienced doctors, as the hospital employs only the best physicians. If there are no earnings, the employers and the friends of the sick are generally called upon to pay for his support. All this can be avoided, if the employers would vigorously enforce the rule, now introduced in most of San Francisco's establishments, that every man employed should belong to a relief society in order that in case of sickness he might be well cared for and not be reduced to the rather humiliating necessity of asking aid from the purses of his employer and his friends.

Persons of all nations of the age of 50 years or over are admitted as pensioners for life by paying a certain sum to be agreed upon to the society. They receive a home at the hospital, first-class board, washing and attendance in in case of sickness, free of any expense.

To enable Germans and others who do not know of the existence of this institution, neither of the hospital nor its great advantages, to become members, I have addressed you the above, and hope that you will cheerfully accept the agency and do all in your power to further the interests of this society by enlisting new members, and recommending our hospital to those who may be compelled to seek medical aid.

Your Obedient Servant.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

THIS HONEY WAS REMOVED FROM THE comb by centrifugal force, with a machine made for the purpose. It is therefore virtually the same as honey in the comb, only you don't have to eat the bees-wax, which is indigestible and therefore disagrees with many persons. When first extracted the honey is liquid, but nearly all pure honey will candy or granulate in course of time, especially if exposed to the cold. Putting the cans in hot water for a short time will bring the honey to its fluid state without injury.

This Honey is put up in 10 pound cans, with patented screw tops, which renders it convenient for family use, and especially for the mines, to which it may be packed, even upside down, without leakage. A neat label on each can gives full directions.

Price, $1 75 per can, or 15 cents per lb, at the Apiary, if customers furnish their own receptacle. For sale at Harris & Rhine's, Independence, and at the Apiary, at Henry Fehrman's place, Camp Independence.

State Irrigation.

Wm. Ham. Hall, State Engineer, has submitted a report to the Governor in relation to the irrigation problem in this State, and which report shows that he has given the subject the attention its vast importance demands. He gives good reasons why it will not do for the State to take charge of the whole matter—dig and own the canals, water rights, and so on. After reviewing that and other proposed plans, and the difficulties in the way of their execution, he proposes the following as a remedy for existing unsatisfactory conditions:

That the State shall direct and control the diversion of water from the streams; insist upon its economical use; see that riparian proprietors are supplied with water for stock and domestic purposes, at least, if they cannot all come in for a share of the water for irrigation; see that all lands not naturally dependent upon a public source of supply get their share, as far as the supply will go, upon some reasonable terms; and see that sufficient water is left in navigable streams to satisfy the interest of commerce, at stated seasons, when most needed.

This the State can do by virtue of her police authority, and in my humble judgment she will be obliged to do it some day, and the sooner it is done the better for all concerned.

Before, however, she can exercise this authority, she must know definitely what interests she has to deal with—what water rights have accrued, and what is the nature of them—and there must be some general State plan of organization under which irrigation is to be carried on. There can be no satisfactory regulation of rights altogether undefined, and no settled condition of affairs until the irrigation interest is placed on a good business footing by a definition of present rights and an organization for future operations.

Hence, I propose that the State shall:

First—By the passage of a law entitled "An Act to define and regulate water rights:"

(1.) Institute proceeding to define for record the extent and nature of all existing water privileges.

(2.) Provide for a proper record of existing rights to water, and for the annual correction of the same to date.

(3.) Provide for the issue of water privileges in proportion to the supply of water in each stream, and designate by schedule the extent and order of each claim.

(4.) Supervise in a general way the distribution of water from the streams or natural sources of supply to those holding water privileges.

(5.) Establish a definite standard of measure for water used for agricultural and mining purposes, and prescribe the form and dimensions of measuring apparatus to be employed in dealing out water under different circumstances.

Second—By the passage of a law entitled "An Act to promote irrigation:"

(1.) Provide for the organization of irrigating districts, from time to time, according to the natural divisions of the land, as near as may be, in each instance.

(2.) Provide for the internal self-government of each such district by the residents thereof.

(3.) Provide for the allotment of permanent water privileges to such districts.

(4.) Provide for the condemnation of water rights for the public use, in the case of rights acquired to waters from public streams for lands within such districts.

(5.) Provide for the adjustment of riparian rights in each instance where a water privilege is granted to a regularly organized district, so that the riparian proprietors will be insured sufficient water for domestic and stock purposes, the district be held liable for its share of the expense of meeting this obligation, and the State undertake the adjustment.

(6.) Provide for the protection of river navigation by regulating the diversion of water from navigable rivers and their tributaries, so that in some certain periods the waters may be used for irrigation, and in some other periods they shall be allowed to flow in the streams for the benefit of commerce.

(7.) Provide for the total extinguishment of rights by condemnation, where unadjustable conflicts occur.

(8.) Carry on such observations as will detect the locality and cause or loss of water in each instance; conduct experiments with the view of discovering the most economical means of distributing and using in irrigation, which will prevent waste, insure good drainage, and guard against the unhealthful tendency of the careless and vicious use of water in irrigation.

The Way it Works.

The editor was sitting in his sanctum, when a man laboring under apparent excitement, walked in with the paper in his hand, and pointing to a paragraph, read: "The genial Colonel Mumblechock thinks of taking an Eastern journey soon. May he enjoy a pleasant trip is the wish of his many friends."

"Now, sir!" said the excited man, "I am Colonel Mumblechock, and I have called to inquire by what authority you make this use of my name in your paper?"

"First time I ever saw it," replied the editor, glancing at the item, "but I suppose it is all right. My local reporter is quite enterprising in his pursuit of news."

"But I never gave him permission to use my name in this manner," persisted the Colonel.

"Very likely," said the editor. "But you are going East aren't you?"

"Certainly."

"And you haven't any objections to your friends wishing you a pleasant trip?"

"That is all right, but I don't want my name in the paper, and in the future you will oblige me by leaving it out."

"Of course," said the editor, "if you desire it;" and the Colonel bowed himself stiffly out.

"John," said the editor to his office boy, "follow that man and see where he goes, and come back and report."

John did as he was requested, and shortly after he came back and reported that Colonel Mumblechock went to the counting-room and bought twenty-five papers, which, after marking something in them, he ordered put in wrappers, and was busy directing them.

Cincinnati is chock full of Colonel Mumblechocks. They profess to be highly indignant if their names appear in some trifling item, wonder how the reporter got hold of it, and bluster about terribly; yet they are secretly delighted at seeing their names in print, and invest heavily in papers to send to friends. The only way to really offend them is to not mention them at all.—Cin. Saturday Night.

How Irish Peasants Live.

The dens, misnamed cots, in which the peasantry of Galway and Mayo counties live are merely stone shelters; owing to the intense ignorance of the people they are not provided with any facilities for drainage, and are often incomparably filthy. The floors are of hard mud; it is rare to find more than one room in a hut, and only one story. Beds and bedding are the luxuries which the poorer tenants do not possess; old heaps of hay and straw are the couches on which the lovely brown-eyed, large-browed maidens of Connaught repose. The smoke from a peat fire in a common peasant's cabin spreads through the room, and you narrowly escape strangulation on your first visit. I have had this experience in Herzegovina, and consequently minded the smoke but little. How family decency is maintained in these dens is a mystery, and how the people manage to keep clean—for they look clean—is a puzzle. The pigs run in and out of the doors—and such wretched pigs! A North Carolino wild hog would be an aristocrat beside them! In dozens of these cabins sick people are to be found—sick people dependent either on the charity of their neighbors or on friends in America who send them small sums.—Dublin Letter.

THE reported war between the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fé roads is not likely to be much of a contest. The dispute arose over the right of way through Florita Pass, but as there is plenty of room through the pass for both roads, there is no probability of the blood-shed reported as "imminent." President Crocker, of the Southern Pacific, says that the eastern terminus of the road has been fixed at New Orleans. No permanent connection is to be made with the Atichison, Topeka and Santa Fé road, but one may be made with the Galveston and San Antonio road.

LANDLADY—"Lor' a mussy, Mr. Brown, what's the matter, sir?" Madder Brown (with lively demonstrations of delight)—"Glorious news—I'm going to be hung at last. Hooray!" But he only meant his picture was going to be hung at the Academy.

"ETIQUETTE" writes to us to inquire if in our opinion it would be proper for him to support a young lady if she was taken with a faint—even if he hadn't been introduced. Proper, young man, certainly—prop her by all means.

THE Southern Pacific Railroad has been decided to be exempt from taxation in Arizona for four years.

Our Metal Yield for the Past Year.

Wells, Fargo & Co.'s annual statement of precious metals produced in the States and Territories west of the Missouri River, including British Columbia, and the receipts in San Francisco by express from the west coast of Mexico, has been prepared by John J. Valentine, General Superintendent. The aggregate products are as follows: Gold, $33,522,182; Silver, $40,005,394; Lead, $5,742,390; Copper, $898,000. Total gross result $80,167,936. The total products are: California, $18,276,166; Nevada, $15,031,166; Oregon, $1,059,741; Montana, $3,822,279; Utah, $6,459,953; Colorado, $21,234,939; New Mexico, $711,200; Dakota, $4,123,081; Arizona, $4,472,471; Washington, $105,164; Idaho, $1,894,474; Mexico (west coast), $2,090,557; British Columbia, $844,867. In comparison with the productions of 1879, California shows an increase in Gold of $579,579 and a decrease in Silver of $360,873. Nevada shows a total falling off of $6,966,093; the yield from the Comstock being $5,312,592, as against $8,830,562 in 1879—a decrease of $3,517,970. The product of Eureka District is $4,639,025—a decrease of $1,220,236. Utah shows an increase of $982,074. Colorado's increase is $6,871,474, chiefly from Leadville District. Dakota's increase $914,094. Arizona's is simply marked as "notable." The total yield of precious metals of the same sections, from 1870 to 1880 inclusive, is given as $823,033,740. The exports of Silver during 1880 to Japan, China, India, the Straits, etc., have been as follows: From Southampton, $24,000,000; from Marseilles and Venice, $6,000,000; San Francisco, $4,700,000. Total $34,700,000, as against $46,000,000 from the same places in 1879.

A Boy Murderer.

In Massachusetts a boy named Pomeroy was convicted of murdering three children. While under sentence of death Mr. James T. Fields, of Boston, went to see him in his dungeon. "What kind of books did you read?" asked Mr. Fields. "Mostly one kind," was the reply, "mostly dime novels." "And what is the best book you have read?" "Well," he replied, "I like Buffalo Bill best. It's full of murders and pictures about murders." "And how do you feel after reading it?" "Oh, I feel as if I wanted to go and do the same." If we could take every one of our readers by the hand and look him and her in the eye, we would say, "Beware of bad books!" Yes; beware! They may not make you murderers, but they may murder your souls.—S. S. Visitor.

MRS. TILTON was asked the other day by a lady friend how she ever could have done so, and replied: "What could any woman have done under such circumstances? There were two men in the world in whom I had the most implicit confidence, to whom I looked for instruction, and in whom I believed as in my God. These men were my husband and my pastor. They both taught me daily the doctrine of free love, and I saw them continually practicing their teachings. They made me believe it was no wrong, and I did not so consider it at that time. But oh, if I were to tell the corruption that I have witnessed in Plymouth, your heart would sicken.

IN the Silver King mine in Arizona, says the Pinal Drill, nature presents the most fantastic and beautiful specimens of pure silver threads, cubes, tubes, little grottoes, caves and caverns. They are of all sizes, from a nut to a man's hand—white pure silver—and include monograms, diagrams, mathematical figures, landscapes, anything you can fancy. There are strings drawn as if the gnomes had had a silver festival. No work of art equals these natural productions in superb beauty, fineness and finish.

YOUNG MISTRESS (in utter dispair): "Why, Bridget, what have you done? Company expected any minute, and the cake burned to a crisp! It's of no use now. Throw it into the ash barrel." Bridget (with the utmost composure): "Shure, ma'am, I wudn't fret mesilf about the loikes o' that, it I wuz you. Jist give it to the donation party."

ONE night Uncle Harvey, keeper of a poor-house down in Maine, was aroused by the groans of one of the old men. "What is the matter?" he asked, "I'm dying, Uncle Harvey," said the old man. "I'm dying; go and get me a doughnut; I must have suthin' to pass away the time."

THERE was a fight imminent between two boys in Elm street, Monday evening. One of them darkly hinted that he was bigger than the other. The smaller, who is the son of a deacon, defiantly retorted: "I don't care if you're as big as a church debt; you can't scare me."

"DOCTOR, my daughter seems to be going blind and she's just getting ready for her wedding, too! Oh, dear me, what is to be done?" "Let her go right on with the wedding, madam, by all means. If anything can open her eyes marriage will."

GALVESTON is agitating the subject of a narrow guage coast railroad to Mexico, expecting to gain an enormous coast trade, and by intersecting the Santa Fé and Northern roads, to draw trade from as far north as Salt Lake.

WHILE digging a well in Queen Anne county, Md., some laborers found a peck of sharks' teeth thirty-six feet below the surface. Thirty-six feet below the surface seems about the right thing for land sharks.

POLITICAL DOINGS.

The Nevada Senate and Assembly, each in its own chamber, ballotted for United States Senator on Tuesday, with results as follows: House—Fair, 41 votes; Wren, 7. Senate—Wren, 14; Fair, 10. This settles the matter in Uncle Jimmy's favor. The joint convention and formal election was to take place on the following day.

On the same day the California Legislature took similar action, with these results: Senate—Gen. Miller, 27; W. T. Wallace, 10; Henry George, 2. Assembly—Miller, 42; Wallace, 34; C. T. Ryland, 1; C. P. Berry, 2. So Gen. Miller is to be our next Senator, to take Booth's place.

A warm factional contest is going on in the New York Legislature over the Senatorship. It is thought the Tammany men will vote with the anti-Conkling Republicans in order to defeat the curly haired Conkling, who is very cordially detested by a great many people besides Gov. Sprague. Conkling himself is not running.

The Republicans elect Ben. Harrison Senator from Indiana, John Sherman from Ohio, and Hale from Maine.

The vote at the late election in Maine has just been officially canvassed, by which it is declared that H. M. Plaisted (Fusion), having received a plurality of all the votes cast, is duly elected Governor. Whole number of votes, 137,802, divided as follows: Harris M. Plaisted, 73,713; Daniel F. Davis, 73,544; Joshua Nye, 309; W. A. Joy, 124 Harrison M. Plaisted, 57, and 55 scattering.

Blaine is to have a seat in Garfield's Cabinet. In order that the Legislature in his State may, during its present session, choose another Republican Senator in his place, and thereby forestall the appointment of a Democrat by the new Governor, Blaine is to resign his seat in the Senate.

CAPT. EADS has succeeded in getting valuable concessions from the Mexican Government for his proposed ship railway company. He will proceed at once to build the road, and have it running in four years, if the United States will guarantee a six per cent. dividend on $50,000,000. In consideration of the guarantee he proposes to transport all United States vessels of war across free for ninety-nine years. Furthermore, he proposes to make a practical test of his plan, as he did with his jetties, before binding the Government for a dollar. His road is to be built across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec.

OF the 92,000,000 acres of land in Montana, less than 12,000,000 have been surveyed, and of that amount only 1,600,000 have been entered. During the year ending November 30th last, the entire amount sold at the United States Land Office at Helena was 100,206 86-100 acres, and this is the largest amount taken during any year since 1872. The population of the Territory is now a little over 39,000.

FIFTY-FOUR claims were jumped in Bodie district on New Year's morning. Some had had $5,000 worth of labor and buildings done on them. Armed men are now in possession. This is done under the law that requires a certain amount of assessment work to be done before the end of the year. Many Mill Creek claims were taken in the same manner.

COZAD, the foot-racer who, it was reported, was shot dead for "throwing a $10,000-race" at Denver not long since, now rises to a privileged question, and, in a letter to the New York Clipper, says he is not dead at all, neither was he shot at, neither was there any row, though the race was run, but declared off by the referee. But may be Cozad is lying about it after all.

THE Truth, the New York paper which first gave publicity to the famous Morey letter, now acknowleges it was a forgery and writes a letter of apology to President-elect Garfield.

THE flaming comet of 1843, with a long tail, is reported by astronomers to be approaching the earth, and is already visible in Australasia.

THE Visalia Delta has suffered a fire and the Times an attachment. Six to one and half-a-dozen the other.

THE New Jersey people want to buy up the smelting ore which Carson wants for her proposed smelter.

THERE have been recently heavy falls of snow in Georgia, Louisiana and Texas.

THE Government is now issuing rations to the destitute Wallapai Indians in Arizona.

WHAT THEY PROPOSE.

As yet we have received no report of the proceedings of the State Teachers' Association recently held in San Francisco, but we understand from Superintendent Symmes that a resolution was introduced, discussed and carried to this effect: That the total apportionment of school moneys shall hereafter not exceed $350 a year to each school district, except such as have to exceed thirty school children, when a dollar or two a head extra is allowed for such excess. It is hardly necessary to state that Mr. Symmes opposed the resolution strenuously; it is safe to say that every other representative from the mining and outlying counties did the same thing; it is no less certain that the resolution was carried by the votes of high salaried Cow-County Superintendents—School Superintendents who receive from $400 to $1,500 a year for riding around at the public expense, and the sum of whose labors and time devoted exclusively to their duties would hardly equal one month of assiduous school teaching—those are the fellows who think teachers ought to work for less than Chinaman's wages. We will bet that those same fellows require a standard of qualification in teachers that can't be attained short of ten years of application. We will bet, too, that every one of those who voted for this reduction would support a bill to increase Superintendents' salaries. It should be borne in mind that this Convention was composed of County and City School Superintendents, with the State Superintendent thrown in. Also, that the majority of them were from cow counties where school census children average about six to each tax-payer.

Let us inquire what is the sense, justice or call for the proposed reduction? The sense of it is that in all counties situated like our own no schools can be maintained at all on public money; it is hardly possible to do it under the present allowance of $500 (less $50 library money) per district. After paying for fuel, repairs, stationery, etc., and deducting 10 per cent. library money, there would remain of the $350 about $275 wherewith to pay a teacher for six months' services—a little less than $46 per month, out of which the teacher must pay for his board, lodging, washing, etc. Now here is a problem we would like some of the most intelligent of those Cow County Superintendents to figure on, it being understood that they can take their own time to solve it, referring to text books if they want to: Suppose a teacher receives $46 a month for six months, out of which he pays $10 per week for board and lodging (at hotels it would be from $12 to $14), six bits per week for washing, and had to buy a $14-suit of clothes including a white shirt for examination day, how long would it take him to earn enough above necessary expenditures to establish himself in a two-goat dairy business when buttermilk would occasionally sell for ten cents a gallon? Whenever they can figure this out, all, except the very obtuse, can see exactly how far the sum they propose to allow us will go toward maintaining a school in this and many other counties in this State. We have purposely discarded fractions in the above problem so as to bring it within the powers of the Superintendents who voted for the reduction, but if it is still too much for them to individually cipher out, we will not object to have them collectively tackle it at the next annual Convention. A correct understanding of the issue involved is of vital importance to every public school outside of the most densely populated cow counties.

Next as to the justice—It is a fact that this and Mono and some half a dozen other small, or sparsely populated counties, actually pay more into the State School Fund than they receive in return, even now at $500 per district. The reason for this is that the proportion of tax payers and taxable property to census school children is much greater than in those cow counties, while the expense of maintaining schools is in the inverse ratio, being double as much in these outside as in the thickly populated sections of the State, where everything except salaries of County Superintendents, comes so much cheaper. Yet those economists propose a law that, while taking an undue proportion of our money, will deprive us of public schools in toto. And it costs the school fund not less than $50 a head on the average to transport those Cow County Superintendents to (and from) San Francisco to give them a chance to propose this unjust thing!

As for the necessity of such retrenchment—there is none. There is as much money now available for educational purposes as there has ever been, while the spirit of the age is to furnish more, or at least a sufficiency to maintain our public school system at its highest standard; but the very men who should so uphold it are the first and only ones to propose pulling it down by allowing smaller pay to educators than would command the services of a third grade scullion.

We cannot too strongly urge upon Representative Wasson, and every Representative friendly to our school system, to see to it that the school allowance is not reduced so much as one cent. The schools would not suffer if there was not a Cow County Superintendent in existence, but capable teachers are a necessity—and such cannot be had for mere board and lodging.

PRACTICAL MINING.

A correspondent of the New York Mining Record makes the following sensible remarks about practical miners:

There is a class who derive all their knowledge from books, an insight of which, through this medium, written by thorough, practical men (the latter, alas! how few!) is better than total ignorance. But I pity the man devoid of the practical, when he has to confront nature face to face, and I also pity the party who may have sent him, if they rely on his opinion. I care not if he graduated from all the schools of mining on earth.

Mining is an art, and nature's laboratory is the place to study it. One year or two will not suffice, but long years of close observation, toil and study. If a vein does not have a course east and west, or north and south, according to a certain locality in which you were raised, do not reject it on that account, as is frequently done; that does not demonstrate the fact of non-productiveness. There is a peculiar characteristic favorable for certain minerals, whether found in vein or deposit, or whatever course, an indescribable resemblance accompanying each mineral. Gold, silver, copper, iron and in fact the ores of all the metals, have each their own peculiarities; hence the impossibility of describing or picturing it on paper, so as to convey a thorough knowledge of the same; therefore, a report or an opinion of a practical miner, however plain the language, should be held in preference, of more value than those who give their geonostic reports mostly in Latin and Greek. Not that I would disparage those languages; far from it; but while we are studying the one, we are neglecting the other, which is the most essential; for we live in a universe of things, not words; and the knowledge of things is of more importance than the knowledge of words. The inquisitive mind asks the cause of so many excavations in all mining regions, and no profits ever realized therefrom.

Experience reluctantly replies: Ignorance. Mines are wrought where there was not a shadow of a chance for reward. Mines abandoned which ought to be paying dividends regularly; labor wasted; money squandered; the region disgraced; parties disgusted, all because of incompetency. I would love to see mining fixed on the basis it deserves. Practical presidents, practical superintendents and bosses. Gambling, swindling, salting, etc., etc., would become the reminiscence of other days; mining would cease to be a lottery, and all things would work in harmony for the country's good.

BEE-CULTURE.

NO. III—THE PRODUCTS OF THE HIVE.

Naturalists tell us that many plants are dependent on insects for the fructification of their flowers. Certain plants bear only male, while others of the same class have only female flowers, for instance the willows. Other plants, as the corn, have the two sexes placed on separate parts of the same individual. Most of the flowers contain, however, both the male and female elements; but to avoid too close breeding, and to secure a healthy and vigorous fruit, it is necessary that one flower should be fructified by the pollen from another one. The Creator has therefore wisely placed the nectar in the flowers, that the insects in search of it might thus unconsciously accomplish the above named object, for in diving down for the nectar some of the pollen will adhere to the insect, and is thus carried to the next flower; and as the bees, for instance, always work on one kind of flowers at a time, no mistake will be made.

HONEY.

The nectar, contained in the flowers, is a thin liquid, like sweetened water. Take a comb of new honey and turn it on its side, and this thin honey will run out by its own weight. The bee carries the nectar in a honey-sack, which occupies the frontal half-part of the abdomen. Arriving at the hive he disgorges it into a cell, or oftener into the mouth of one of the younger bees, who then deposits it. Whether the nectar undergoes any chemical change in the bee's honey-sack, is a disputed question. Only a little nectar is placed at the time in each cell, that it may be evaporated before more is put over it, and not until it is fully evaporated can it be called honey proper. When the cell is nearly full the bees commence to make a rim of wax, which is gradually enlarged, until, when the honey is fully ripe, the opening is closed air-tight.

HONEY-DEW

Is also at times a great resource for the bees. Of this there are several kinds. One is produced by plant-lice, or Aphides, who squirt out tiny drops from two small tubes on top of the back. Another kind, lately observed, comes from a small scale-bug, who projects it from two valves on the back. Some claim that honey-dew is exuded from the leaves of certain plants, and others, that it is evaporated and condensed during the night, like common dew, but I believe there are no established facts to confirm this theory. I have observed the sugar or granulated honey on the cane in this locality, and at the same time seen the plant-lice, which produced it. As many of these little insects take wing at certain hours of the day, it is not so astonishing that the honey-dew should be scattered over a wide area.

WAX

Is secreted by the bees from six glands on the underside of the abdomen, where it appears in tiny, white scales, not unlike snow-flakes. The bees consume considerable honey for this purpose, and it has been estimated that it requires from fifteen to twenty-five pounds of honey to produce one pound of wax. Hence the great saving to the bee-keeper in being able to remove the honey from the comb without destroying the latter.

POLLEN,

Or bee-bread, is the fructifying dust of the flowers. The bees carry it in a cavity on the hind legs, called the pollen-basket, and use large quantities of this substance, principally for feeding the young. The pollen of different plants is of different colors, and a bee never visits flowers of different species at the same time, but always confines himself to one kind until he has got a load. The pollen is deposited in the cells like the honey, and when a cell is nearly full a little honey is placed on top to keep it from being affected by the atmosphere.

PROPOLIS,

Or bee-glue, is a resinous substance gathered from the buds and knots of certain plants. It is used to close up cracks in the hive, to fill any opening not large enough for a bee to pass through, to smooth over rough surfaces, to fasten and strengthen the combs and to cover anything offensive which the bees are unable to remove. I have seen lizzards, killed by the bees in the hive, covered by this bee-glue to prevent putrefaction, and several cases have been related of mice, treated in the same manner.

To remove propolis from the fingers use lard, benzine or alcohol; then wash with soap.

THE British Government has over 30,000 soldiers in Ireland and more are going to the unhappy island. Coercion, if now adopted, will be a more serious matter than in former efforts of the kind. The Irish Land League, as at present constituted, is the strongest body of the kind the old world has seen since the days of the French Ligue, when the political preachers nullified the Government and ruled France with blood and iron. The Irish Land League has left the Government no alternatives save to insist upon and effect a sweeping change in the system of land tenure throughout the United Kingdom, or to adopt the Duke of Wellington's prescription for the old Chartists and wipe the movement out in blood,

MATTERS AT LEADVILLE.

The following letter from ex-Sheriff Elder to C. D. Begole, of Lone Pine, will doubtless be of interest to many of our readers:

LEADVILLE, COL., Dec. 29, 1881.

C. BEGOLE, ESQ.—Dear sir: I promised to write of the country I was in during the past Summer prospecting. I was over a good portion of the Ute Reservation from the White River Reservation west to the Muddy river near the Utah line; but, to all appearances, there is but little hope of ever finding very promising mines in that portion of the Reservation over which there has been so much fuss and trouble. The western part is a continuous body of sand rock with no hope of mineral. At White river, where Agent Meeker was killed, we looked for placer diggings, and found all the blow about the immense gold fields to be gammon, so we returned to Ruby and Gothic, well satisfied to give the Ute Reservation the go by.

The country through which we passed is the boss for stock—grass and water in great abundance, and some timber. In fact all of the mountainous part of the Gunnison country is splendid for grass for four months in the year, say from June to September. The Winters are from October to May. A portion of the San Juan country is on the Reservation, but there is so much snow on most of it the Indians do not bother prospectors. These mountains are the bosses for snow and water. Mineral is found in nearly all the high ranges, and it would seem that they could not be worked, but the Yankees work them all the same.

Yesterday and to-day have been fearful days, the snow coming from the northwest. Hull, formerly of Hull & Barbour, has a faro game here, and is doing well. I do not know of any others here from the West Coast, save a few thieves such as ———. The altitude is so great here, it is hard to regain strength; it is a big job for me to walk a mile. Frank Bradman, formerly an owner and locator of the Lookout mines, was here eight days since. He says he has the boss mine about sixty miles from here, down on the South Park R. R. He talks of building a smelter all to himself.

I think there will be a great deal of of mining done here next Summer. Since I came, eleven smelting companies have failed, and the works torn down. The reason why they fail is this: A furnace of the size of such as you have in Inyo cannot compete with companies that work from five to ten of the same size. Some furnace companies work 250 tons of ore per day, at rates as follows: Lead ores that carry from 30 to 50 per cent., $13, working charges; other ores, from $18 to $23. Fuel costs: 8 to 13 cents per bushel for charcoal; $20 to $23 per ton for coke. Labor is from $2 50 to $3 per day. At present 28 stacks are in blast, smelting about 765 tons of ore per day. There are also three amalgamating mills of 20 stamps each and one of 10 stamps. All have all they can do at present, yet I think by another year the smelters will find it difficult to get ore. Some of the best mines are gone.

There is not now, and never was, any one mine here as good as the Union at Cerro Gordo was. In all my wanderings and prospectings, I say it. If I could only find another Cerro Gordo!—for accessibility and all, it was boss. Here it is difficult at most of them on account of the snow. It will be a long time before I find as many good fellows as those were in Inyo—a class of men among whom I always felt at home. And it has been my hope to again have a home among them. Will be glad to hear from you and all my old friends.

Yours, etc. A. B. ELDER.

MODEL MANAGEMENT.—Prof. L. E. Holden says: "I have recently visited the Atlantic Mine, on Lake Superior, a mine which produces 600 tons of ore per day, the average assays of which during the past year was a fraction less tahn 1 per cent. of native copper. Yet this mine paid, over and above expenses for mining, stamping, jigging, washing and setting, over $80,000 in dividends. All of the ore taken from this mine is blasting rock, very hard to drill and crush. Yet so perfect is the management in mining, handling and concentrating, even this low-grade ore pays the owners of the mine fair returns on their investment. It will be seen that 1 per cent. of copper would be only 20 pounds to the ton. The average price of copper sold in the Boston market, after paying for refining and freighting, is about 16 cents per pound. The value of that copper at the mine, before refining is about 12 cents per pound. This would give $2 50 per ton from the ore.—Chicago Mining Record.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

The State Line Mine.

The Gold Mountain county, after lying aparently quiescent for a number of years, is just now looming into considerable prominence, on account of the extensive operations on the old State Line mine by a New York and Nevada Company. From T. F. A. Connelly, who has just returned from Gold Mountain, we learn the following interesting points:

The mine is located in Nevada, about seven miles from the eastern boundary line of this State, and is situated near the dividing line between Esmeralda and Nye counties, Nev. The route from Independence is via Big Pine and Deep Spring Valley, thence to Lida Valley and Gold Mountain—a distance of 115 miles. On an air line the State Line mine is a little north of east about fifty miles distant from Independence. If Gold Mountain is to have a boom, and a thriving mining town should grow up there—of which there seems but little doubt—we would urge our business men to investigate the practicability of building a road from the head of Mazurka Cañon to that point.

About 150 men are now in the camp, some of them engaged in laying out a town, though a large majority are simply waiting for the company to commence active operations. But little work is being done at the present time, except grading for the mills. Some of the machinery is already on the ground, but it will probably be two months before enough has arrived, together with lumber, to commence building.

Two forty-stamp mills will be erected, on the same site. Water will be brought a distance of about 13 miles, the Company having ordered 65,000 feet of 6-inch iron pipe for that purpose. The cost of these works will be about $80,000. Mr. J. M. Taylor is acting as Manager for the Company, and Dr. Garvin as Superintendent. The Company is said to have been organized in New York city, and over $500,000 will be expended before any returns are expected. The round sum of $100,000 was paid for the mine by the present owners.

THE STATE LINE LEDGE

Is in a granite formation, and shows huge quartz croppings for a distance of about 1,000 feet. Five shafts have been sunk on the vein, to a depth varying from fifteen to eighty feet. The ledge in the bottom of these shafts shows an average width of eleven feet. The ore is a healthy-looking, whitish quartz, streaked and spotted with iron oxide. The gold can be seen in some of the samples brought in, and probably a large percentage of that metal is in a free condition. Assays of the ore vary from $10 to $100 a ton, and the average is presumed to be about $30. According to reported measurements there is now nearly $2,000,000 worth of ore in sight in the mine, and there is every reason to believe that further development will show almost inexhaustible supplies for the mill.

A NEW DISCOVERY.—On the east side of Mazurka Cañon, and directly opposite Independence, there is an immense ledge cropping out, running in a northerly and southerly direction. This ledge is in plain sight from town, and has been traveled over by prospectors times without number. The ledge lies between limestone and granite, and crops out for a distance of three miles, showing dark red matter colored by iron oxide. Messrs. Woodhull & Phillips, having long been satisfied that this was the croppings of argentiferous lead ores, lately made a careful examination of the ground, and they have been rewarded by finding the existence of large ore bodies near the surface. A number of samples have been assayed, with the following result:

No. 1—Silver,	$28 28....	Gold,	$3 00
" 2— "	41 47....	"	5 00
" 3— "	78 51....	"	5 40
" 4— "	91 40....	"	6 67

An average of 48 per cent. lead was also found. Six claims have been located, under the following names: Hudson, Boss, Phœnix, America, Scottish Chiefs and Mother Lode. But little prospecting has been done; however, enough is shown to prove that there is inexhaustible quantities of smelting ore under the croppings of this big ledge. In view of a proposed enterprise now organizing to operate in Mazurka Cañon, this is an important and valuable discovery.

SCHOOL MONEY.—On the 12th instant County Superintendent Symmes made the following apportionment of school funds:

Bishop Creek	$525 02
Big Pine	262 51
Cerro Gordo	———
Darwin	262 51
Irving	262 51
Independence	262 51
Lone Pine	262 51
Milton	262 51
Round Valley	262 50
Union	262 50
Total	$2,625 08

CATTLE SOLD.—All the principal bands of cattle in the valley have recently been sold, leaving the plains and fields more depleted of stock, probably, than at any time since the Indian troubles. It is stated that there are not two bands amounting to more than 200 each now left. At Big Pine, Campbell, McMurry and Gregg have sold out; at Bishop Creek, also, the bands of Love, Gill, Hutchison, Laird and others have been sold. Messrs. Anderson & Sanders, of Kern county, have been the purchasers of about 1,200 head, at prices ranging from $11 to $14.

AT HOME.—Nathan Rhine, Esq., returned on Tuesday last from his extended visit to San Francisco, and is now pursuing the even tenor of his way behind the bank counter.

SACRAMENTO LETTER.

Notes from Mr. Wasson—The Great Irrigation Problem, Etc.

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 8.

DEAR ———: Inclosed is an appendix to Engineer Hall's report of 1880, which might be worth publishing in full, owing to the importance of the subject. You will see he hints at certain bills or measures whereby the irrigation business may be inaugurated, and I was told by some one yesterday that the bills are already drawn up. One of the men in his office admitted as much to me yesterday—Hall not being in when I called. Deep down, of course, it is hard to say who has suggested or fathered the business, but as Gov. Perkins talks freely on the subject, both officially and otherwise, I guess there is more than one finger in the pie. It matters not what the motive anywhere may be, so the work is started at all. Get the entering wedge well in and the State will not back out, but go on indefinitely. The more I see of this Legislature, the more I feel it is going to be one of the most thoughtful, hard-working bodies in the history of such business. Parks makes a Speaker along side of whom Cowdery was a child. He is old "Biz" himself, and all hands seem to take the cue from him. The Democrats are not the least captious, but fall right in and accept the situation and go to work. The U. S. Senatorship pest is out of the way, all the committees are appointed and the question of the lowest clerkship settled. It is very gratifying, considering the extreme shortness of the session, and that it is all a bore at best.

There will be county and town government bills enough—too many already introduced—but the committees must urge them. The apportionment bills are numerous, and not such as suit me respecting our side of the mountains. You don't want Inyo tacked on to Tulare for Assembly, nor will Mono care to join Mariposa by the Bloody Cañon trail. Better Tuolumne and Mono and Inyo and San Bernardino, but I think they are as near right now as can be had. It requires a long time for a whole people to get anything right for certain. They have been over 100 years trying to perfect the U. S. Electoral College, and it is no nearer perfect than at first. Such are partisan politics and damphoolism. The present Legislature will be dull, plodding and fairly successful. That is my conclusion. In haste,

JOS. WASSON.

Those Relocations.

LONE PINE, Jan. 12.

MESSRS. EDITORS—Mistake in your last publication, the 8th instant, regarding relocations made in Swansea District. The Cerro Gordo Mining Company of New York, the Cottrell and Ely property, has not been touched or relocated by anybody. Our work has all been done promptly, according to law in every respect. Some new locations have been made, so I understand, in the district and neighborhood of the Company's property, but none that interferes. Somebody little off, I guess.

Yours, truly, J. H. ELY.

If our informants and the county records of the 1st of January are "off," we are most sincerely glad of it. THE INDEPENDENT is earnestly opposed to any action whatever interfering with the progress of eastern companies.

THE BRIDGE QUESTION.—A petition to the Board of Supervisors praying for the reconstruction of the Bend City bridge is being circulated and signed by all our business men and pretty much every one else. In the Winter of 1872, out of the proceeds of the sale of $40,000 Inyo county bonds, the Court House was built and three bridges placed across the river, at Lone Pine, Bend City and Big Pine. Towards paying for the bridges, an act was passed by the Legislature of '73-4 authorizing a special tax to the amount of $15,000. The county also purchased the bridge at Bishop, and for several years expended the principal part of the general road fund in keeping it approachable and in repair. About eighteen months ago the Lone Pine bridge was destroyed by fire, necessitating a heavy expense in rebuilding, which was ordered by the Board without question. The point is that this middle section has borne its portion of the general expense without a proportionate local benefit, for the reason that a turn in the river, a year or two afterward, left the Bend City bridge high and dry on the bank, in which useless if not ridiculous position it has been allowed to remain ever since. It is 50 miles between the existing bridges. At times the river is unfordable, and at all seasons the work of crossing is dangerous and expensive—so much so that every cord of wood burned here in town costs the consumer an additional dollar. If reports and indications are in anywise reliable, many of the important mining interest across the river will become the scene of active operations, provided capitalists are not frightened off by the attitude of a county too poor to put a necessary bridge on a public road. The road leading for twelve miles up Mazurka Cañon is the most central and one of the best natural passes to the summit of the Inyos in the entire range. Eventually, private enterprise will build roads along the summit to connect with Beveridge District and down to Waucoba, and down the sides of an eastern spur of the mountains to Lida, Gold Mountain and future points on the Carson & Colorado Railroad.

SALE OF ORE.—The ore now on the dump of the Ygnacio mine at Cerro Gordo has been sold to the Owens Lake Mill and Mining Co., and the work of sacking and hauling the ore to the new mill at Keeler City will commence in a few days. We presume the mill will start up in a short time and make its first run on Ygnacio ore.

MASONIC MEETING.—The stated meeting of Inyo Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for January will be held at the hall to-night.

CURED.—A note from Dr. Colleau informs us that Jeff. Williams, the man who was taken with the small-pox in Lone Pine, left on Sunday last for his home in Tehachepi, in good health. That the patient has recovered and the dread contagion not allowed to spread speaks well for the Doctor, as it is gratifying to the public.

MAMMOTH.—A number or two of the Mammoth City Herald has come to hand, informing the outside world that that region has received about two mails in three months. The storm of the past two or three days will be apt to close them up again for a while.

HERE.—C. McVicar, the popular watch and clock doctor of Bishop Creek, is in town to-day upon his first visit to Independence. He has taken contracts to repair and regulate about a cart load of watches, worth on the average fifteen cents a bushel.

INDIAN KILLED.—A son of Chief Tecopa, out at Tecopa, or Resting Springs, in the southeastern corner of this county, shot and killed another Indian the other day. Cause—Emotional insanity, complicated with tarantula juice.

RAIN.—Since 5:30 this morning it has been raining as it raineth upon ye Webfoot people; and it looks as if it was going to keep on doing it indefinitely.

WARRANTS.—See the official list of old county warrants payable.

HEAVY MINE PIPE ORDER.—H. A. Rogers, one of our prominent mine machinery supply men in this city, has recently filled an order for over 65,000 feet of six-inch spiral hydraulic pipe, manufactured by the Abendroth & Root Manufacturing Company. The pipe is fitted with their new sleeve and nipple joint; is sixteen gauge and tested to 400 pounds per square inch. The State Line Mining Company of Nevada are the purchasers. We are informed that this pipe has a peculiar coating of asphalt and coal tar, which renders it impervious to the action of atmosphere and water as well as to the natural salts of the ground. This should arrest the attention of mine superintendents, as it is a matter of great importance.—N. Y. Mining Record.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Allgemeine Deutsche Unterstuetzungs Gesellschaft.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 28, 1880.

Messrs. Harris & Rhine, Independence, Cal.: DEAR SIRS—The undersigned, President of the German Benevolent Society, begs leave to call your attention to this truly benevolent institution, founded in the early days of California, and being now in the 27th year of its existence. The Society was formed to carry out three objects viz.: to assist poor and worthy or deserving people by support, to find employment for those out of work, and to cure those who are stricken down with sickness. For the latter purpose the Society owns a magnificent Hospital, surrounded by extensive grounds, where all patients are under the charge of excellent physicians and a consulting board of the most eminent medical talent of this city. The Society has expended for hospital and grounds the sum of $188,895.

The object of this communication is to propose to you to act as agent for this Society, either personally or through one of your employees, suited for such position, for the purpose of enlisting new members.

The monthly fee is only one dollar and the initiation fee on becoming a member two dollars. Only healthy persons can become members, and only Germans or those who speak that language, also their wives and children. Any member who meets with sickness is treated in the hospital without any expense to him until he has been restored to health. All persons who are not members, or can not become such, not speaking the German language, are admitted for medical treatment in the hospital at as low terms as it is possible to make them.

In this city we have about 3,000 members, but throughout the interior only about 300. It is our aim to increase the number of members throughout the State to make the hospital as much as possible self-sustaining, to enable us to extend the charitable department in this benevolent institution. For the trifling sum of one dollar per month members have the best aid and care in the German Hospital.

Frequently sick people in the country are crippled for life by false treatment from incompetent doctors, or even brought to a premature death. Only too late do they find out that if they had become members they would have been restored to health, and their earnings of years would not have gone into the pockets of inexperienced doctors, as the hospital employs only the best physicians. If there are no earnings, the employers and the friends of the sick are generally called upon to pay for his support. All this can be avoided, if the employers would vigorously enforce the rule, now introduced in most of San Francisco's establishments, that every man employed should belong to a relief society in order that in case of sickness he might be well cared for and not be reduced to the rather humiliating necessity of asking aid from the purses of his employer and his friends.

Persons of all nations of the age of 50 years or over are admitted as pensioners for life by paying a certain sum to be agreed upon to the society. They receive a home at the hospital, first-class board, washing and attendance in in case of sickness, free of any expense.

To enable Germans and others who do not know of the existence of this institution, neither of the hospital nor its great advantages, to become members, I have addressed you the above, and hope that you will [illegible]erfully accept the agency and do all in your [illegible]ower to further the interests of this society by enlisting new members, and recommending our hospital to those who may be compelled to seek medical aid.

Your Obedient Servant,

JULS. BANDMANN,

President G. G. B. S.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

THIS HONEY WAS REMOVED FROM THE comb by centrifugal force, with a machine made for the purpose. It is therefore virtually the same as honey in the comb, only you don't have to eat the bees wax, which is indigestible and therefore disagrees with many persons. When first extracted the honey is liquid, but nearly all pure honey will candy or granulate in course of time, especially if exposed to the cold. Putting the cans in hot water for a short time will bring the honey to its fluid state without injury.

This Honey is put up in 10 pound cans, with patented screw tops, which renders it convenient for family use, and especially for the mines, to which it may be packed, even upside down, without leakage. A neat label on each can gives full directions.

Price, $1 75 per can, or 15 cents per ℔ at the Apiary, if customers furnish their own receptacle. For sale at Harris & Rhine's, Independence, and at the Apiary, at Henry Fehrman's place, Camp Independence.

BEE-CULTURE.—NO. IV.

THE COMBS.

As the hive is the house of the honey-bees, so the combs constitute their furniture. When a natural swarm has found a new location, whether in a hollow tree or in a hive provided for them, they at once commence to secrete wax from the honey they have carried with them, and forming themselves into smaller clusters or festoons, parallel to each other, they lay the foundation to their combs by attaching bits of wax to the roof of the hive or the top bar of the frames. A few hours after hiving you may find a number of diminutive combs from the size of a ten-cent-piece upwards. These gradually grow until they fill the hive from top to bottom, and from side to side. Each comb consists of a central vertical wall or septum, on both sides of which the cells are arranged horizontally. Each cell forms a perfect hexagon, which insures the greatest space with the least material. The septum forms the bottom of the cells. These are not placed exactly opposite each other, but the bottom of one cell forms one-third of the bottom of three adjoining cells on the opposite side of the comb, thereby giving additional strength to the latter. The cells are of three different sizes, viz: worker, drone and store cells. The worker cells are the smallest, and it takes about five of them to one inch, twenty-five to a square inch, or fifty to a square inch of comb, counting both sides. The depth of the work cells is seven-sixteenths of an inch, making the comb seven-eights of an inch thick. When used for honey the cells are often lengthened out. The drone cells occupy a space of four to the inch, or thirty-two to a square inch of comb. The store cells are irregular cells formed where worker and drone cells join each other, or where the combs are attached to the hive or frames. These cells are never used for brood. Each bee hatched in a cell leaves a cocoon there. These cocoons form a strong and warm lining, making the old combs tougher and warmer, and therefore much better than the new ones, although, many beginners in apiculture seem to think that the new white combs are the best. Cells containing honey are always capped with pure wax, while brood cells are capped with a composition of wax and some paper-like substance, perhaps particles of cocoons removed from the cells. The capping on honey cells is slightly concave, that on worker cells nearly straight or slightly convex, while the capping on drone cells containing brood, is conspicuous by being almost half-spheres. There is still another kind of cells occasionally found on the combs, namely the queen cells. These are built either on the face or on the edge of the comb. New queen cells, just started, as well as old ones which the bees have cut down after being used, have the appearance of small acorn-cups, while full sized queen cells look very like pea-nuts. The queen cell being placed vertically, its occupant stands on her head until she hatches out.

It is of great importance to the successful and easy manipulation of the combs, that they should be built perfectly straight in the frames. To secure this, the hive should be set level, and examined every day or two while the swarm is building comb. While the combs are new and small it is easy to bend them into shape, if not built right, but if the bees are left to themselves they are apt to build crooked or or crosswise in the frames, and the frame hive becomes then no better than the box or log-gum. When empty frames can be inserted between two sealed combs, the bees are of course bound to build the new comb straight, and that is always the best way when it can be done. Queenless stocks will invariably build drone combs, and these should be removed as fast as built and used for starters in the cap or upper story of the hive. A drone comb, say 10 inches square would produce 3,200 useless drones every 24 days, while a worker comp of the same size would give 5,000 worker bees every 21 days during the breeding season. It is easy to tell which is the most profitable.

There is yet a sure means of securing perfectly straight worker comb, and that is what is called,

COMB FOUNDATION.

This is a thin sheet of wax, with impressions on both sides, forming the base of the cells. These sheets are fastened in the frames, and the bees will build them out into full sized combs, the foundation generally containing material enough for the purpose. As this saves the bees the labor and expense of wax production it is a great help to them as well as their owner. Even queenless stocks will, when the temperature and honey yield are favorable, build the comb foundation out into beautiful combs, having them ready for occupancy by the new queen as soon as she commences to lay, while without the foundation they would build drone comb or none at all.

Comb foundation was first invented in Germany in 1857, but was not much of a success, as the process of manufacture was rude and the sheets too small to be of general use. In 1875 however, a machine was invented in America, in which the smooth wax sheets are passed between a pair of finely engraved metal rollers, and since then the product has not only become cheaper and better, but the sheets can be rolled out to any desired length and of a width of twelve inches. Home made comb foundation may be made from plaster-of-paris casts, but these, from their nature do not last long. Comb foundation is now regarded as one of the greatest inventions in apiculture, and stands equal with the movable frame and the honey extractor.

Gold Mountain.

The Candelaria True Fissure copies from a private letter as follows: "Board at the restaurant is at the rate of two dollars a day, or nine dollars a week. There are two stores and one saloon, while there are a number of the latter are in course of construction. Drinks are two bits; water ten cents a gallon, or four dollars a barrel delivered; one dollar at the spring—six miles distant. There is a report current that some parties who are building a tollroad have struck water two and a half miles from the town, but the truth of this I cannot vouch for. Ham sells here at 40 cents per pound; bacon, 30; beans, 16; sugar, 33; hay, 4; barley, 10; poor lumber, $110 per thousand. Everything else is in the same ratio as to price, so you can judge what a nice place this is for a man to strike when he is broke. The water pipe has not yet arrived. Interested parties here say that the camp will rival Virginia and Bodie in a short time. The ledge of the State Line mine is twelve feet wide, with an unlimited supply of ore in sight—enough to wear out an 80-stamp mill. The ore will average $25 per ton, and is free milling gold. No amalgamating pans will be needed, as copper plates will suffice. The State Line Mining Company has located 160 acres of land under the Desert Land Act. Outside of this tract, the whole country is located and held by 'stiffs,' who imagine their future is brilliant. I cannot encourage any of the boys to come here at present, as all locations are gobbled up. Every move goes to show that wages will be low here, and that is an important item to take into consideration."

THE Carson Times has the following in regard to the Carson & Colorado railroad: The Carson & Colorado line is now completed to a point in Churchill Cañon, thirty miles from the Mound House, its initial station. Stinking Wells, eight miles further, will be reached next Tuesday. Locomotive Candelaria, No. 1, at present does the work of the road. Two additional engines left the Baldwin Locomotive Works, Philadelphia, last week and will soon arrive. Another locomotive has been ordered from the same extensive works, and will probably be called the "Belleville." On the 20th instant a passenger train complete will leave the Dayton, Ohio, Car Works, and will probably arrive within two weeks from date of shipment. Active progress in track laying is being made, and passenger trains will soon be running.

THE chemists are constantly creating new terms, the very pronounciation of which stamps a man as a qualified chemist. Now, for instance, homofluorecin is a new coloring matter, and it is interesting to learn that when a solution of hexanitromonoxyhomonuorescin nitrate in boiling ammonia is accidified with acetic acid diammoniumpentanitaodiazomidomonoxyhomofluoaccin is deposited in red or yellow crystalline plates. This, it will be observed, is another name derived from fluorescin.

COMMISSIONER WILLIAMSON has decided that the State of California is not entitled to compensation for the 16th and 36th sections which are mineral lands.

Old Californians.

Do you know where the real old Californian is? the giant, the world-builder?

He is sitting by the trail high up on the mountain. His eyes are dim and his head is white. His sleeves are lowered. His pick and shovel are at his side. His feet are weary and sore, He is still prospecting. Pretty soon he will sink his last prospect hole in the Sierras.

Some younger men will come along, and lengthen it out a little, and lay him in his grave. The old miner will have passed on to prospect the out-croppings that star the floors of heaven.

He is not numerous now; but I saw him last Summer high up on the headwaters of the Sacramento. His face is set forever away from that civilization which has passed him by. He is called a tramp now. And the new nice people who have slid over the plains in a palace car, and settled down there, set dogs on him somtimes when he comes that way.

I charge you to treat the old Californian well, wherever you find him. He has seen more, suffered more, practiced more self-denial, than can now fall to the lot of any man.

I never see one of these prospectors without thinking of Ulysses, and wondering if any Penelope still weaves and unweaves, and waits the end of his wanderings. Will any old blind dog stagger forth at the sound of his voice, lick his hand, and fall down at his feet?

Nothing of the sort. He has not heard from home for twenty years. He would not find even the hearth-stone of his cabin by the Ohio, should he return. Perhaps his own son, a merchant prince or President of a railroad, is one of the distinguished party in the palace car, that smokes along the plain far below.

And though he may die there in the pines on the mighty mountain, while still feebly searching for the golden fleece, do not forget that his life is an epic, noble as any handed down from out the dusty eld. I implore you to treat him kindly. Some day a fitting poet will come, and then he will take his place among the heroes and the gods.—Joaquin Miller in January Californian.

Waiting for Windfalls.

The hope of a "windfall," of some unexpected and unreasonable accession of unearned wealth, is a very widely spread one, probably as widely spread among those who value money, and have not enough of it, as the habit of day-dreaming, upon which such anticipations are in the long run based. The notion that somebody unknown may leave them a legacy, or that they will succeed in a speculation they are not going to attempt, or that some valueless piece of property will one day reveal minerals, or be wanted by a company, or in some way "turn up trumps," is with many men and women incurable, and with some gravely affects the courss of their lives. We have known at least one man and two women with whom such an expectation altered decidedly their own position in the world. It does not, however, often do them harm, and it probably indicates a buoyancy of temperament and tendency toward hope which are antiseptics; but it is odd to notice, if you are curious about the nooks and corners of the human mind, how little the idea is affected by probabilities or experience, or even sober, realistic judgment. The man may be perfectly well aware that he has not a property with possibilities, and that he shall never speculate, and may be convinced that he has to depend upon his earnings or upon his means; and still there will linger in his mind a fancy, not Micawberish, but just as vague as Micawber's, that somehow something may happen and his windfall may arrive, and he will read a story, such as Charles Dickens delighted to put in Household Words, of such a windfall happening, with a sort of personal pleasure. Actual experience will not encourage him much, for windfalls, so called, are very rare. Properties are sometimes unexpectedly large, and sometimes fall to very distant relatives, but the writer can recall but one verified instance of the windfall, true, pure and simple.

A WORD on punctuality. Thackeray has very properly held up to universal execration those guests who arrive late for dinner. The first duty of a guest is punctuality. All good cooks are punctual. They calculate the exact time a certain dish takes to perfect, trusting in their master's word that he dines at such an hour. The guests have not arrived at that hour, and the dish and the cook's reputation are damaged. Confidence is shaken between master and servant, and the demoralization of the cook becomes a certainty. The true Amphitryon will tell his friends, "I sit down to table at such an hour; if you are not there you must take the consequences; I shall not wait for you." Never wait for unpunctual people; they have no reputation to lose save that of their unpunctuality, and therefore they cling to it with the utmost tenacity.

"BOYCOTTING," is a new word that has been coined out of the woes of unhappy Ireland. A man by the name of Boycott dismissed a tenant. As a penalty for doing so, every man, woman and child on his premises left him; the other laborers in the neighborhood would render him no service, and every one who attempted to do so came to grief in some mysterious manner. He was not attacked, but he was simply let alone. The result was that, though the Government sent a force to protect a body of sympathizers who volunteered to gather his crop for him, in the end he was obliged to leave. So "Boycotting" is leaving severely alone.

THE STATE MINING BUREAU.

We, some two weeks since, received a copy of the first report of State Mineralogist, Henry G. Hanks, but, until the present, have not had an opportunity to even scan it; but now, having done so, we must say that we think Mr. Hanks is doing a most valuable work for the material interests of this State. As most of our readers know, the State Mining Bureau has been in existence but a few months, having been established by a law of the last Legislature, approved April 16, 1880. Mr. Hanks was appointed chief of the institution as State Mineralogist a month later, and in the brief period since he, with but two or three assistants, got the institution in full working order, which remark implies an immense labor, as may be seen by the details of the report of progress above referred to. The enactment of the law establishing the Bureau, if not the origination of the idea itself, was, par excellance, the work of our Representative, then and now, Mr. Jos. Wasson.

The institution is, to all intents and purposes a State Museum devoted more especially to the exhibition of mineralogical and geological specimens, but not at all limited to such merely; but it has a much higher mission than to simply satisfy curiosity: it is a high school of mineralogy, mining, etc., where all interested may learn, free of cost, much of value to themselves as well as to the community at large. Through its investigations and suggestions, new industries will be introduced, particularly in the way of mining and utilizing minerals and materials now hardly known by name; how this may come about may be inferred from the fact that as rapidly as possible, the Bureau will publish every material fact as to location, extent, value, uses, etc., of every mineral and mineral substance found on the coast; and of these substances there at least sixty known to exist in this State alone, all of marketable value, and some of which at least may be produced at a profit, and yet are utterly unknown to the general public. Of course this list does not include the very few metals for which mining is yet alone carried on. Among others of the undeveloped resources, our iron deposits, salt, tin, chrome iron, platinum, buhr stone, blacksand, etc., are each briefly discussed, though, as stated by Mr. Hanks, this is a report of progress only, therefore by no means complete. The Bureau is doing a good work, beyond question.

THE full text of the treaties lately negotiated with China in now given to the public. As referred to elsewhere, the commercial treaty accords great advantages to the United States, while that relating to Chinese immigration ought to be satisfactory to almost every one since the United States is empowered to fix the matter to suit itself, save that the prohibition shall not be absolute against all classes of Chinese—students, commercial and other travelers, Government officials, and the like, being the exceptions; but the influx of coolies or laborers may be barred in toto. But those now in this country can remain at their own pleasure, and retain the same rights and privileges as other resident foreigners.

OF the several apportionment bills now pending in the Legislature, that one which proposes Mono and Inyo as an Assembly district, and the same two with San Bernardino and San Diego added for the Senatorial district, suits this side of the mountains far better than any other possible combination of counties for legislative purposes. We much hope that bill may become a law.

THE DAMNING DRUG—RETRIBUTION.

The present indications are that the United States will, in a year or to, almost entirely supercede Great Britain in the trade with China. Our commercial journals point out existing conditions tending to that result as follows: Opium is the principal English export into China, and the authorities in Pekin seem now to have definitely resolved to put a stop to its importation at any cost. Gen. Tso-Tseng, the Commander-in-Chief, a man who is said to have the force and bigotry of Cromwell, and also his control of the popular mind, has resolutely set his face against the use and importation of opium; and in this he is sustained by the war party. The reported introduction of the clause prohibiting its introduction into the late commercial treaty with the United States is regarded as a warning note to England. We have no opium to send to China, which fact makes the prohibitory clause all the more significant.

The leading English papers call attention to this clause, and, at the same time, deprecate the barbarity shown by the British Government in so long forcing upon a heathen, helpless nation, against its protests, a drug which has proved murderous to both soul and body. But they also say that to stop it now would be to inflict a staggering blow upon the prosperity of India, reducing revenues from that colony at least one-half.

We are told that the British colony of Burmah is falling as rapidly into decrepitude and imbecility as China from the same cause. One of these English papers says: "The Burmese at first regarded the introduction of opium with such horror that individual opium farmers gave up the effort as hopeless. But the Government opium farm has popularized the drug, and the trade thrives. Scores and hundreds of villages are ruined by its use. The Arcanese petitioned that the British Government, if not willing to yield the revenue, should prohibit the importation and make up the amount lost by a capitation tax which they offered to pay; but it was all to no purpose."

It is also a fact that among John Bull's other immoral, rascally means of keeping up his revenues, the cotton and other fabrics and goods he sends to China are so heavily sized, adulterated, and frauds withal, that American goods are supplanting them in every market.

John Bull did an inhuman, scoundrelly thing when, for lucre's sake alone, he forced a helpless nation to buy and use his opium, that most soul-destroying of all drugs. That foul deed has, though indirectly, laid a deep and deepening curse upon many American homes. It was a wrong against all civilization. All civilization may well rejoice that something akin to retribution will follow through the loss of the very trade for which he perpetrated the great crime, and which opened the way for all these petty frauds by which he has profited, but only to lose all in the end.

WE are in receipt of the report of J. F. Hallock, State-Controller of Nevada. It is not only an exhaustive compilation of dry figures, but puts forth some terse and sensible arguments for the consideration of the assembled Legislature. At the close Mr. Hallock pays the following high compliment to a well-known ex-official of this county: "A meed of praise is due Mr. W. B. Daugherty, Deputy Controller, for his careful attention to the duties imposed upon him, his ability in the discharge of those duties, and his courteous demeanor on all occasions; and I take pleasure in according him the commendation he has merited."

THE San Francisco Alta-California has been making a computation of what Kearneyism has cost the State. There has been a decrease of $33,000,000 in banking capital, the improvements of property have been checked, the number of depositors in the saving banks has fallen off, the loans of the banks have been less this year than the repayment by borrowers; there is no new railroad building in the State, and home capitalists have transferred their business to New York. California is the only State that is not sharing in the general prosperity of the country.

THE Post-office Department issued an order which went into effect on the 1st instant prohibiting the sending of cards, printed or written upon, through the mails unless inclosed in an envelope. Merchants and other business men have been sending their printed business cards through the mails and putting thereon a one-cent stamp. The intention of the Department is to prohibit any card matter passing through the mails except postal cards, unless enclosed in an envelope.

AT Red Bluff, about 6:20 o'clock on the evening of the 6th, a severe earthquake shock was felt—so severe that people rushed from their houses. The vibration was northeast and southwest, and the strongest felt for years. Last Sunday evening, about the same time, they had another shock, but not so severe.

601 ON DECK.

Through a Bodie Free Press extra of Monday last, we have full details of the recent exciting tragedy in that place, which culminated early that morning in the hanging of DaRoche by the 601, as he richly deserved, but no more so than a number of other Bodie cutthroats the "law" has declared guiltless—and for which reason, repeated there and here and everywhere so many times, all, except murderers, have come to look upon "law" in murder cases as the most transparent fraud of the age.

The details of the whole affair may be summarized as follows: Joseph DaRoche, the murderer, is a Canadian Frenchman, the owner of a brickyard in Bodie, a rough by nature, and, physically, a large and powerful man. His victim, Tommy Treloar, a Cornishman, was a small man, a miner, and, through the effects of a fall some years ago, was hardly half witted. He married a Miss Loudrigan some two years ago. This woman was the cause of her husband's murder, and very likely an adviser of the same. She is undoubtedly a "bad egg." She and the murderer had been on extremely intimate terms both before and since her marriage with Treloar. The latter had an endowment policy on his life for $1,000, which sum the woman seems to have been unduly anxious to get hold of. As may be inferred, the two men were by no means warm friends, though much together. At a ball on Thursday evening the woman, in opposition to her husband's request, danced with DaRoche. The husband started for home, but was overtaken by DaRoche. They walked along the street together, saying nothing. After passing a few yards beyond where some men were standing on the sidewalk, DaRoche dropped a step or two behind his unsuspecting victim, then shot him dead. An officer close at hand immediately took him in charge. Soon after the woman came along on her way home. "Mrs. Treloar," said the prisoner, "I have killed your husband; there he lies at the corner." She did not say, "Thank you, kind sir," or anything else, although she had been standing waiting in the darkness and cold, not thirty yards distant, for some time before the pistol flash lighted up the scene.

The prisoner was lodged in jail; before 5 that morning, Deputy Sheriff Joe Farnsworth, a drunken scoundrel, went to the jail and persuaded another like himself to let him take the prisoner to his (Farnsworth's) room, so that the 601 wouldn't get him. This was agreed to between the model officers, and soon the prisoner was safe in Officer Farnsworth's room at his lodging house. Then in consideration of $1,000, to be hereafter paid, the whisky-soaked officer went to sleep, while DaRoche directly thereafter went out into the wide world. Sunday evening he was found at a wood-ranch, seven or eight miles distant, and was brought back to town. Meantime the beast of an officer had fled the town, thereby saving his worthless neck from corrupting a rope too much to be afterwards fit to hang a cayote. Early on Monday morning Judge Lynch held his first court in Bodie. Before the sun rose that same morning the carcass of the miserable assassin was dangling in the air over the very spot where his victim had fallen. The woman was not molested, though the spirit of 601 was abroad in its terrible might, and as it will stay abroad till the administration of law rises above the contempt which invites murder everywhere in the land.

AYRES' Almanac now takes on the proportions of a full blown and full bound book, and full learned besides, for it comes to us printed in no less than eight different languages. Should an American or an Englishman, a Norwegian, Swede, German, Dutch, French, Spanish, Portuguese or Bohemian individual want to be physicked in his own language this almanac will give him the most minute directions how to go at it pursuant to the celebrated Ayres process.

THE Denver and Rio Grande Railroad Company has awarded to the Baldwin Locomotive Works a contract for 144 narrow gauge engines, to be delivered during the current year. The locomotives are to be of extra weight, and many of them built with five pairs of driving wheels. Their cost will exceed $1,000,000. The same company has also contracted with the Grant Locomotive Works for twenty engines.

WE are indebted to Boruck's Spirit of the Times for a copy of its highly prized illustrated Christmas number, an immense book, so to speak, filled with handsomely executed pictures of notable California scenes and notabilities, which, with the accompanying letter-press, makes it a publication that will attract pleased attention anywheres in the world.

THE RICHMOND FURNACES.

The following statements are taken from the report of the work done by the Richmond Consolidated Mining Co. of Eureka, Nev., during the first six months of 1880, the present position of the company, and its history for the past three years. The reduction works consist of three smelting furnaces, and refining or separating works. The gold and silver after separation, is shipped to market, and the lead kept on hand and shipped from time to time as there is a favorable market for that metal:

Since December, 1878, the furnaces have run continually. Two are constantly at work, and a third is held in reserve, in addition to which there is a smaller furnace which is kept for smelting the drosses from the refinery, together with the low-grade ores of the Richmond, and small quantities of purchased ores. The returns of this small furnace do not appear in the weekly returns cabled to London. The lowest quantity of ore smelted in one week is about 900 tons, the highest 1,200 tons, averaging about 1,000 tons a week, the quantity smelted in the 26 weeks making the half-year being about 28,000 tons. The product of the two large furnaces and of the small one for the six months is as follows: Lead, 6,992 tons; Silver, 687,914 ounces; gold, 26,605 ounces. The average value of the ore has again improved from $46 to $60 per ton. The refinery had dealt with the whole of the bullion produced by the furnaces, averaging an out-turn of about $50,000 a week, and both the furnaces and refinery had worked without a hitch of any sort. The total value of the out-turn of the furnaces in gold, silver, and lead was $1,772,000; of the refinery, $1,315,000 in doré bars (gold and silver). The explorations have been exceedingly satisfactory; the main shaft is down 1,000 feet, drifts are running on the 700, 800, and 900-foot levels, but no ore has been taken out below the 600-foot level. Ore has been cut at the 700-foot level, showing 8-feet in width, and at no distant date it is expected to be cut in the 800 and 900-foot levels. In all 5,216 feet of drifts and winzes have been completed during the six months under review.

Last year, the company made about £140,000 in profits, against something like £130,000 the year before, and the profits for the year ending February 28th next will greatly exceed this. The company has a capital of £270,000, divided into 54,000 shares of £5 each, on which £10 1s 6d. per share has been paid in dividends, and the stock is quoted at about £16.

Adverse Claims in Mining Application.

The following circular of instructions has been received by the Register and Receiver of United States Land Offices throughout the country:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 10, 1880.

Gentlemen:—In the matter of applications for patents for mining claims, where adverse claims are filed in the manner prescribed by law and the official instructions, you will in notifying the adverse claimant that he will be required to commence proceedings in a court of competent jurisdiction within 30 days thereafter, at the same time advise him that he will be required within 15 days after such suit has been commenced, to file with you a certificate of the clerk of the proper court that proceedings have been commenced, and the date thereof. It frequently happens that there is no court which has exclusive jurisdiction, and in certain States it is competent to commence such suit in any District Court of the State. It follows that the applicant for patent (the defendant) in order to prove that no suit has been commenced, would be compelled in such cases to furnish the certificate of every court in which the suit might have been instituted; while the adverse claimant can always, at the minimum expense and trouble, furnish the certificate of the court in which he has commenced suit. In case no certificate of the clerk of the court shall have been filed with you within 45 days after the filing of adverse claim, the applicant for patent will be allowed to complete his entry upon making affidavit that suit has not been commenced by the adverse claimant.

Very respectfully,
J. A. WILLIAMSON,
Commissioner.

SAYS Tom Corwin; The trouble with members of the bar is that they don't get down low enough. They shoot over the heads of the twelve numbskulls before them. I have seen Ewing, Stanberry and Hunter, leading luminaries as they are, dumbfounded at being beaten by some stump-tailed pennyroyal bull of a County Court with no more law in his head than a snake in dog-days. I never make a success of a jury trial that I don't feel humiliated. Even if my side had the right, I know I have used means to win that ought to shame a down-east stock peddler.

JEFF DAVIS' history of the late war will be published in two volumes, and will be entitled, "The Rise and Fall of the Confederate Government." It will be sold by subscription at $5 for each volume. The demand is principally from the South and is expected to reach 10,000.

THE Weekly Bentonian comes to hand, and among other things makes the sensible proposition that if delinquents do not pay up, its publication will cease after another issue. Let us hope that the aforesaid delinquents will see the propriety of putting up at once.

ALL who like to keep posted in Legislative doings, without having to wade through column after column of confusing reports, can do so by reading the synopsis of every bill introduced to be found in the Record-Union, in addition to its regular reports.

Another Foul Murder.

Again Bodie comes to the front with another murder—the foulest of the many that have disgraced that town. Yesterday morning at half-past one o'clock, Joseph DaRoche, a French-Canadian, shot to death Thomas Treloar, a Cornish miner. It apppears to have been a cold-blooded murder of a peaceable and harmless citizen by a notorious desperado. And, to add enormity to the crime, the custody of the murderer was entrusted to a drunken constable, being removed from the jail for that purpose, and, consequently he escaped, Farnsworth, the constable, being oblivious to all except the prisoner offering him $1,000 to let him escape. DaRoche had attended the A. O. U. W. ball and danced with Mrs. Treloar, against the request of her husband. About the close of the ball DaRoche left the hall and laid in wait for his victim at the corner of Main and Lowe streets, where Treloar was shot through the head. Intense excitement prevails in Bodie against the murderer and Farnsworth.

THE gamblers of St. Louis are to get security in the Spring in a Keno boat which is to be started up the river. The boat will have a large main cabin for keno, and smaller rooms forward for faro, roulette and hazard. Each passenger is to pay $1 fare, and three-fourths of the fares are to constitute three "pots" for the game, the bank deducting the usual commission. Once fairly out on the river, State laws against gambling will not avail, and the United States statutes do not recognize such an offense. Here in Nevada when the sporting fraternity find law and license too oppressive it would be an excellent plan to put a steamer on the Carson River, and the amount of licenses saved would equip a splendid boat. With Dolph Shane in command and Alex McKenzie to command the crew, the craft would be safe from the reefs near Empire, and not even fear the big dam by the Morgan Mill.—Carson Appeal.

ONLY a few months ago the people of Ireland were wailing and calling upon heaven to pity them, and the rest of us to give them something to eat, because they had no harvest to gather. Now they have abundant harvests and are howling and shooting if anybody attempts to gather them. We presume these unhappy people probably know what they want; certainly nobody else can guess at it.

RAMON MONTENEGRO returned from Gold Mountain this week. He spent several days looking around in the district, and located a few claims. His specimens from the croppings look well and show free gold to the naked eye. Montenegro thinks the district will be lively this Spring and Summer, and that much work and prospecting will be done there.—Candelaria True Fissure.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

THIS HONEY WAS REMOVED FROM THE comb by centrifugal force, with a machine made for the purpose. It is therefore virtually the same as honey in the comb, only you don't have to eat the bees-wax, which is indigestible and therefore disagrees with many persons. When first extracted the honey is liquid, but nearly all pure honey will candy or granulate in course of time, especially if exposed to the cold. Putting the cans in hot water for a short time will bring the honey to its fluid state without injury.

This Honey is put up in 10 pound cans, with patented screw tops, which renders it convenient for family use, and especially for the mines, to which it may be packed, even upside down, without leakage. A neat label on each can gives full directions.

Price, $1 50 per can, or 12½ cents per lb at the Apiary, if customers furnish their own receptacle. For sale at Harris & Rhine's, Independence, and at the Apiary, at Henry Fehrman's place, Camp Independence.

S. C. Munson vs. M. C. Brockman; judgment for plaintiff in default of answer.

LOOKOUT.—A valued correspondent at Lookout reports the following items from that section: The Modock furnace has been making a very successful run, under the management of J. J. Williams. Will turn out in the neighborhood of 100 tons of very rich bullion. The Secretary of the Company has written to this place telling the Superintendent to keep fifteen good men here, as they intend to resume prospecting as soon as the run is over. Frank Fitzgerald and J. H. Van Nuys are negotiating for a lease of the Minneatta mill, and if they are successful it will give employment to fifteen men for three months. There is 100 tons of first-class ore, 100 tons of second-class and 2,200 tons of tailings. The Snow's Cañon mill is running on tailings, and will crush ore inside of ten days.

ASSAULTED.—At the Pioneer Stables, on Monday last, D. Stubblefield, a well-known old resident of this place, received most painful if not quite serious injuries at the hands of one Albert Dushaum. It is stated that Stubblefield sought out Dushaum and abused him roundly for his part in cording and cutting certain wood which had been delivered by the former to Mr. Thompson of the Blaney House. In the trouble Dushaum procured a pitchfork and struck Mr. Stublefield two or more severe blows on the right side of the head. Upon complaint, a warrant of arrest was issued against Dushaum by Justice Parker, and upon the defendant being arrested by the Sheriff, he was held to answer next Monday in $500 bonds, which were furnished.

SLATE CAÑON.—One of the relocators of the Slate Cañon mines heretofore referred to confirms Mr. Ely's statement of last week—that the Cottrell and Ely claims have not been relocated—writing as follows: "As for the claims located in Slate Cañon I will state that Doc. Cottrell and John Ely never had bought them; they were claimed by a set of men like dogs in the manger, who would not work them nor let any one else do so. Now, we will try this year with them. Cottrell's claims have all had the assessment work done on them."

COURT MATTERS.—On account of His Honor Judge Hannah being too unwell to hold Court on Thurday and Friday last, no date has been set for the trials of the criminal cases on hand—Charles Baker for highway robbery and Hank Lufkin for assault with a deadly weapon upon Mr. Hagerman, the school teacher at Big Pine. Formal "information" in these cases will probably be filed next Monday, by District Attorney Laird.

BIG TEAMS.—Frank Shaw, of Adobe Meadows, accompanied two of his big teams to Darwin, the trains, consisting of four heavy wagons and twenty mules each, having passed through this place on Tuesday last. Transportation power in the northern country must be getting pretty well thinned out. One of the teams loaded down with bullion at Darwin, and both will probably return with grain in a short time.

RACES.—The Bishop Creek Jockey Club is out with a programme of races for the coming 22d and 23d of February. A purse of $250 is offered the winner of a mile race, best two in three. There will doubtless be considerable sporting on this, as well as on the half-mile dash for the $100 purse.

CATTLE SOLD.—Another band of stock cattle, 700 in number, which have been sold by parties up the valley, passed through for the southern counties during the week. Stock-men say that the farmers ought not to fuss much about a no-fence law for some time to come.

HONEY.—By reference to Mr. Muth-Rasmussen's advertisement this week it will be noted that he has reduced the price of his pure, concentrated honey to $1 50 per can, or 12½ cents per pound net. Try it.

THEFT.—Sheriff Smith started out toward Lone Pine on Thursday night, with a warrant of arrest for one John Glenn, accused by John Broder of having stolen a cow and calf belonging to S. G. Gregg.

Benton Baby Business.

BENTON, Jan. 13.

MESSRS. EDITORS—There is perhaps a greater dearth of news around this camp to-day than any other mining community in California. There is absolutely nothing doing in milling and mining. So in the absence of any other industry the people have turned their attention to the

RAISING OF BABIES,

A crop of no less than six having been harvested within thirty days. On the night of the 21st of December your humble servant had one—that is, his wife gave birth to a bouncing girl baby. Everybody says it looks just like its father, and, Messrs. Editors, I think so myself. I congratulate you and all of my old Inyo friends on the event, or give you all leave to congratulate me—or something of that sort. This suddenly becoming a father somehow or other is liable to confuse a man and his ideas. However, proclaim it in Bishop Creek, tell it in Big Pine and let it be heralded from the housetops of Independence that Middleton's wife has a baby. And it's a banger, because it looks just like its father; and Middleton is happy.

Oh! it's nice to be a father
Of a bouncing baby girl!
But then I think I'd rather—
Balance understood.

SALINE DISTRICT. — Last Thursday was the date set for the organization of a new mining district bearing the above name, late reports from which have created quite a stir among the mining men of Darwin, Cerro Gordo, Lone Pine and this place. The mines are situated on the east base of the Inyo Range, facing Saline Valley; east of the Beveridge District gold fields, and 28 miles north of Cerro Gordo, which would bring them a little south of east of Independence, about thirty miles distant. The only routes from the valley would be via Mazurka Cañon and Waucoba District, or to Cerro Gordo and down San Lucas Cañon. The best route, however, is the one taken by the present discoverers—from Darwin to Lee District and through the pass northeast of Cerro Gordo. This party consists of Messrs. Smith, Riddle, Long, Young and Tuller. They have 10 silver ledges located, which cut across the hills and through the gulches for a long distance; five of these have been opened, and at a few feet from the surface show rich silver veins from two to five feet in width. The country is well watered and the mountains above are covered with piñon timber. From the location and description, we are inclined to think the property includes some of locations owned in 1868-9 by F. K. Miller, David Love and others of Cerro Gordo. The formation is generally lime and granite, the ledges having a peculiar, thin capping difficult to describe. Jerry McCarthy, of Mammoth, who has been there recently and made several locations, passed through for home a day or two since, and while here gave THE INDEPENDENT some very handsome specimens of the ore. It is a fine quality of quartz, showing slight copper stains and is also stained with iron oxide. In the seams the ore is spangled with thin laminæ of native silver. There is also traces of chloride and spots of black or brittle silver. Several samples were shown from different ledges, consisting of rich antimonial silver ores, and another being rich soft chlorides, which would probably assay hundreds of dollars.

A SHAKE.—About 4 o'clock, Wednesday afternoon, we had quite a noticeable little earthquake here. This is the first to come under our own observation for several months, though others say there have been several at different periods within the past year. The accounts of earthquake shocks occurring in various parts of the country generally possess one feature which excites an incredulous smile from people who have had the widest experience in earthshakings, and that is the exactness with which the details are given—the reporter gives the period of duration as if he had held a stop-watch, while the course of the "undulations," though but barely perceptible tremors, is laid down with even more marked exactness. Now, after observing hundreds of these little temblars, saying nothing about a few that did "undulate" in fact, and after comparing notes with numbers of like experience, we conclude that it is not once in a hundred times that either of the above points can be any more than guessed at by the coolest observer. It will happen nine times out of ten that there will be as many different opinions on these points as there are persons in a group who have just had a shaking up.

STARTING OUT.—J. T. Thompson, who is numbered among our best informed mining men, will shortly start out for a personal inspection of the merits of Saline District. Mr. W. S. Woodhull leaves for Cerro Gordo tomorrow, to take charge of the ore shipments from the Ygnacio dumps to the new mill at Keeler. Mr. S. D. Woodhull goes to Swansea District, on mining matters.

AN OUTRAGE.— From observations during a recent call at the County Hospital, we conclude that the imposition of the crazy old man, Crawford, upon that institution as an ordinary patient is an unmitigated outrage.

NEW ROOF.—Supt. John Alexander, with an able corps of assistants, has been engaged during the week in putting a new roof on the—on the Headquarters Saloon.

IMPROVING.—Darwin is steadily on the upward grade to prosperity again. As an indication, J. J. Gunn is building a very large, fine saloon.

NO SUNDAY SCHOOL.—For reasons not necessary to state, there will be no Sunday School in this place to-morrow, nor until further notice.

AT LONE PINE.—Rev. F. M. Willis and Mrs. Willis are at Lone Pine, holding a protracted meeting.

OVER at Grayson, Merced county the other day, an old fellow, named George Hines, aged 55, placed a revolver in his pocket, saying to his partner that he was going to ask a Miss Lizzie Kuene, a widow's daughter, to marry him, and if she refused he would kill her. He went, submitted his proposition, and in as pleasant terms as possible, was told that it wouldn't do. Thereupon he offered his ultimatim—marry him or die, presenting his pistol at the same time. The young lady snatched up a shotgun standing near, and blew his brains out—or the admixtnre that filled the space where brains ought to have been. So Hines passed away in exactly the right manner.

OUR Assemblyman, Hon. Jos. Wasson, has been quite flatteringly recognized in the committee appointments. He appears as Chairman of the Committee on Mines and Mining Interests, and is a member of the Committees on Agriculture, Mining and Mechanical Arts (a committee having charge of the State University), on Federal Relations, and Roads and Highways. The committee of which Mr. Wasson is chairman is the most important one to Mono and Inyo counties, and we are very glad that he is at the head of it.—Bodie Standard-News.

IT was dinner time in a select boarding house when the new boarder arrived. He was a venerable looking gentleman, with silver hair, and his face beamed with sweet repose, betokening a pure and holy life. As he joined the table the landlady said: "Would you ask a blessing, sir?" The venerable stranger shouted: "You'll have to talk a little louder, marm, I'm so —— deaf."

THE mince pie for the season of 1880-81 contains fewer raisins than those of last winter, but more bits of leather and nerve fibre. The leather accessories may be chewed for hours after the rest of the pie is gone, thus affording a safe and healthful substitute for chewing tobacco and gum.

BUTTE, Montana, reports a young woman who has not spoken for fifteen years, except on one occasion. Her long silence is attributed to intense and abiding indignation at her parents for refusing to permit her marriage.

THE people of southern Los Angeles are urging the division of that county. They wish the new county to be called Orange. Both Santa Anna and Anaheim want the county seat.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Allgemeine Deutsche Unterstuetzungs Gesellschaft.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 28. 1880.

Messrs. Harris & Rhine, Independence, Cal.: DEAR SIRS—The undersigned, President of the German Benevolent Society, begs leave to call your attention to this truly benevolent institution, founded in the early days of California, and being now in the 27th year of its existence. The Society was formed to carry out three objects viz.: to assist poor and worthy or deserving people by support, to find employment for those out of work, and to cure those who are stricken down with sickness. For the latter purpose the Society owns a magnificent Hospital, surrounded by extensive grounds, where all patients are under the charge of excellent physicians and a consulting board of the most eminent medical talent of this city. The Society has expended for hospital and grounds the sum of $188,895.

The object of this communication is to propose to you to act as agent for this Society, either personally or through one of your employees, suited for such position, for the purpose of enlisting new members.

The monthly fee is only one dollar and the initiation fee on becoming a member two dollars. Only healthy persons can become members, and only Germans or those who speak that language, also their wives and children. Any member who meets with sickness is treated in the hospital without any expense to him until he has been restored to health. All persons who are not members, or can not become such, not speaking the German language, are admitted for medical treatment in the hospital at as low terms as it is possible to make them.

In this city we have about 3,000 members, but throughout the interior only about 300. It is our aim to increase the number of members throughout the State to make the hospital as much as possible self-sustaining, to enable us to extend the charitable department in this benevolent institution. For the trifling sum of one dollar per month members have the best aid and care in the German Hospital.

Frequently sick people in the country are crippled for life by false treatment from incompetent doctors, or even brought to a premature death. Only too late do they find out that if they had become members they would have been restored to health, and their earnings of years would not have gone into the pockets of inexperienced doctors, as the hospital employs only the best physicians. If there are no earnings, the employers and the friends of the sick are generally called upon to pay for his support. All this can be avoided, if the employers would vigorously enforce the rule, now introduced in most of San Francisco's establishments, that every man employed should belong to a relief society in order that in case of sickness he might be well cared for and not be reduced to the rather humiliating necessity of asking aid from the purses of his employer and his friends.

Persons of all nations of the age of 50 years or over are admitted as pensioners for life by paying a certain sum to be agreed upon to the society. They receive a home at the hospital, first-class board, washing and attendance in in case of sickness, free of any expense.

To enable Germans and others who do not know of the existence of this institution, neither of the hospital nor its great advantages, to become members, I have addressed you the above, and hope that you will cheerfully accept the agency and do all in your power to further the interests of this society by enlisting new members, and recommending our hospital to those who may be compelled to seek medical aid.

Your Obedient Servant,
JULS. BANDMANN,
President G. G. B. S.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

THIS HONEY WAS REMOVED FROM THE comb by centrifugal force, with a machine made for the purpose. It is therefore virtually the same as honey in the comb, only you don't have to eat the bees-wax, which is indigestible and therefore disagrees with many persons. When first extracted the honey is liquid, but nearly all pure honey will candy or granulate in course of time, especially if exposed to the cold. Putting the cans in hot water for a short time will bring the honey to its fluid state without injury.

This Honey is put up in 10 pound cans, with patented screw tops, which renders it convenient for family use, and especially for the mines, to which it may be packed, even upside down, without leakage. A neat label on each can gives full directions.

Price, $1 50 per can, or 12½ cents per lb at the Apiary, if customers furnish their own receptacle. For sale at Harris & Rhine's, Independence, and at the Apiary, at Henry Fehrman's place, Camp Independence.

MINING DEBRIS.

The Governor's Special Message on the Subject.

As the debris question is one of the most important questions now before the Legislature and people of this State, the following extracts from Governor Perkins' special message on the subject will pay perusal:

It is already known to your honorable bodies that considerable injury has been done to farming lands by the debris from the hydraulic mines. It is also known to you that some steps have been taken to remedy the evils in operation. Of the nature and extent of

THE INJURIES INFLICTED

You have already been informed somewhat fully by the reports of the State and consulting engineers. The damage done by hydraulic mining consists in (1) direct destruction of agricultural and other lands; (2) indirect damage to such land; (3) direct injury to the rivers and streams; (4) indirect damage to rivers and streams. The most serious direct damage to property has thus far occurred on the American, Bear and Yuba rivers. The nature of the damage is a practical burial of large areas under the mining ditritus, or "slickens," and sand. The property so buried is, in fact, so completely deprived of agricultural value that, in the opinion of competent judges, it can, under the most favorable circumstances, be fit for nothing but raising swamp timber for from 15 to 30 years. As to the extent of the damage done in this way already, the State Engineer has reported the great injury of 43,546 acres of farming lands, rated at a present probable valuation of $2,728,300 for the land alone. The indirect damage to property is most apparent along the main streams—the Feather river and the Upper and Lower

SACRAMENTO RIVER.

For the most part the difference between direct and indirect damage to property is more in the degree of harm inflicted than in its character. This, however, is not invariably the case. The injuries resulting from hydraulic mining are, in truth, so extensive that it requires both a comprehensive and careful survey to embrace them all. As the State sold the swamp lands on the condition that they should be reclaimed, it must be difficult to show that it is not under obligation to remove obstacles which render the fulfillment of the conditions thus imposed by it impracticable. The indirect injuries which may be traced without any doubt or difficulty to hydraulic mining are, however, very extensive. In all these cases the future can be predicted from the past. On the one hand are lands already covered with the flood of sand and debris. On the other hand are lands threatened with this flood. And the flood is continually advancing. The lowlands of the whole Sacramento valley are, in fact, threatened

WITH UNAVOIDABLE DESTRUCTION.

That is to say, that an area inclosing from 1,200 to 1,400 square miles of fertile territory is indirectly damaged, and is menaced with ultimate destruction. Nor is this the whole of the situation, for the injury done to the Sacramento valley extends, by a reflex action, to the lowlands of the San Joaquin, and to the lands about the upper bays by a direct movement. It may be said therefore without exaggeration that the indirect damage actually embraces an area extending from Oroville and Chico to Benicia on the straits of Carquinez. It is necessary to bear in mind that the destruction of the navigability of the Sacramento river is involved. This would deprive the whole of northern California of competion in transportation. The wheat crop alone of that region may be estimated at 500,000 tons. It may also be fairly calculated that the removal of competion would result in a rise of freight rates to the extent of $2 per ton. Thus, then, an additional tax of $1,000,000 a year on the movement of the harvest alone is involved in this question, as concerns northern California. I have endeavoured to ascertain, by reference to the assessment rolls and the report of the Board of Equalization, as well as from other sources, the amount of values menaced directly and indirectly by the effects of hydraulic mining. I have above stated the opinions of the State Engineer as to the extent of actual destruction already accomplished. He puts it at $6,000,000. Taking the counties of Colusa, Placer, Sacramento, Solano, Sutter, Yolo, Yuba, Butte and Tehama, and estimating the the assessed value of the real estate other than town lots, and the improvements, and of the town lots and their improvements, and making what seems a sufficient deduction from the aggregate, I have arrived at the conclusion that the property in these counties threatened with partial or complete destruction cannot properly be placed at a lower estimate than $60,000,000. Here, then, is $6,000,000 already destroyed, and $60,000,000 menaced with destruction. It might appear that the only rational inference from the facts thus far given would be the desirability of putting a stop to

HYDRAULIC MINING.

It, therefore, is proper at this point to make some observations on the value and importance of that interest. Hydraulic mining has been carried on in this State for 25 years. The present annual output of hydraulic mines is estimated at from $12,000,000 to $14,000,000. It is, therefore, apparent that an estimate of $150,000,000 for the whole period of their working is not extravagant. It is equally clear that while no accurate estimate of their future output can be made, it is safe to assume that it will be larger than it has been in the past, since the extent of gravel-bearing claims remaining unworked is practically unlimited, and since many extensive workings have either just been opened or are not yet opened so as to be largely productive. Enough is known to make it plain that the hydraulic mines have contributed greatly to the prosperity of the State, and will contribute still more largely in the future, if suffered to proceed. A very considerable population is supported by these mines. I estimate it at 30,000, and the indirect support is very much more extensive.

Clearly, therefore, it must be a very serious business to put a stop by legislation to this great industry, and it seems impossible that those who undertake to study the subject should conclude such a course to be necessary until it has been demonstrated that it was impracticable to save the rivers and the farms and cities without sacrificing the mines. The preliminary and the late surveys of the engineering department have been devoted to the elucidation of the problem. The engineers were required to ascertain the extent of the injury, present and prospective, and whether remidial measures were available. Their reports have shown (1) that the extent and gravity of the damages and menace are far greater than had been commonly supposed; (2) that it was possible to counteract the ill-effects of hydraulic mining by a systematic treatment of the rivers; (3) that such a systematic treatment of the rivers was necessary in any case, since it would ce impossible to meet the exigencies of the situation by merely stopping hydraulic mining. The most formidable danger to the lowlands is due to the deposit in the mountain streams and tributaries of enormous quantities ofheavy sand which is being wasned down lower every year. The deposit of sand must continue until the entire

SACRAMENTO VALLEY

Is covered and destroyed, even though hydraulic mining should be stopped at once, unless remedial measures are adopted. In fact, it may be asserted that the stoppage of hydraulic mining in the present stage of the debris evil would produce no alleviation whatever. There is a mass of mining debris now collected in the cañons of the mountains sufficient to cover the Sacramento valley completely a couple of feet deep. It is, however, practicable, in the opinion of the State and consulting engineers, to deal with the situation, and in so doing to at once save the rivers and the mines. In other words, it requires to be ascertained whether the State can better afford to sustain the cost of reclamation than to bear the losses resulting from the destruction of property which must follow either (1) the stoppage of hydraulic mining, or (2) the abandonment of the rivers and agricultural lands and valley towns to the flow of

THE ADVANCING WAVE OF DEBRIS.

I have endeavored to give you some adequate ideas of the values represented on both sides. It has been shown that if the flow of debris is unchecked, to a positive loss of $6,000,000 in land must succeed a further loss of $60,000,000 in real property; that to this must be added at least $100,000,000 for the destruction of waterways, and fully $1,000,000 a year in freights. On the other hand it has been shown that the hydraulic mines represent a fixed capital of $100,000,000, that they support a large population, that they constitute the backbone of the commerce and industry of the mining counties, and that their suspension would necessarily involve the decline of all values throughout those counties, and the certain decay of that region of the State. It would appear from these considerations that the burden placed upon the State would have to be very heavy to outweigh the obvious desirability of avoiding the losses with which the commonwealth is threatened whether hydraulic mining is or is not suspended. The surveys of the engineers resulted in ascertaining the practicability of remedial measures, but at the same time showed that the subject was too extensive to be dealt with locally. It was particularly insisted on by the engineers that sustained and systematic treatment of the rivers must be undertaken or that it would be useless to attempt anything. While, therefore, they held out the encouraging consideration that by such a systematic treatment the condition of the rivers might be made even better than it had ever been, they contended that nothing less comprehensive than the methods they proposed would be adequate.

I come now to the question of the necessity for some sustained and systematic treatment of the rivers. I am not prepared to express an opinion upon the remedial measures which are proposed by the engineers. It is for you to determine what course should be taken in regard to them, and it is for you to judge whether they meet the requirements of the situation. But I consider it my duty to point out, to the best of my ability, the need which appears to exist—the imperative need, I may say—for some scientific and comprehensive treatment. The reports of the State Engineer, and those of the consulting engineers, Capt. Eads and Col. Mendell, contain many serious and even startling expressions in this connection. They concur in declaring that there must be a well-devised, carefully-planned, all-embracing system of remedial action, and that nothing less than this will arrest the very grave dangers which

MENACE THE STATE.

They tell us, as the result of their laborious researches, that the lower river channels are raised by the deposits of sand in them; that the upper river tributaries are given a torrential character by the ever-increasing steepness of grade imparted to them in the same way; that, consequently, they bring down their flood waters more swiftly and in greater volume than ever; and that the lower river channels, being choked with sand, are less able than ever to receive and carry this increased volume of water. They tell us that while through these agencies the flood-hight is being raised every year, and the difficulty of guarding against disastrous inundations correspondingly increased, the stoppage of the hydraulic mines would neither remove this great evil nor abate it even for the moment in an appreciable degree. They say that the cañons of El Dorado, Placer, Nevada, Sierra, Yuba and Plumas counties are vast reservoirs of sand, which has been deposited in them by hydraulic mining operations during a period extending from 1854 to the present time. This sand—heavy quartz detritus—is, they state, coming down gradually but surely into the valleys. The river channels are already filled with it, and now the main body is being slowly pushed over into the valleys. But now it has passed the region where it could do no injury, and it has pressed forward. The engineers affirm that if this heavy sand is allowed to cover the valley lands,

THEIR DESTRUCTION WILL BE ABSOLUTE.

They say further, that even if the hydraulic mines are stopped it will continue to flow tor years. They are confident that, though no complete cure for the damage done can be obtained save through the healing hand of time, it is quite possible to prevent the further extent of direct damage, and to arrest completely the extension of indirect damage in the future. The large rivers, they hold, can be made better than they ever were by proper treatment; but it must be systematic and continued. Whether, therefore, you acquiesce in the conclusions of the State and consulting engineers as to the merits of the particular methods which they recommend, or whether you conclude that some other plan would be preferable, I trust it may appear as clear to you as it does to me that the question is one which the State must undertake to deal with promptly, resolutely and intelligently.

GEORGE C. PERKINS.

Got His Leg Scalded.

Mr. Henry G. Hanks, Chief of the California State Mining Bureau, met with an accident last week which came near being serious. Mr. Hanks left the city some days ago, accompanied by F. G. Smith, of Nevada, bound for the mud volcanoes in San Diego county, some five miles from Volcano Station on the Southern Pacific railroad. The region is little visited, and trains rarely stop at this point, but through the kindness of Mr. Towne they were supplied with letters ordering the train men to allow them to get off at any point on the road, and also to supply them with red lights and torpedoes for stopping the train when they wished to return. They made the journey from that station to the volcanoes with moderate ease; but after making preliminary observations Mr. Smith went off to visit an attractive point, leaving Mr. Hanks with the Chinaman who accompanied in the capacity of a servant. Mr. Hanks began the actual work, measuring of distances, etc., and was just stooping over a boiling pond when he felt the mud crust give way beneath his feet, exactly as a thin sheet of ice yields to the pressure of a heavy body. Realizing his danger he threw himself over backwards to escape, but his left foot sank through the crust and the boiling fluid overflowed ankle and foot, settling in the top of his shoe. His foot and ankle are badly scalded. He was brought back to the city, and will be confined to the house for a few days. —Scientific Press, Jan. 22.

ARIZONA, in two years past, has paid as internal revenue taxes the sum of $55,863 92, and the people want the General Government to expend part of it in public buildings within the Territory.

THE richest mine in New Mexico is said to be in White Oak District. It was originally sold for $3 in silver, a little dust and old revolver, and is now said to be worth $3,000,000. The Chicago Tribune says: "In Chicago it works differently. The mine is sold for $3,000,000 and proves to be worth an old revolver."

MORE BLOOD.

It is right bloody times they are having up in Mono county and that region. In Bodie last Friday two sports, Dave Bannon and Ed. Ryan, got into an altercation in a doggery about something or other. Bannon struck Ryan several times with his left hand, having his "gun" ready for business in the right. Ryan tried to get out of the way, knowing that if he "went for his gun," which was in his hip pocket, Bannon would shoot and kill him. But Officer Monahan relieved his embarrassment on this point by attempting to pull Bannon away, thereby affording Ryan a chance to get out his pistol and get to work with it. The two men clinched, each with his left arm around the other, shooting rapidly with the other. In this manner they struggled, continuing to fire, until the rear end of the room was reached when Bannon fell dead, Ryan, immediately after, reeling to the sidewalk, where he, too, fell mortally wounded.

On the Saturday evening previous, in the neighboring town of Aurora, a pair of fools, one named W. H. Hoopes, the other James Laughhorn, met in Jake Stock's doggery and, in a friendly sort of a way, began a dispute as to which could pull and shoot the quickest. Hoopes, who was duly sober, snatched out his "gun" and brought it to bear on Laughhorn, who was duly drunk. It seems that the latter did not think the operation was performed up to the Bodie standard of time, measure and grace, whereupon the sober fool tried it again. Beginning at the beginning, the talented Hoopes jerked his gun from the pocket, and cocking it while giving it the conventional flourish, he, in a very brief space of time, had it bearing full in his drunken companion's face. Presumably the intellectual play ended at that stage, ready for a repeat. But Hoopes forgot that part and went right on. Laughhorn was shot dead, and the Coroner's jury said the shooting was "accidental." That may be, but every amateur shootist of the Hoopes type ought to be made to practice with guns that killed at the rear end only. Every person who points a gun of any description or condition at another "for fun" ought to be similarly supplied and compelled to practice until their kind became extinct.

Thence the blood-letting mania took the stage road in this direction, and a few days ago got to Benton, but up to this writing, without fatal results. According to report, Ben Alverson was the first to feel the influence of the present mania in that place. Bad blood existed between himself and a Mr. Watterson. (There are two of that name in business there, but we are not informed which of them it was who waa involved in this trouble.) Watterson was watering his horse at Alverson's watering-trough, when the latter came out, pistol in hand, and ordered him away. In deference to the pistol, Watterson went away, but soon returned armed, and again essayed to water his horse. While doing so Alverson partially opened the door, and poking a rifle out fired, the ball taking effect in Watterson's arm near the shoulder, inflicting a bad and perhaps dangerous wound. This is the story as we hear it. We should infer that the shot was not fired to kill, nevertheless, in some countries. it would be considered an offense against the law—here it will be considered an offense against good marksmanship, the penalty of which is the scorn of every gentleman whe has "got his man" in a duly scientific manner. The self-abasement which the knowledge of this fact causes is, by the average juryman, considered punishment enough in most every case of this kind. If people in civilized countries could only understand this, and also the true metaphysics of homicidal emotional insanity as it prevails in this country, they wouldn't speak so disrespectfully of our laws and juries. Suppose our laws were enforced as those people think they ought to be, where would they find such another market for their improved "guns," and powder and things? Let them think of that before they berate our lack of civilization too much.

A RICH strike is reported in the tunnel of Gold Mountain, on the Calabesas, in Arizona. At 120 feet a three-foot ledge of high grade ore has been cut. Developments in Saddle Mountain District are proving the permanency of large veins of carbonates.

THE divine Sara Bernhardt has been abused and advertised in the United States much to her worldly profit, as she has drawn $227,450 during her ten weeks engagement in this country.

THE revenue books show that during the year 1880 $3,561,300 were received for revenue stamps from the match manufacturies of the United States. This would make the number of matches consumed 35,614,000,000, or about 700 matches per year to every man, woman and child in the Union.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

SATURDAY, JANUARY 29 1881

ORGANIZATION.—Geo. M. Gill, Acting M. E. Z., and H. L. Childs, Deputy G. C., both of Bodie Lodge of Sr. Kts. P. P. P., aided by resident Sr. Kts. J. C. Irwin, J. E. Parker and A. R. Conklin, organized Lodge, No. 340, of P. P. P., at the Masonic Hall, January 25, at which time the following officers were chosen for the current P. P. P. term: A. R. Conklin, M. E. Z.; J. E. Parker, S. Kt. C.; P. A. Chalfant, S. & T.; G. W. Brady, 1st G. K.; H. P. Cartier, 2d G. K.; J. C. Irwin, 3d G. K.; J. W. Smith, S. S.; W. H. George, J. S. As this is the first Lodge of this Ancient Order established in this county, it may be as well to state that Master Masons only are eligible to membership.

PERSONAL.—H. L. Childs, Deputy Internal Revenue Collector, and Geo. M. Gill Esq., are now at this place in connection with their official and professional affatrs. As Inyoites residing in Bodie are rarely or never heard from after they leave here, it may interest friends to give the latest in reference to such as we do hear of as follows: T. A. Gardiner has gone to seek his fortune in Washington Territory; Mrs. P. W. Bennett and Mrs Geo. Gill are spending the Winter in San Francisco, and some account of others of our strayed citizens, now of Bodie, will be found chronicled elesewhere in these columns.

REMOVALS IN CONTEMPLATION.—Private advices from Bodie state that P. Reddy, Esq., has signified his intentions of removing to San Francisco permanently and establishing a law firm in that city. General Kittrel contemplates fixing his residence in Leadville and Miner, the Wade Hampton of the West, talks of casting his lot in some heathen nation who will appreciate his eloquence. This general thinning out of Blackstone will be a matter of congratulation among the younger legal meteors whose wisdom is quite on a par with the old roosters.

DIED.—A private letter to Dr. W. H. George of this place, from his brother, Dr. S. G. George, dated at Delano, Kern county, January 25, states: "I am here on my way to deposit the remains of B. S. Templeton in San Francisco. He died on Saturday last from rupture of the aneurismal sack." The deceased, as well as his brother, William, who died at this brother's reeidence in Tulare county, three or four years ago, were both former residents of this county, and where there remain many old friends to be deeply saddened in reading the above brief extract.

CROWDED OUT.—An interesting communication from Mr. C. F. O'Brion, now at San José, reached us too late for this issue, but will appear in our next. His many friends will be glad to hear that Mr. O'Brion has almost if not quite entirely recovered from the dangerous attack which compelled him to seek the sea shore, and also that he expects to visit this country again ere long.

PLEASE EXPLAIN.—The mailing fiend of the Bodie Free Press should be taken in charge by the "601" and expressed to that bourne where ordinary mail matter is preserved only by cremation or else an explanation is due from the proprietors thereof respecting the fact that other than one batch of weeklies no Bodie papers have been received at Independence for the past two weeks or more.

THIN.—These local and news columns look distressingly thin this week. But, by way of compensation, we give several columns relating to the property interests and money shortnesses of a very large number of very excellent citizens, as well as of a number of scrubs, all being mixed up together in alphabetical order.

GOT AWAY.—John Glenn, the cattle thief, of whom mention was made last issue, got notice of Sheriff Smith's coming, and "got up and dusted" from Olancha the same night the Sheriff arrived there. The cattle were recovered.

WEATHER.—It is showery to-day, and very warm for this season of the year. If this weather holds out a short time longer many trees and shrubs will be in full bloom,—and get nipped hereafter of course.

ADMITTED.—Chas. R. Barry of Bodie, formerly of this county, has been admitted to practice law before the Supreme Courts of California and Nevada.

ATTENTION.— The attention of those indebted to the estate of J. R. Westervelt, deceased, is hereby called to the notice of the executors of said estate in this issue.

REV. F. M. WILLIS will hold services at the Camp Independence school house at noon to-morrow, and in the evening in this place.

SUB-CONTRACTOR I. B. Giles is showing a commendable energy in getting the mail through from Bishop Creek to Mammoth, having arrived on Monday and Friday of the present week, bringing all the letter and newspaper mails. He promises to arrive again on Monday evening next. It would be well for parties in San Francisco to address their letters via Mojave, as that is the shortest and quickest route, and is open at all seasons of the year, while the Bodie route is liable to be snowed up, and communication suspended at any time during the prevailing storms.—Mammoth City Herald, Jan. 15.

WHEN we take up the great journals of Western cities, and find eight, twelve or sixteen pages, pasted at the back and cut apart at the top, we reflect that (with one exception) New York morning journals are decidedly behind the age.—N. Y. Mail.

PLANETARY BOSH.

There is a learned (?) ass in New York who is publishing column after column of prophesies of the direful evils that are to befall Mother Earth, beginning this year, all by reason of the presumed effect the conjunction of certain planets in perihelion would have upon the sun and the earth. The learned nincompoop and others like him base their conclusions chiefly on a legend of history that the last time these same planets were in conjunction in perihelion, which was 2,000 years ago, a great plague swept over the face of the earth. That is quite possible. It is also quite as certain that the earth has been similarly swept, often more cleanly, perhaps, a vast number of times since; but these planets were as far apart as they could well get during some of those sweeping plagues, while they were not in conjunction during any.

But the fact is the four alleged mischief making stars — Venus, Jupiter, Saturn and Neptune—do not come in conjunction at all this year, or during this generation. Jupiter and Saturn began to pull away from the sun and each other in September last, while the other two do not reach their nearest point to the sun and each other until next year, and as one of these is a very light weight, and the other remains a very long distance off at his nearest approach, we apprehend that the sun and every other planet will move right along as if nothing had happened.

Those birds of evil omen who have built their hopes of renown on the occurrence of their predicted convulsions of nature, pestilences, and the like, all to come of the operations of these little twinkling stars jointly bucking at the sun, now admit they have made a mistake in their calculations, and that the planet business is a fiasco, hugely disgraceful to the Mother Shipton ravens if not to the planets themselve. But there is one of these ravens who isn't going to be put down that way. This fellow has found a wild comet somewhere. and has it under contract to pitch head first into the sun and knock it into smithereens, thereby filling the firmament so full of fiery cinders that the earth will be roasted into one vast clinker, which of course would leave it unfit for anybody to live on, except these prophets of evil. This fellow has had so much to say about his comet and what it is going to do, the Washington Post sent reporters to the Government Astronomers at the Naval Observatory to find out what they knew about it. The reporter was assured that "it was too puerile to talk about." It was true a Mr. Swift (probably the prophet) had a comet now in sight, and Mr. S. thought it was coming head on for the earth. But Mr. S. was mistaken in two or three points. His was not a broncho comet at all; on the contrary, quite the reverse. Its motion was rapid, easily detected and calculated, and its period was about five and a half years; neither was it running for the sun nor coming head on for the earth; nor would it do any damage if it should pitch into us. At least there was no case on record where either the sun or the earth had been demolished as feared by these amateur astronomers. The reporter was further assured there was no other comet in sight.

The reporter went off entirely satisfied, and when a reporter is satisfied no one else need sell short.

THE Superintendent of the Census, by a very easy and accurate process applies the results of the tenth census to ascertaining what the population of the country will be in 1890. The approximation gives 64,500,000 souls. These figures are arrived at by what is called the method of "second differences," a well understood principle in statistical arithmetic, by means of which the constant elements in the progression of a population are eliminated from those which are occasional and variable. The rate of increase between 1870 and 1880 is compared with that between 1860, and this with that between 1850 and 1860, and the "second differences" used to check off the ratio and equalize it. The results obtained are very different from those which are derived from the simple striking of an average, and they are also much more positive and certain.

A DISPATCH from Tucson, Arizona, of the 23d says: Chas. Crocker and party returned from the terminus of the track of the Southern Pacific Railroad, and was entertained by the City Council during his stay here. Mr. Crocker stated that the Southern Pacific Railroad would cross the Rio Grand river two miles above El Paso, and they propose to complete the road to the Gulf of Mexico, a distance of 400 miles, by next October.

AN enraged Kentucky woman is a person to be avoided with much circumspection. A man there who had been guilty of conjugal infidelity was chased to the woods by a mob headed by the injured wife, who had him hung by the heels and half naked on a tree, where he nearly froze to death before being rescued by the neighbors.

THERE is a movement in Germany to have the Latin Union reconsider the Single Standard question, and as the Government has been obliged to once more utilize silver, it is quite likely that if the United States should propose another international silver conference, Germany would support a plan for a dual currency. Germany, France and Itilay, all want specie relief, and there is no way to obtain it except by remonetizing silver as we have done. Under the circumstances, it is no wonder that the demand for silver is increasing, and its price rising. This condition of affairs ought to create a new interest in bullion mining here, and we hazard nothing in predicting renewed activity henceforward, for there need be no fear of a glut of silver or a depreciation of value.

PROFESSOR Thomas Price says Southwestern Nevada, and more particularly Lida Valley and Gold Mountain districts contain some of the best mines in the State. The only drawback to their development is their inaccessibility, but that will be removed when the railroad south from Austin and the Carson and Colorado railway reach that vicinity. The State Line series of mines, in Gold Mountain District, are very valuable properties, and when the railroads reach a point in proximity to them, they will be large producers of the precious metals.

IN regard to affairs in Ireland, the indications now are that a land bill will be offered that will appease the moderate portion of the Irish party, and, by enlisting the support of the Conservatives, greatly weaken the Land League. Parnell proposes to govern Ireland through an Irish Parliament, according but a nominal allegiance to the British Crown. But rumor says serious dissensions exist among the Irish leaders. Gladstone's position requires a very high order of statesmanship to safely steer his ship of state through the present crisis.

SENATOR MAHONE and Representative A. H. Stephens are the physical lightweights of Congress; both together do not weigh over 190 pounds. Alabama once sent a representative to Washington who weighed (in body) more than four times as much as Stephens. The one was bulk without brains, the other is brains without bulk.

An Aboriginal Census Taker.

For the first time in the history of the State an Indian has been employed to take the census of the aboriginal tribes, for a month past. Chief Numana otherwise known as Captain Dave, has been appointed by Major Powell of the Indian Department to act as Census Supervisor. He has sent native enumerators all over the State to take the census.

One was in Carson recently and exhibited his census returns to an Appeal reporter in Frank Gilbert's office. On a sheet of blank paper he makes a circle, which, he says, represents a wickiup or camp. Within this circle he makes figures to represent the number of persons in the family. The sexes are designated in the circle so that none can mistake them, the squaws being adorned with lines representing gowns, while the lower extremities of the bucks are left naked. The figures are of various sizes to represent grown persons, youths and children. When a sheet is filled with these hieroglyphics, the Census Supervisor takes willow sticks, from two to four inches in length, with which he keeps a record of the number on the sheet. A full length stick represents a full grown man or woman, the sexes being designated by a notch in those representing the women. The shorter sticks are used to designate the size of the young Indians. When the census of a locality is taken, the bundles of sticks, representing the number of Piutes in the place and their size and sex, are tied up separately.

In this way an accurate census of the Piute tribe in this part of Nevada is being taken, and, to the Indians, the papers with the circles marked on them and the bundles of sticks are as intelligible as the printed sheets of the Census Bureau are to the whites.—Carson Appeal.

AMERICANS have been taught that the highest duty of manhood is to fight for hearth and home, and these Mussel Slough men have but fought for hearths and homes, wrongly, perhaps, because they resisted the courts. When a railroad corporation is on one side, and law, equity and the people are on the other, the courts are always with the corporation, and the courts in this case are more to blame than the settlers. If ever there was a case for Presidential clemency, it is that for these Mussel Slough farmers, for greater wrong than has been done them was never perpetrated even in Ireland. — S. F. Merchant.

AT its recent session the Board of Pardons refused the application of Alfred Chartz for pardon. It was a sad blow to Chartz and his friends, they having based their hopes strongly upon securing a pardon this time. It is hard on the prisoner, for if ever a man deserved the clemency of the pardoning power Chartz is the one. He now yields to inexorable fate and appears content to remain the few short years of his life within the prison walls.—Candelaria True Fissure.

MAJOR J. H. Nelson, Paymaster U. S. Army, who up to within a year ago frequently visited this city on his way to Fort Independence, and is well known to many Carsonites, has been found guilty of embezzlement by a general Court Martial, and sent to the Auburn State Prison for two years.—Carson Appeal.

BEE-CULTURE.—NO. V.

IMPLEMENTS FOR THE APIARY.

In a well regulated apiary quite a number of different implements are used, but the owner of a few stands of bees may of course get along with fewer tools. I shall describe those regarded as absolutely necessary, and briefly mention the remainder.

In the first place the bee keeper will protect his head and face with a bee-cap. This may simply be made of a flour sack, with a piece of wire, cloth, or black tarlatan inserted in front of the face. A sack of blue mosquito-bar, to pull over the head is often used, and is particularly handy for visitors. A still better bee-cap may be made by sewing a cylinder of wire-cloth to a stiff rimmed hat, and attaching a broad strip of cloth to the lower edge of the cylinder. A bee-cap is not always necessary, but should always be where it can be put on immediately when wanted. Bees very seldom sting the hands, and gloves of any kind are generally voted a nuisance. Next, the apiarist will arm himself with a smoker for quieting and subduing the bees. The simplest form of this is a roll of cotton or linen rags, rolled as hard as possible to prevent blazing, and tied every 1½ inches. A better smoker is manufactured, and consists of a fire-pot with a conicle nozzle made of tin, and attached to a small hand bellows. This bellows-smoker prevents the danger of fire in the apiary, and is more convenient than the roll in many respects. In examining the bees or carrying several combs from one hive to another, a comb holder or frame-rack is indispensible. This may be made of a board cleated on the under side, as wide as the bottom of the hive, and 2 one-inch square strips' supported by 4 uprights nailed to the corners of the board. The frames hang on the 2 one-inch strips. The bee keeper should always carry a tool box with him containing a little can of water, with a sponge for wiping up honey, a large feather for brushing bees off the comb, several queen cages and sets of transferring sticks, a pair of small scissors for clipping queens' wings, a small spirit level, a stout chisel or screw driver for loosening the frames, several differently shaped knives and some extra blocks, to be used in case of robbing. A covered can or tin pail for holding broken pieces of comb and scraps of beeswax will often be found convenient. The honey and wax extractors, sun strainer etc., will be described under "Marketing of Honey." The bee keeper should as a rule make his own hives, and at least part of his implements. He will therefore need a set of carpenter tools, soldering irons and tin shears. Where a planing and saw mill is near, the lumber for hives can be had of an even thickness, and the material for frames ripped out cheaper and better than it can be done by hand labor. For cutting off the frame stuff you will need a fine tenon saw and a mitre-box with gauges for the different pieces of the frame. Before nailing the frames together the sticks should be tied in bundles of, say, 50 each and soaked in water for at least 6 hours that they may not split in nailing. To hold the four pieces of the frame while nailing, is used a gauge block with a strong oval spring, which holds the two side pieces up against the respective cleats, and the frame will then come out square and true. One and one-quarter inch finishing nails are the best size for the frames. For a large apiary a foot or horse power circular saw is often very convenient, as also a comb foundation machine. Some kind of scales on which to set an average colony are sometimes used, that the bee keeper may judge how much the bees are gaining or losing in weight every day. To keep the run of the hives, queens, honey yield, etc., you will want a record book, and a small slate or card on each hive; also a number or some other particular mark on each hive. Finally the bee keeper needs a seperate building, called the honey house, in which he may extract, transfer, store his honey and empty combs and cans or honey boxes, work on rainy days etc. The honey house should be well lighted, and the windows provided with wire-cloth shutters to exclude bees in the summer time. It should be arranged in some way to keep out ants, who are a great pest in many apiaries, and should be built strong enough to sustain a heavy weight when honey is coming in freely and must be stored "where thieves and moths can not destroy" it.

IN 1830 all gentlemen in Washington smoked corncob pipes and plantation tobacco, while only only the diplomatic corps smoked cigars, according to a writer in the Atlantic Monthly.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

THIS HONEY WAS REMOVED FROM THE comb by centrifugal force, with a machine made for the purpose. It is therefore virtually the same as honey in the comb, only you don't have to eat the bees-wax, which is indigestible and therefore disagrees with many persons. When first extracted the honey is liquid, but nearly all pure honey will candy or granulate in course of time, especially if exposed to the cold. Putting the cans in hot water for a short time will bring the honey to its fluid state without injury.

This Honey is put up in 10-pound cans, with patented screw tops, which renders it convenient for family use, and especially for the mines, to which it may be packed, even upside down, without leakage. A neat label on each can gives full directions.

Price, $1 50 per can, or 12½ cents per ℔ at the Apiary, if customers furnish their own receptacle. For sale at Harris & Rhine's, Independence, and at the Apiary, at Henry Fehrman's place, Camp Independence.

BEE-CULTURE.—NO. VI.

BREEDING AND QUEEN REARING.

In my fourth article I described the queen cells, their appearance, and how they are built on the comb. When bees prepare to swarm, the queen deposits a worker, or female egg in one or several queen cells, or the bees remove an egg from a worker to a queen cell, or construct a queen cell over an egg in the worker comb. This egg, from the moment it hatches into a tiny grub is supplied with a milky-white, slightly acid food especially prepared for it, and called royal jelly. So abundantly is this food furnished by the bees that the embryo-queen literally swims in it, and this royal jelly is no doubt the principal means by which the worker egg is developed into a perfect female bee. The queen spins a cocoon in the cell like the bees, but this cocoon only envelops her head and breast, the object of which defect will be seen further on. Sixteen days after the egg was laid the young queen bites her way out of the cell, and immediately proceeds to hunt up the other queen cells, biting into them above the cocoon and killing their inmates, which she would not be able to do if the cocoon extended from base to tip of the cell. If two queens happen to hatch at the same time they will fight until one succeeds in killing the other. It is therefore of importance to know when the eggs were laid, and when the queens may be expected to hatch, that the bee keeper may remove the cells before the first queen hatches out.

As it is desirable to always have queen cells on hand during swarming time, the bee keeper starts them by depriving a vigorous colony of its laying queen, who may be introduced to a queenless stock, or with a few combs with adhering bees used to form a nucleus or small colony. These queenless stock will now raise a number of queen cells which will be capped over and ready to cut out in 9 or 10 days. How they are disposed of will be described under the head of "swarming." There are other ways of raising queen cells, too circumstantial to find a place in this brief article.

When the young queen is from three to five days old she flies out to mate with one of the drones, and generally succeeds the first time. But as she is liable to be caught by birds, larger insects or lost in various other ways, it is necessary that there should be quite a number of drones flying at the same time, so that her bridal trip may be ended as quickly as possible. If the queen should be lost the colony will be without means of rearing a new one, for after the grubs are over two days old (five days from the time the egg was laid) they are incapable of being converted into queens. The colony will therefore dwindle away for want of young bees to replace the old ones that are constantly dying, and will fall an easy prey to robbers and moth worms, unless the bee keeper comes to their aid in time, by supplying them with another queen, cell, or brood from which to rear a queen. Here is where the fertile workers come in, and after one of these bees has been installed in the queen's place it is almost impossible to make the colony raise, or accept of a new queen; but the stock must be broken up and distributed among other hives, or it will ultimately perish. In a couple of days after mating, which, if successful, lasts her for her life time, the queen begins to lay, and will during the first year lay mostly worker eggs. She has the power to deposit at will either worker (female) or drone (male) eggs, and never makes a mistake in regard to placing them in the right kind of cell. Many bee keepers practice clipping one or more of the queen's wings, the object of which is, that as she cannot fly, the bees, when they swarm, will return in search of their queen, and may then easily be hived. But great care should be taken that she is not clipped before she is positively known to lay worker eggs (a virgin queen will sometimes lay drone eggs before she is impregnated) as in that case she would not be able to fly out, and consequently would become a drone layer for life. After she has commenced laying the queen does not leave the hive any more, except to accompany a swarm.

Sometimes the bees will raise a young queen when the old one begins to fail, and both mother and daughter will be found doing duty until the old queen dies a natural death. The life of a good queen is ordinarily from 3 to 5 years. The workers and drones are fed on a less concentrated food, and hatch in 21 and 24 days, respectively. During the Summer the workers wear themselves out in from three to six weeks, but after the honey season is over many of them will live till the next Spring, when broodrearing and old age puts an end to the old bees from last year.

LETTER FROM BEVERIDGE DISTRICT.

FREEBORN CAÑON, Jan. 28.

MESSRS. EDITORS—Thinking that a few lines from this isolated but stirring little camp might be of some interest to some of your readers we take the liberty of writing you a few lines. Go with us seven miles down the cañon and we will land you at Taylor, McEvoy & Co's. mill; this is a five-stamp pulverizer and reflects credit on Mr. Taylor, the millwright, for the neat and substantial manner of its construction.

They are cleaning up at the present writing, after a run on good ore, and we look foa a reported bullion shipment in your columns of some importance. We have had the pleasure of visiting only one of their mines, the New Year, which is within a few hundred yards of the mill, which is under the foremanship of Mr. McEvoy. We went down the incline and through the drifts and stopes, and saw a sight both pleasing and dazzling to the eye; on every side could be seen white honeycombed ore, spangled with gold. This mine is a bonanza of itself, and if the other mines prove as good as this one their bullion shipments will be of importance in the near future.

Leaving their camp we proceed down the cañon about a mile and find ourselves confronted by a large stone cabin; this is the domicile of Dominico, Calsagia & Co, who have two very promising mines on the south side of the cañon, viz: the Union, and Philadelphia. They have run a tunnel in the Union about forty feet, have some very good ore on the dump, and ore on both sides of the tunnel its entire length. These mines are about a quarter of a mile from water and are on the leading lode of the cañon.

Bidding adieu to Calsagia's camp we proceed down the cañon a quarter of a mile and arrive at the cabin of your humble servants; we now feel at home, and will proceed to tell you of our mines, hopes and expectations. Our company consists of four men, only three of whom are in the cañon. We have six claims, all of them prospecting well, but will describe those only that we have done work on.

The Junietta is a quarter of a mile from camp on the south side of the cañon; we have run an incline into the ledge twenty-five feet and have taken out some good ore, some of it showing gold. The ledge is a foot wide and crops out for two hundred feet.

Next comes the New Year's Gift. This mine is east of the Junietta and about the same distance from water; it is on the same lode and between the Union and Philadelphia mines. We have stripped this ledge forty feet and have about twenty tons of ore on the dump. The ledge averages three feet in width and crops out the entire length of the claim; some of the ore shows gold and it is the largest and heaviest gold we have seen in the cañon. We consider this our best mine. A company with a ten-stamp mill and a tramway to the mine could work all the rock and make it pay well.

Next we will take you to the Sunrise mine, on the north side of the cañon. We are working on it at present; have stripped it fifty feet and have ore all the way. We have started a tunnel and expect to take out sufficient ore to make a good run at Taylor, McEvoy & Co.'s mill in the Spring. This ledge is about a foot wide and crops out in places for six hundred feet.

The latest news from the Mexican camp, is, in effect, that they have struck two hundred dollar ore in one of their mines; all the arastras are running and everyone is busy there. Capitalists are little timid in coming here the country being too rugged for them, but a few good bullion shipments will bring them, and then Beveridge will rival Bodie in the production of bullion. This may lack weight with the public, coming as it does from interested parties, but the near future will bear us out in the assertion. Respectfully, yours,

STEPHEN DECKER & Co.

Since closing this we understand the little mill of Taylor, McEvoy & Co have made a clean-up of about $4,000.

A REPRESENTATIVE in the Missouri Legislature has introduced a bill making drunkennes a misdemeanor punishable by fine and imprisonment.

Desert Land Laws.

It is reported by telegraph, that Mr. Pacheco has introduced a bill amending the Desert Land Act of 1877, so as to allow persons making entries under it six years instead of three to reclaim the lands by bringing water on them. At the last session a law was enacted providing for the return of fees and purchase money paid by settlers for entries on public lands in cases where applications were erroneously allowed, or where, for any other reason, the Government could not convey titles. This act was intended to apply to payments made under the Desert Land law, but it has been held to be inapplicable to cases where persons, after making the cash payment, abandoned their entries, rather than prosecute a contest with the Government as to the character of the lands. Page has, therefore, introduced a bill expressly covering such cases of abandonment by proving that upon the execution of proper relinquishments, all parties who have thus entered and abandoned desert lands, the entries of which have been suspended by the Secretary of the Interior, shall receive back the amounts paid by them as purchase money, as soon as their respective entries are cancelled.

A TUCSON dispatch of January 30, says: Rumors are rife in town to-night of another Indian massacre at the front. It is said that a stage has been captured and one passenger and the driver killed and a lady carried off, the latter having been afterward rescued by the military. Also it is stated that an officer and the driver of his ambulance have been wounded. The only accurate news is that the stage coming from the terminus of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé road due at Deming on this side at 11 o'clock last night, is eighteen hours behind time and as yet nothing has been heard from it. The railroad officials do not attribute much importance to this fact.

THE eloquent Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll broke down at the funeral of his sister on the 19th instant and could not deliver the oration as was expected. Eastern journals say that in appearance he aged ten years within five days after his sister's death. Ingersoll's love for his sister was as passionate as that of Mendelssohn (who suddenly ceased playing upon the piano a piece of music, in which he was deeply absorbed, at the very instant his sister died in a distant land), and the whole country will watch with impatience for an obituary from the eloquent pen of the bereaved brother who delivered such a splendid oration over a dead brother two years ago.

A TELEGRAM from London states that the rector of Rufford, near Ormskirk, in Lancashire, has received a letter asking him to warn the proper authorities to watch carefully the valuable jewelry of Lady Hesketh (nee Miss Sharon), and the family plate of Sir Thomas Hesketh, of Rufford Hall. The latter also warned them to remove all means of ingress while the family were dining. Sir Thomas and his California bride arrived at Rufford to-day. The baggage was escorted to the Hall by the police. Every precaution was taken to insure its safety.

THERE is a project on foot for the construction of a railroad from Oakland to Bridgport, and thence through Nevada to connect with the Nevada Southern, which runs south from Austin. Mr. Carsedo, an engineer lately in the employ of the Nevada and Oregon, writes to a friend in Reno that he has been engaged to conduct the preliminary survey.—Reno Journal.

THE Gold Hill News suggests—now that the Chilians have licked the Peruvians and token their capital, Lima, and their principal seaport, Callao—they should get up some sort of a consolidation bill and both come under one government, inasmuch as they are virtually one people, both speaking Spanish, all looking alike, and enjoying fleas, lice and watermelons in common.

THE Secretary of the Treasury has ordered that all the clerks of the Executive Departments be paid forty per cent. of their salary in gold from and after the first of February. The vaults of the Treasury building are overstocked, and this order is made for the purpose of relieving them and putting the coin into more general circulation.

CHILI AND PERU.

On the 14th of January the decisive battle of the bloody war which has been raging for three years past between Peru and Chili was fought at Chorillos, nine miles from Lima, the Peruvian capital. The Peruvians suffered terribly in killed and wounded. In numbers the two armies were about equal, with the advantages of position decidedly in favor of the Peruvians. But the Peruvian Generals seemed to have less courage and less ability than the average railroad Chinaman. Three days later the Chilians entered Lima, and in position to dictate their own terms of peace. These terms will not be remarkable for mildness.

"The war, which has resulted so disastrously to Peru, originated in a dispute about some nitrate grounds belonging to Bolivia. In 1875 the latter had ceded its nitrate grounds at Antofagasto to the Anglo-Peruvian house of Gibbs, by whom part of it was sold to some Chilian houses; and it was only after the transfer of these grounds to the Chilian merchants that the Bolivian Government laid a heavy export duty on the nitrate, on the suggestion, it is supposed, of the Peruvian Government. The Chilian Government, who probably saw in this a good opportunity for a quarrel, took up the quarrel of its merchants, and hence this war."

Bolivia became the ally of Peru, but it would seem, only to betray her. It is certain that several Bolivian officers in high command displayed the most arrant cowardice, in one instance causing Peru to lose two armies and one whole department. At the same time, however, the Peruvian military leaders proved that they were little more than vaunting imbeciles themselves.

The result will probably be that Chili will get not only all the nitrate grounds of Peru but also of Bolivia. The latter as a reward for her treason will be given some Peruvian ports—Arica, Pisagua, and Iquique, or some one of the three if no more. Chili will take the rest, or as many as suits her.

THE STORM.

During the past two weeks the rainfall throughout the State has been fearfully heavy, with damages to correspond. Beginning with San Francisco, nearly six solid inches of water fell during the 48 hours ending at 8 o'clock of the evening of January 30, making a total of 20.39 for the season. Sewers collapsed, bursted and choked, and several streets are for the time being entirely ruined; all the dwellers in cellars have been run out like gophers in flood times, and low-lying portions of the city are submerged with water and mud.

Innumerable washouts, breaks and submergencies have occurred on all the railroads in the State. Owing to these troubles, traffic was entirely suspended for several days on the roads centering at Vallejo and Benicia. In Napa valley large areas of crops have been utterly destroyed, and a number of bridges and buildings swept away. Similar damages are reported from almost every point north from Stockton to Portland, Oregon. The river at Sacramento rose 26 feet, but the levees held, and the city escaped damage from that source, as also did Marysville, though the escape of the latter was exceedingly narrow. The Klamath river is reported to have risen 82 feet. The rainfall at Los Angeles did not exceed half an inch, that being about the southern limit of the storm. Altogether probably a million dollars' worth of property has been destroyed by this storm, which is the severest since since 1861-62. But the plenteous supply of water so late in the season will compensate losses many times over in the way of increased crops, though as a rule those who make the gains in that way are not the same who have suffered the losses.

SOMETIME ago a cowardly cutthroat named Buford, in Kentucky, deliberately murdered Judge Elliott because the latter in the line of his official duty had rendered a decision by which a brother of the cutthroat had been deprived of some property. After the usual delays, the assassin was finally brought to trial—so called—and on the 29th of the past month the jury brought in a verdict of "not guilty, it appearing that the defendant was insane at the time of firing the fatal shot." Of course he was. The average price of the jurors could not have been less than $500 each, except the few who belonged to the "fust families," like Mr. Buford, and had themselves each in times past been thankful for a similar verdict in their own cases. There is no stain attaching to the Bufords now, of course.

STOCKS continue on the down grade, and the belief prevails that there will never be another boom until the Miners' Union at Virginia City disbands.

OUR SACRAMENTO LETTER.

The "New Confusion"—Various Topics.

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 28.

EDITORS INDEPENDENT—By the way, from what I saw and heard in Arizona and New Mexico recently, the name of your paper is doubly significant. You have a big territory all to yourself, while everywhere else in California and south of this State, even extending into old Mexico, type appears to be raining down upon the heads of the districts started and prospective. No sooner does one editorial or type-sticking mortal start a paper than he is followed by from one to three others, and so there is no independence in the business for anyone. The printing and publishing fraternity are never so independent and happy as when engaged in cutting each others' throats; hence, when I return to the business, I want your paper and location, where there is no one to molest. I look upon Inyo as one of, if not the most,

INDEPENDENT

Counties and communities extant. You are less bothered by hand-organs, tramps and map peddlers and people wanting to come to Sacramento for clerkships, etc., than any other part of the State.

I doubly appreciate the compliment paid me by the people at the polls last November, though, in view of our glorious

NEW CONSTITUTION,

They never could do it again until that instrument is so amended that its best friends could not recognize any portion of the original. The best men here feel like so many knots on so many logs, so far as the opportunity to do any good for certain for themselves or any one else. Take the case of classifying counties by population, with a view to a new law governing counties, and it is enough to render a salamander wild with rage and despair. For instance, Mono and San Mateo fall together. Now, you could drive all over the latter in a day, and it does not cost one-half as much to live and run things as in the former, where interests are scattered over all outdoors, so to speak. Every step one takes with respect to new laws, and useful ones, especially, he is confronted by the Supreme Court. It is becoming a serious question of a constitutional character with some of the best talent in the State, whether or not all amendments to those codes and statutes created under the old regimé are not class or special in character as the original may or may not be. Should this so turn out, the Court would knock down all before it like ten pins. One of the drawbacks, I think, to the obtaining a good classification law either for counties or towns and cities, is the attempt of would-be fathers of bills to do and insist upon too much. This delays matters no little, you can readily understand; but human nature is so constituted that it is impossible to expect 120 men, with a constituency of a million, more or less, behind them, to do better. They have so many other bills of personal interest or pride involved, that there is no expecting them to center upon three or four points of legislation most needed by the community at large, and do the work and adjourn sine die. A State so new in the civilized world as California, so varied in its interests, climate, soil, altitudes and inaccessibleness, so vast in area, will need special or local legislation for a century to come. You do not hear any blowing about the Constitution any more by the most blatant of the self-styled reformers; in fact, hardly any one who even mentions having voted for it. It has proven a two-edged sword to them, and they generally feel more cut up and sore than the people they intended to "cinch."

Thus far the work of the present Legislature has chiefly consisted in killing rather than passing bills, of which there have been ten fold too many. San Francisco, the top-heavy metropolis of the State, is prolific in bills and schemes. Instead of a healthy leaven, that city plays the part more of an indigestible ball of putty in affairs, it being so out of proportion to the rest of the State. It is so easy for all sorts of schemers, strikers and beats outright, male and female, to flock here from the city and return, that the Capitol was more like a bee-hive of drones and butterflies during the first two weeks of the session, and so complete are the old lobbyists and organizers of the average California Legislatures, that everything on this occasion appeared to have been "fixed" a month before it begun. My influence in the way of patronage, at the eleventh hour, fell short of getting a lame boy the position of page; somehow or other, however, he limped into the more quiet place of assistant gate-keeper, and is happy of course. There is getting to be a fine procession of political hangers-on about Sacramento, and more coming every year. Men with one arm gone where the woodbine twineth, others with one leg shorter than the other, and pieced out with extra sole-leather, lightning rods, etc., etc. It would be a godsend were King Stanford to raise the fare from $1.50 to $150 between here and San Francisco.

MY CHIEF AFFLICTION

Has not been in applications for position on the part of my constituents proper, but a set of acquaintances who manage, the Lord knows how, to keep better clothed than I can afford, yet neither toil or spin—except around the central blocks of San Francisco. They have known me in the mines somewhere and so play out the game, rather than leave the sidewalks and take to the highways with a shot gun, as any independent person would prefer to do for a living. I have seen a score or so of this sort of cattle return to Pauper Alley, sadder if not wiser men. It may may be best that the depression in Comstocks has been so prolonged. It has surely seen many incapables retire to pastures new.

The session was organized, United States Senator elected, and all without anything in the way of excitement. There has been more or less

BUNCOMBE

Over anti-Chinese measures, suffering Ireland and the Mexican war veterans of Confederate antecedents, as there always was and will be in California legislatures; but nothing like real war occurred until yesterday, when the anti-debris members got upon their ears—an extensive climb for some of them—and got away with a resolution to visit Yuba dam, etc., in a body. However, that is an ugly question, whatever way you may take it, and the end is not yet. I begin to doubt whether anything will be done about irrigation this session, aside from the appointment of a commission to investigate for future purposes.

It is possible the Governor will call an extra session, though very much disinclined to. In the absence of Braunhart, Maybell and Judge Tyler, et al, the Governor is stepping in to relieve the monotony for those who are strangers to Sacramento society. He gave the members a banquet and lots of buncombe through the orators of the occasion, and now proposes (February 16) to give them a dance. About the 4th of March the people will call them home and tell them to go to the devil and shake themselves.

The occasion of this open letter is the fact that you utilized at length several of my private ones, indicating that you might as readily find a place for one intended for publication. I am sorry there is little or nothing of special interest to write about, without filling your entire paper with details.

It is to be hoped that some amendments to the New Confusion will be ready for submission to the people at the next general election, and that in the course of a generation the State will have settled down to an appreciation of its own great natural resources, and that all parts will be as self-supporting, independent and happy as the county of Inyo!

In the course of a week or ten days I may make another attempt to interest your readers. J. W.

LETTER FROM "OLD INYOITE."

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 31, 1881.

MESSRS. EDITORS—I am haunted with a dim recollection of a promise to give you a few items from this gay city. The promise was given conditionally—that all errors should be quite overlooked by your austerely grammatical senior, and if put in print for the benefit of your readers, my effusions should, after corrections and embellishments, be dished up in style for the readers of THE INYO INDEPENDENT. With this assurance on your part I stand up (contrary to the custom of sitting down) to scribble you the promised items worthy of note in the gay city of San Francisco as impressed on the mind of your correspondent.

Visitors from the East, from Europe, and many from the interior, make it a point of going into raptures over the miles of streets of this city, its pretensions buildings, especially the lordly mansions on "Nob Hill," its cheap and luxurious living, its facilities for town travel, comprising horse, cable and steam cars, the manly appearance of the men [?], the beauty of the women, the magnificent bay, with stately ships riding gracefully at anchor, the screeching of a thousand steam whistles, all indicative of a thriving, busy, manufacturing city, &c., &c. True, my lord, 'tis true—but have you ever dived 'neath the surface? Have you ever lifted the mask from the face of what you thought was beauty personified and discovered a death's head, with its ghastly hollows where beautiful, beaming eyes should have been to meet your gaze?

'Tis true this city at first sight appears to be one of the most favored spots on God's earth. But to those of keen sense and sound judgment the seeming prosperity of San Francisco is but a hollow sham. For a special instance of my assertion, I ask you (with leisure at your command) to stand with me on Montgomery street any day at about 12 o'clock. Throngs of people pass to and fro. Nearly all are well dressed. Many—especially the female portion—elegantly so. Few but have the appearance of general prosperity. But you watch them as I have been told to do, and have done. Nine out of ten glance furtively at the stock reports hung up in the windows of brokers after every session of the Board. Some smile a gastly smile, others with compressed lips walk gloomily away, uttering imprecations loud and deep. The cry on all sides (except one) is, "busted through stocks." Ruination—swift in former years, slower at present, is universally attributed to this cause. The infatuation still goes on, but, in so picayunish a style that it is hoped the false, glittering bubble will burst so effectually as to be never again revived. Notwithstanding the extreme depression in this miserable mode of gambling and its consequent ruin and misery San Francisco still keeps up its gay deceptive appearance.

THE THEATRES

Are all doing well. The Bush street theatre, the Baldwin and others of less note are nightly filled. The best paying place of amusement in the city, however, is the Tivoli, at which English opera, lager, cigars, oysters or anything edible or drinkable are dispensed at most reasonable prices. At this place, fathers and families—wives, daughters and babies can be seen seated around a table en famille, drinking beer, munching peanuts, smoking cigars, while listening to the woes and triumphs of Cinderella, as personified by Miss Hattie Moore, assisted by the gay Harry Gates. This place is crowded nightly, and plays smash with the legitimate drama—if there is such a thing as legitimate drama on the Pacific coast at present. Fact is, in matter of amusements, the further the divergence from the legitimate (barring the first three letters of the last word) the better it takes. For instance, go to the Adelphi; that's a place that takes. Buckley understands human nature, and so does Uncle Billy—if you know who the latter distinguished personage is. 'Tis crowded nightly, with males only for spectators, although the performers are mostly ladies; and the way they do things there—especially in the private boxes, is simply "nif."

I will not intrude too much on your valuable space and time this week, but may at some future time write you up the Bella Union and other delectable places of amusement that are thriving in this gay and model city of the Pacific coast, but for the nonce, "Sufficient for the day is the evil thereof."

THE WEATHER

Lately, has been simply tempestuous; rain, rain, to such an extent that for the first time in many years cellars have been flooded, sewers washed to smithereens and a heap of damage done in a most unexpected manner. The sun shone out a few moments this afternoon, simply to fool the wicked people hereabouts, for, before they had their umbrellas neatly folded the rain came down in drenching torrents.

I often meet many

OLD INYOITES

Rambling around the city, and with them chat about Inyo's past, present and future prospects, among them Hutchins and Hudgins, both formerly connected with the Silver Sprout mine. Capt. Eudey, lately connected with the Eclipse mine, is also here with his family, his time being mostly employed in examining and reporting upon mines for wealthy speculators. Miss Lizzie, his youngest and only unmarried daughter, has grown to be quite a charming young lady and is going to school to finish her education. Her sister, nee Miss Annie Eudey, now Mrs. Geo. Gill, is also here staying with the family on a visit. Miss Eva Shepherd who honored me with a call, is considerably improved in appearance and also benefiting in the severe school training which she is at present receiving at the model young ladies' seminary in Oakland. V. Hoff Esq., formerly of Lone Pine and Cerro Gordo, lives with his large family in handsome style on Taylor street. His on Mark, a favorite with the young people of your county, is at present staying with his parents, but the city's attractions keep him from home most of the "we sma hours." T. S. Harris, an indomitable originator, publisher and editor of newspapers, both in Inyo and Mono counties, is rushing about the city endeavouring to form a company for the purpose of locating, holding and selling properties in New Mexico, and also for the purpose of establishing newspapers on the line of the new trans-atlantic railroad. His enterprise is a commendable one and I have not the least doubt he will succeed in his undertaking. Sam Cowles starts to-morrow for Inyo. I shall miss his genial smile. A more noble hearted young man than S. W. C. never placed foot in Inyo. He has been in the city for the past two months arranging his deceased father's estate. Sam is a chip of the old block—for the name of the late Judge Cowles is associated only with everything good, just and upright. I am sorry to inform you that A. Wingard, another of our pioneers, met wito a most distressing accident, having slipped from a sidewalk and broken his leg. This I have from good authority, and if I only knew his address would call and tender him my sympathy. There! is not this gossip enough for one letter? Yes, and more than enough, methinks I hear you say. Now then, to biz. The Chronicle has offered me $50 a letter to go down to Los Vegas and write up that country for them, but knowing the vast amount of money you are realizing in editing THE INYO INDEPENDENT and knowing how much you desire a reliable correspondent in the city, for which you can well afford to pay much more than that insignificant sum, I hold myself at your services, and so until further arrangements you may expect to occasionally hear from an

OLD INYOITE.

LETTER FROM SAN JOSE.

SAN JOSE, CAL., Jan. 22, 1880.

MESSRS. EDITORS—When I left you on or about the last of September, 1880, there was in my opinion a possibility of a possibility of my not seeing you or any of your numerous patrons soon again. You are all well aware of my internally busted condition, of the large amount of red vein life I was made to evolve, of its still continuing to flow when leaving, together with the weakness and prostration it left me in, with a 160-mile stage ride before me to reach the great southern artery of railroad transportation of our State, a journey that often with its thumps and jolts, dreadful to think of, caused me to remember those oft repeated words, "Nearer, my God, to Thee."

My mind was made up to get home, and that, too, as soon as possible. I was gradually weakening, still raising blood, and Dr. George's advice was for me to reach a lower altitude as soon as possible. Summoning up all the nerve power at command, I resolved to make the trip or fall by the wayside. Arrived at home my weight was 150 pounds, but strength all gone; but now I am happy to state I weigh 172 pounds, feel strong again, and able to walk five or six miles per day. I feel that I have the best of my troubles, and that I am good for the rest of the century. For the benefit of those who have never tried to cough their insides out, would say that the sensation is anything but inspiring, causing a sort of feeling as though one was as it were dangling between the terrestial and celestial spheres, uncertain in which he would finally fall. The best thing to do is simply to resign yourself to the will of the Giver of all good, and if you have to go, try and feel that it is the best of all things, but of all things, do not weaken—fight for more of lite. But under all circumstances look upon Death

"As a kind and welcome visitor
Who opens, with noiseless hands,
Life's flower encircled door,
And shows us those we love."

The prospects in Santa Clara valley were never better for fine harvests in all branches of agriculture, and both farmers and business men feel highly elated, and the best of humor prevails.

The State Normal School opened last Monday, under the most favorable auspices, having on the first day an attendance of 400 students. From my own observations, this branch of business—teacher making—is somewhat overdone. The supply already made, ready for use, is beyond the demand, and for the sake of the many teachers already made, but unable to obtain employment, would it not be well to stop this branch of the teacher making business for a few years, thereby saving a great deal of expense to the State, and not to start in again until a large quantity of the manufactured article on hand, out of employment, could find a demand for their services? The new Normal School building is approaching completion, and will no doubt be ready for occupation by April. It is a fine structure, plain but substaintial, is better proportioned, and with some 4,000 feet more of usable surface than the one lately burned.

I see by your paper that Inyo county still lives; that particularly Darwin and vicinity are showing to San Francisco people that there are still precious metals up in those parts. I am firmly of the opinion that in time our mines will prove the same as those in Eureka, Nevada. We must have depth upon the veins in order to get satisfactory results. The further down we get on true fissure veins, the nearer we approach the mineral fountain head. The prospecting thus far done in western Inyo in particular is really superficial. To illustrate my idea, let us compare the vein to a tree: the surface ores (where we are yet prospecting) represent the branches; following down any one of these, will lead to the main body or trunk, which, in turn, leads to its roots, or perhaps to—well, I'll not undertake now to say.

Mr. J. C. Eddy and J. F. Fiedler have, since my arrival here, kept me pretty well posted in relation to matters about Darwin and vicinity. And thus I learn that that part of the country seems to have taken a start out of its long state of lethargy, and slowly but surely I hope is coming to its past best conditions of prosperity. Old faces have returned, determined, Grant like, "to fight it out on this line," etc. Our old timer, J. J. Gunn, who has a capacious head for seeing some distance in the future, tells his opinion of the camp by building a fine saloon. Messrs. Grant & Johnson, who have abilities of the same sort, prove their faith by having gone into business there. Jack Davis, too, has returned with all his teams from Bodie. Davis says he is not favorably impressed with a country where you have to "thaw" the whisky before drinking. And old Jack Johnson, too, has returned to his first love. Now, Messrs. Editors, in conclusion, I claim that the returning of the boys after wandering for years, coupled with the fact that Messrs. Gorman & Eddy have in their last run taken out some 250 tons bullion, the Modoc 100 tons, and Panamint a number of bars of silver, and gold bullion from our gold prospects, all go to show that the camp was not dead but only sleeping, and ere long will come again to the front in brighter bullion glory than ever.

I am still under the physician's care, and will not expect to return until he pronounces it safe for me to do so, which I hope will be soon, as I am anxious to be in the good fight. Regards to friends. Yours truly,

C. F. O'BRION.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 5 1881

BEVERIDGE BULLION.—The new mill at Freeborn Cañon, Beveridge District, belonging to P. Taylor & Co., cleaned up its first run this week. The clean-up was good as expected, as most of the ore worked was that which had been left on the dumps as unprofitable to handle in the old arastras. The amount deposited with Wells, Fargo & Co., was 202 ounces, amounting at $16 50 per ounce to $3,333. The work was done under difficulties which will not be encountered during the coming Summer months, and as all the mines are showing up splendidly, we may look for increased and regular shipments of gold bullion from this quarter. During the week, also, Antone Moreno, of what is known as the Mexican Camp of the same district, from a two weeks run of five arastras, shipped 150 58-100 ounces, worth $14 50 per ounce and amounting to $2,184.

SUPERIOR COURT.—On the 29th ult. Judge Hannah issued an order requiring the Board of Supervisors to immediately select and list the names of forty Grand Jurors and eighty trial jurors, "good and lawful persons of Inyo County" to act as such jurors in the Superior Court for the year ending January 1st, 1882. On January 31st information was filed by District Attorney Laird charging Charles Baker with the crime of robbery, and upon Baker being arraigned, S. P. Moffat, Esq., was appointed counsel. Baker entered a plea of not guilty and February 21st set as the day for trial. Information was also filed charging H. Lufkin with the crime of assault with a deadly weapon.

INDIVIDUAL MENTION.—H. L. Childs and George M. Gill left on their return trip to Bodie last Monday, after a pleasant visit here....Martin Mee and Frank Fitzgerald, from Darwin and Lookout, gave us a brief call during the week....Judge A. R. Conklin left this morning for San José, San Francisco and the Capital, hoping to reach the latter place in time Monday next to attend a conference of Legislators and others in relation to re-districting the State; he will be absent about two weeks, attending to some Supreme Court cases during the time....W. L. Hunter, Thos. Moran, John Lubken, Lyman Tuttle, L. Lasky, C. D. Begole and others aided to swell our transient population for the week.

FROM GOLD MOUNTAIN.—Managing Superintendent I. M. Taylor, of the celebrated State Line mine at Gold Mountain, lately spent several days in town. It was his first visit, and he sees now wherein he could have saved much money and valuable time in getting the vast amount of supplies required for his new operations all from this direction instead of freighting from the railroad north, over the Nevada Central. While here he purchased four miles of 4-inch water pipes, and some ten tons of grain, and also contracted with Sheriff Smith for 40,000 feet of lumber, or as much more as he can deliver.

SWANSEA.—On Thursday last, upon a telegraphic order from New York, Messrs. Harris & Rhine paid to Thos. Moran, John Lubken and Martin Mee $1,250, as a preliminary payment on the purchase of the Single Star, Dreadnaught, Warrior and Silver Eagle ledges, in Swansea district. The purchasers compose the Cerro Gordo M. Co., Dr. Cottrell and John H. Ely being the promoters. The mines are small but the veins are perfect and the ore remarkably high grade. The amount paid is about one-sixth of the whole purchase price.

FUN.—The Independence Jockey Club is perfecting arrangements for racing at the Club track on March 4th and 5th. Among other proposed attractions, as we are authorized to state, D. W. James proposes to run 150 yards against 300 yards by any horse in the county, for money, marbles or greenbacks. Such a contest would be a fair gamble, with the odds neither way. Mary Hammond and Little Tricks, the racers, are talked of, either of which Mr. James is willing to run.

PANAMINT.—A private letter from San Francisco states that Senator J. P. Jones has leased the mill and property of the Surprise Valley M. & M. Co. at Panamint to an Oakland party for one year. Several of the lessees are now at Panamint making arrangments for extensive work. A party well acquainted with matters there predicts that Panamint will soon arise to something near its former glory and importance, this time on a solid, bullion producing basis.

FOOT RACE.—Arrangements have been about completed for an 85 yard foot race between H. C. Johnson, of Nevada, and Dan'l. Crough, of this place, for $500 and upwards aside, of which Mr. Crough has deposited $250 forfeit. The contest is to come off at this place about the 4th of March next. Though beaten in his last effort, it is thought by many that Dan will cause the noted Nevada racer to get up "powerful lively" if he wins.

MEETING.—The Board of Supervisors well meet in regular session on Monday next. There will doubtless be a full Board present (as we understand Mr. Meysan has returned home from his trip to Los Angeles) consisting of Mr. Olds, Mr. Meysan and the Supervisor elect from this district—E. Robinson Esq.

DARWIN.—The Defiance furnace will be fired up again about the 20th, for a run of ore from the Phœnix, or old Promontorio mine. It is also stated that the New Coso furnaces will be started up by Tom Moran and others, for a run on ore from the Hindoo mine.

THE COMING EXCITEMENT.

Gold Mountain—State Line Mine—Tule Canyon—Ingots of Gold.

In the following article it is proposed to give such points of interest as can be compiled in the brief time allowed us to-day concerning a portion of the great Back Country of Owens Valley—that lying off to the east of the Inyo Range, and which must make this country its base of supplies and, when much needed roads are built, its principal means of communication with the world for years to come. Although the

MINES OF GOLD MOUNTAIN

Proper have for the last ten years had a local celebrity, owing to the disadvantages of its location, and chiefly on account of its lack of a water supply, but little is known in regard to the country or the value of its mines, except by those whose all has been hidden away in their depths, beyond the reach of their empty purses.

Taking Lida Valley (as being better known) as a starting point for this description, Gold Mountain is situated about twenty miles in a southeasterly direction. The chief attraction at the present time is centered in an old location known as the State Line mine, which lies from eight to ten miles in a westerly course from the old Gold Mountain camp, which would bring it about 16 miles nearly due south from the town of "Lida," and between which invervenes a valley generally referred to as the head of Death Valley, and in the Gold Mountain range. Lida Valley is a cul du sac in the range of mountains lying east of Fish Lake Valley. The southerly portion of this mountain is cut off by Mount Magruder, an elevation of about 11,000 feet, running nearly easterly and westerly, with Log Springs at its westerly base or end. It follows that the southerly slope of Mount Magruder faces the State Line mine, and from the numerous springs upon this southerly slope it is proposed to obtain a water supply by means of pipes across Death Valley to the mines, a distance of about twelve miles. We gave, a week or two since, an article descriptive of the State Line property, so that only a brief reference thereto is now necessary. The total sum paid by the New York company for the property, including the 2,200 feet of patented ground and the extensions, was $267,500. A double mill, comprising 80 stamps, is in course of construction. Sixty-five thousand feet of 6-inch water pipe is to be laid, as above referred to. Five openings have been made upon the mine, the deepest now exceeding 100 feet, in fedge matter 11 to 13 feet in width, assaying from $25 to $175 in gold per ton. With 40 stamps only, Superintendent Taylor, a principal owner, promises $60,000 a month net for two years, out of the ore in sight. The work of opening it 100 feet deeper is going on, and if the ore body holds out the same the property will prove, as has often been claimed for it, to be the biggest gold mine in the world.

Heading at the westerly foot of Mount Magruder and about four miles east of Log Springs, running easterly into Death Valley and from eight to ten miles west of the State Line mine, is the somewhat famous

TULE CAÑON,

Noted for its placer mines and huge nuggets of pure gold. It has been mainly worked by Mexicans, at different times for ten years. Several of these have found their way to this place, one of which in weight nearly $900 was purchased several years ago by Harris & Rhine. Lately a "dry washer" has been in operation, and the other day, as a part of his proceeds, Norberto Mendiril brought in a solid, nearly round chunk of pure gold weighing eleven ounces. This was purchased by A. R. Conklin, Esq., who took it with him to San Francisco. A small piece of the same general description is in possession of J. D. Mairs, of this place.

About Tule Cañon and also on the slope facing west and towards Log Springs is a large scope of what would be valuable placer ground if water could be obtained in sufficient quantity for ordinary sluicing purposes, or even the now obsolete "long tom." Aside from the rich placers of Tule Cañon and other gulches in the vicinity, which have from time to time been worked only during extremely wet seasons, there are evidences of the existence of rich veins of silver ore, judging from the float rock and surface deposits which have been found.

There can be no doubt but that the range of mountains lying west of Death Valley, as well as Gold Mountain on the east, will by reason of the enterprise now being inaugurated on the State Line mine, soon develop into a very rich and prosperous mining section, to the direct and resultant advantage of this region. The coming mining boom will be in Gold Mountain and Lida, to be followed by the development of Deep Springs and Beveridge districts. We shall next week endeavor to describe points adjacent, and refer to the railroad probabilities.

SHOOTING AT BELLEVILLE.—As we learn from the True Fissure, A. G. Turner and Ramon Montenegro, both well known in this county, had a shooting match in Belleville on January 25th, ending in Ramon receiving two bad wounds. The two men met in the street. Ramon threw open his overcoat for reasons not stated. At this Turner pulled his pistol and firing, shot Ramon through the arm. The latter drew and returned the fire, but without effect. Finally, after each had fired several shots, Ramon started to run, when he received another shot which entered near the spine and came out a little above the groin. Turner was arrested and taken to Candelaria for trial, but on motion of his counsel, Judge Snelling, the complaint was dismissed on the ground that the complaint alleged no public offence. Ramon's chances for recovery are somewhat mixed.

F. & A. M.—The stated meeting of Inyo Lodge, No 221, F. & A. M., will take place at the hall next Saturday night.

SPECIMEN.—THE INDEPENDENT has received from Mr. Stephen Decker a beautiful specimen of gold quartz from the Sunrise ledge, one of his valuable properties in Beveridge. It sparkles with free gold, and has all the characteristics of the rich veins of that great gold region.

AT half past 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon the dam of Little Valley reservoir burst, and a body of water a mile long and three-quarters wide came rushing down the ravine with a rush, and inside of five minutes nearly the whole of Franktown was washed away, together with three-quarters of a mile of the V. & T. R. R. track. A number of railroad men who were working on the dam were carried down in the rush of waters, but all escaped with life. The citizens, anticipating the break, had previously removed their household effects. The total loss is about $50,000.—Carson Appeal, Feb. 3.

THE election of Jackson, a Democrat, to the United States Senate from Tennessee, settles the political complexion of the next Senate. That body, on the 5th of next month, will stand 37 Republicans to 39 Democrats. In the House the Republicans have a majority of two—Republicans, 148, Democrats, 145, Readjusters, 2, Greenbackers, 8.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

THIS HONEY WAS REMOVED FROM THE comb by centrifugal force, with a machine made for the purpose. It is therefore virtually the same as honey in the comb, only you don't have to eat the bees-wax, which is indigestible and therefore disagrees with many persons. When first extracted the honey is liquid, but nearly all pure honey will candy or granulate in course of time, especially if exposed to the cold. Putting the cans in hot water for a short time will bring the honey to its fluid state without injury.

This Honey is put up in 10 pound cans, with patented screw tops, which renders it convenient for family use, and especially for the mines, to which it may be packed, even upside down, without leakage. A neat label on each can gives full directions.

Price, $1 50 per can, or 12½ cents per lb, at the Apiary, if customers furnish their own receptacle. For sale at Harris & Raine's, Independence, and at the Apiary, at Jacob Vagt's place, Camp Independence.

Owen Lovejoy's Eloquence.

The following is from a speech by Hon. J. M. Arnold before the Illinois Bar Association:

Lovejoy always suggested to me a Roundhead of the days of Cromwell. He was thoroughly in earnest, almost, if not quite fanatical in his politics. His courage was unflinching and he would have died for his principles. He had a blunt, masculine eloquence rarely equalled, and on the slavery question, as a stump speaker, it would be difficult to name his superior. In February 1859, at the Capitol in Washington, speaking of the acts which led to this trial (for harboring a fugitive slave), there is one of the boldest and most effective bursts of eloquence of Lovejoy to be found in all the literature of anti-slavery discussion. He had been taunted and reproached on the floor of Congress, and stigmatized as one who, in aiding slaves to escape, had violated the laws and Consitution of his country. He had been denounced as a "nigger-stealer," threatened by the slaveholders, and they attempted to intimidate and silence him. They little knew the man, and his reply silenced them, and extorted the admiration of friend and foe. He closed one of the most radical and impassioned anti-slavery speaches ever made in Congress, by unflinchingly declaring: "I do assist fugitive slaves. Proclaim it, then, upon the house-tops; write it upon every leaf that trembles in the forest; make it blaze from the sun at high noon, and shine forth in the milder radiance of every star that bedecks the firmament of God; let it echo through all the arches of heaven, and reverberate and bellow along all the deep gorges of hell, where slave-catchers will be very likely to hear it. Owen Lovejoy lives at Princeton, Illinois, three-quarters of a mile east of the village; and he aids every fugitive that comes to his door and asks it. Thou invisible demon of slavery, dost thou think to cross my humble threshold, and forbid me to give bread to the hungry and shelter to the homeless! I bid you defiance in the name of God!"

I heard Lovejoy declare, that after the death of his brother, he went to the graveyard at Alton, and kneeling upon the sod which covered the remains of that brother, he there, before God, swore eternal war and vengeance upon slavery. He kept his oath.

He was a man of powerful physique, intense feeling and great magnetism as a speaker, and he now went forth like Peter the Hermit, with a heart of fire, and a tongue of lightning, preaching his crusade against slavery.

In the log school houses, in the meeting houses and places of worship, and in the open air, he preached and lectured against slavery with a vehemence and passionate energy which carried the people with him. The martyrdom of his brother was a sufficient excuse for his violence, and the name of Lovejoy, the martyr, like the name of Rob Roy or Douglass in Scotch history, became a name to "conjure" with. Some idea of his dramatic power may be obtained from a sermon, preached at Princeton in January, 1842, on the death of his brother. After describing his murder by a cruel mob, because he would not surrender the freedom of the press, he declared solemnly, that for himself, "come life or death, I will devote the residue of my life to the anti-slavery cause." "The slaveholders and their sympatizers," said he, "have murdered my brother, and if another victim is needed, I am ready."

His aged and widowed mother was present in the church. Pausing and turning to her, he said: "Mother, you have given one son, your elder, to liberty, are you willing to give another?" And the heroic mother replied: "Yes, my son,—you cannot die in a better cause?" He lived to see slavery die, amid the flames of war which itself had kindled.

How They Run a Mine in Maine.

Mining down in Maine is a funny business to lookers-on from the Pacific coast. The men running the mines appear to be old sailors and Nantucket whalers. They speak of the levels as "decks," and the force of men employed as the crew. The superintendent is the skipper, and the foremen are his mates. When the skipper passes through the main hatch and gets down to the bottom of a three-decker mine, he calls out along the main gangway toward where the "chase" (lode) was last seen, and asks his first mate: "How does she head?" "Sou-sou west half west," says the mate. "Port your helm and hold her a little more sou," says the skipper. "Aye aye, sir," replies the mate, "port it is, sir." Then turning to his second mate, the skipper says: "Mr. Jones, are we making much water now?" "Just sounded the well, sir, and found about four feet. Stopped the worst leak this morning at four bells." "Very well, sir; if she makes much water better man the pumps. Now, sir, if all is right below deck, suppose we go up to my cabin and splice the cable."—Muleteer's Gazette.

THERE is no nonsense about the gentleman who now represents Nevada in the National Legislature, as will be seen by the annexed letter: "Following the late vacancy in the Pyramid Lake Indian Agency, the names of a number of very worthy and competent citizens of Nevada were placed before the President for appointment. He refused to select any one from the State, and a few days ago nominated a Mr McMasters of Rochester, New York. The Agency belonged to the Baptists, I was told to day by the Indian Commissioner, by virtue of some old arrangement, and they were allowed to fill it. I presume Mr McMasters has never seen an Indian outside of a circus side-show; but if he has capacity enough to steal the whole of the appropriation and compel the Indians to fish for his benefit and beg their food, he will answer quite as well as the majority of his predecessors."

THE time is rapidly drawing near when through travel from the East to Mexico can be made entirely by rail, notwithstanding the disagreement concerning the junction, between the two great companies now laying their track across New Mexico. The Southern Pacific is now within eighteen miles of El Paso on the west, and the Rio Grande Valley branch of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé is but twenty miles away on the north, so that in less than a month a through rail route East will be established via El Paso.

THE debates in Parliament upon the Irish Coercion bill are growing acrimonious and bitterly personal. John Bright waxes indignant and expresses himself with unusual vehemence concerning the obstructive policy adopted by the Home Rulers. The discussion was afterwards enlivened and diversified and the House edified by hearing one member calling another a scoundrel, and the member to whom that polite epithet was applied retaliating by calling the offender a "—— fool."

THE cultivation of pampas grass, now so much used for decorative purposes, has become quite a profitable industry in Southern California. Three-quarters of an acre planted to pampas grass yielded, at two and a half cents per head, $500. Another grower sold all he could raise at seven and a half cents per head. Last year 10,000 heads or plumes of this grass were sold from that region.

QUEEN VICTORIA under no circumstances allows a lady whose name has appeared in a divorce court, either as petitioner or otherwise, however blameless may be her reputation and life, to appear at one of her drawing rooms. Lately, also, her Majesty has issued an ukase expressing her disgust at the very decollette dresses which have been obtruded on her notice, and forbidding them for the future.

THE Carson and Colorado railroad is now completed a distance of 47 miles from Mound House. Track laying is making active progress at the rate of nearly a mile and a half a day. At this rate it will not be long before the road will reach Walker Lake, when times in this section of Esmeralda are more than likely to be a deal better than at present.—Aurora Herald.

THE next "new thing" is likely to be glass type for newspaper printing. Experiments have just been made in Paris with glass type, and the result is said to have been very successful. The type preserves its cleanness almost indefinitely; it is said to wear better than metal, and to maintain its sharpness of outline much longer.

MISS EMMA A. WILSON, a niece of Senator Booth, has secured the office of State Librarian of Indiana, the Republican caucus nominating her, after thirteen ballots, over eighteen other women and two men. The Indianapolis Journal praises the dignity and friendly spirit with which the ladies conducted their canvass.

THE largest fall of top coal and rock ever known in Lehigh Valley occurred in the Empire mines, Wilkesbarre, on the 26th ultimo, when 2,000 tons fell, burying two miners—Morris and his son, Thomas. Hundreds of men are at work digging for the bodies. The cause of the fall is not yet known.

EDISON has dropped his electric light and is now experimenting to see if a cow cannot be made to give ice-cream by wrapping her in congealed water before milking.

A Thriving Town.

Tucson has a resident population of upwards of 7,000 people, and the streets are thronged with miners and prospectors going and coming to and from the various camps. It is as lovely as Eden—if the history of that mythical spot is anywhere near correct—the streets are as level as a house floor, and large plazas are in front of the principal dwellings, rich in plants and bright green grasses In all the town there are but two small frame buildings; the others are either brick or adobes. Many of the business houses there carry larger and finer stocks of goods than are to be found west of Denver, if we except San Francisco. Buggies are wheeling along the streets at all hours. Gambling of every known game is carried on with a high hand, and only bit saloons are known in the city. There are six newspapers published in the place; in fact it is a prosperous town.—Eureka Sentinel.

EVERY State is proud of something. California is proud of its glorious climate. Nevada is proud of its political history. Iowa is proud of its baby-crop. The papers of the Hawkeye State claim a larger number of babies in proportion to population than any other State in the Union can show.

OF the three vampires which have sucked the life-blood of the State—stock gambling, Chinese labor and railroad extortion—the latter is certainly chief. The miner digs, the farmer plows, the shepherd shears, but Stanford and Crocker take the proceeds.—Tulare Times.

A BOSTON man was invited to a banquet. At the bottom of the invitation was the following: "Nota Bene—eight o'clock prompt." He read it thus: "Not a bean, eh! Then I don't go to to the durned banquet, that's all about it."—Syracuse Sunday Times.

A MINING expedition has started for Atrato river, Panama. Most all of the party are graduates of mining colleges. From all accounts the bed of the river is enormously rich. The only question, it is said, is how to get the gold out of it.

THE Signal Service Bureau is about extending its benefits to the Texas stockmen, who are to be warned of the approach of "northers," which prove so destructive to sheep and cattle, by predictions posted in the telegraph and postoffices.

B. H. CARRICK, late Treasurer of Storey county, is inside gate keeper at the Nevada State Prison. He accepts his unfortunate position in a philosophic manner, not without hopes of a speedy release, however.

THE Lake Superior mining region produced about 25,000 tons of ingot copper in 1880. The great districts of the entire upper Michigan peninsula yielded $18,000,000 worth of copper and iron ore during the past year.

A TEXAS paper says that the young people in Houston, that State, enjoyed their New Year as few of their elders ever did, and that was in skating on solid ice an inch thick.

MRS. MOLLIE GRIZZARD, whom the Republicans elected Engrossing Clerk of the Tennessee Legislature, is a widow whose husband was killed by the rebels while out hiding in the bushes.

THE Richmond Dispatch expresses the belief that there is a substantial unity of opinion among the Democrats of Virginia that the public debt of the State must be readjusted and taken out of politics.

SOME wag in Ohio, it is said, telegraphed to President Hayes: "Please do not appoint any more officers from this State just at present. We would like to get a quorum in the Legislature."

A FACTORY has been discovered at Milwaukee from which 12,000 pounds of oleomargarine are sent out every day with no mark to distinguish it from genuine butter.

MISS BECKWITH, that plump and accomplished English young woman, who recently swam thirty hours in a tank, is about to visit the United States.

A WEAK solution of quassia is said to be a perfect protection against mosquitoes, applied to the face and hands.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 12..... 1881

THE Senate of Nevada has just done something to mitigate the reproach that has hung upon that State of being politically the property of aggressive and unprincipled corporations. A set of resolutions, known as the Williams resolutions, endorsing and urging the passage by Congress of the Reagan bill, has been the bone of contention this Winter between the Central Pacific and the representatives of the people. The great corporation exercised all its powers of finesse and influence to defeat the resolutions, even sending Steve Gage to Carson to personally organize an opposition against them. Mr. Gage made his approaches with the skill of a general beleaguering a city. He did not object to the passage of the bare resolution urging Congress to pass the measure, but insidiously objected to the preamble which charged the company with discrimination. He brought up all the stock sophistry of the railroad men about competitive and non-competitive points and the law governing them. But his efforts have proven fruitless. The Williams resolutions, with their preamble made even stronger than at first, have passed the Senate by a vote of 16 to 7. The House will follow suit.

THE Jews of Germany, who are now being persecuted, have rights that ought to be respected. Jewish writers of the middle ages declare that the ancestors of these men fled from Palestine during one of the persecutions and settled in Germany, 1400 B. C., over 3,000 years ago. Other Jewish authorities declare that these Jews refused to visit Jerusalem for the purpose of celebrating the annual feast, returning answer to messages of invitation "We have built a new Jerusalem on the borders of the Rhine." Jewish authorities also claim that the German Jews protested against the crucifixion of Christ. In the days of Charlemagne the German Jews were recognized as possessing certain rights as participants in government, though that monarch never hesitated to persecute the race to the utmost. It seems just that a race which existed in Germany as a recognized power 800 years ago, before the establishment of the present empire, should have fair treatment.

WE learn from the report of the State Engineer, that parts of the new map of California, which is being drawn in his office, are approaching completion, and he recommends that it be published by the State as fast as completed, and sold at cost price for the public benefit. The suggestion seems to us an excellent one, for the maps now attainable are but partially correct. The new map will be on the scale of six miles to the inch, and will occupy a sheet about 10 feet square. This would require a good sized wall to hold it, but if it can be had in parts it would serve many valuable purposes.

THE San Francisco Alta says: The Grangers do not agree with the Chronicle. That paper denies that there is double taxation on the hypothecated wheat. The Farmer's Convention on Saturday adopted a resolution declaring that there is such double taxation and asking the Legislature for immediate relief. Relief cannot be granted, however, unless we deliberately violate the Constitution, which the farmers hailed as the harbinger of all good.

THE Sacramento Valley is a vast sea of water from Marysville and Colusa down to Suisun Bay. None of the leveed cities are materially damaged, but sad havoc is wrought with all the orchards, gardens and fields, and with live stock. The river was higher than ever before known, but at latest dates, was falling quite rapidly.

THE San Francisco papers say that during the late Wheeler trial, in which Mrs. Foltz and Mrs. Gordon appeared as opposing counsel, each of the lawyeresses referred to the other before the court as her learned sister in law.

THE Chicago Inter-Ocean has leased a telegraph wire between Washington and Chicago for its exclusive use. The wire connects its Washington news bureau direct, and it is manned by its own operators.

NEW YORK has furnished an interesting variation from the usual programme—"Didn't know it was loaded." This time the surviving party declares he "didn't know it was a pistol."

THE price of a bonnet in Lima depends on the currency you have. If Peruvian, the figures are $250; if gold, you can take it along for $2, and please call again.

BOILER explosions are becoming so numerous that vaccination appears necessary to keep them from breaking out.

THE GUNSIGHT FOUND ANOTHER TIME.

It is now reported as a fact that the celebrated lost Gunsight lode has been found by a prospector sent out by D. O. Mills. He is said to have become possessed of a lot of old papers and charts, including a description of the locality in which the unfortunate Death Valley party found the renowned lead. It is said to be about sixty miles from Resting Springs, in San Bernardino county. The lode discovered is from twenty to thirty feet wide, and crops out twenty feet, and has been traced for three miles. It was always a cherished desire with the remnant of the unfortunate party, most of whom perished in Death Valley in 1849, to find the Gunsight lode. "The late John Goller," says the Los Angeles Express, "who was one of the party, was always enthusiastic about the lost lode. He was one of the original discoverers, and was firm in the belief that it was the richest mine ever seen by man." "If it is within only sixty miles of Resting Springs," adds the same paper, "it is astonishing that Josh Talbot, or some other of the pioneers of the Desert have not stambled upon it ere this. Uncle Josh must have been near it a hundred times in the course of his prospecting wanderings during the past twenty-five years." We don't think they have got the right Gunsight yet; it is in a small, detached mountain, the nearest water being about 25 miles distant. So one of the original discoverers told the writer hereof years ago.

LETTER FROM LOS ANGELES.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Feb. 7, 1881

MESSRS. EDITORS—Being just now chuck full of climate, hence feeling exuberantly loquacious, I drop you a line from this genial clime—the land of orange and city of angels.

A prolific pen could write an interesting volume on the diversity of subjects from northern Inyo to Los Angeles, a distance of nearly 300 miles.

Starting north we trot through flourishing farming settlements -- Round Valley, Bishop Creek, Big Pine and others, and dart across purling, never failing streams of pure water, which insure the farmer a crop every year. Eastward and westward of Owens Valley, and running parallel, are the two grand ranges, Inyos and Sierras, with their lofty peaks looming up majestically. We gaze in awe as we silently march along, meditating and speculating just a little—wondering whether the child is yet born who will attempt a rough estimate of the vast wealth, the untold millions, of hidden treasure contained in those everlasting hills and mountains.

Once we leave Lone Pine we leave the farming country, and emerge into a long stretch of desert. Continuing south, we find a few oases, Olancha and Haiwai Meadows, where grass grows, but no grain, on account of insufficiency of water. Owens Lake, the Dead Sea of the West, is a large body of water, 18 miles long, and is a wonderful mixture of salts, borax, &c. Running still south we traverse sand and sagebrush—nothing inviting attracts the eye with the exception of an occasional mountain schooner—"Nadeau's teams" slowly sailing with merchandise and machinery for mining camps and farming settlements.

For wind Mohave beats all—not even a decent sage brush can possibly grow there on account of hurricanes!

The distance from Mohave to San Francisco is 381 miles; from Mohave to Los Angeles about 100 miles and the fare $6.85 or $10 for return ticket, good for twenty days.

In this city of angels, your humble servant has struck some old Inyoites H. Evans, of Round Valley, Randolph of Bishop, Newlon formerly of Big Pine (who has bought a little place for $3800), Le Cyr, of Lone Pine, Charley Burroughs, formerly of Fish Slough, Bill McBride and others.

Judging from outward appearance, "climate" has produced many beneficial effects. An old gentleman who, for many years, wintered and summered in Mono and Esmeralda, informed me that the few months residence in Los Angeles has been very conducive to his health — increased his avoirdupois nearly twenty pounds. He attributes his welfare, physically, to perfect rest; no anxiety; mild climate; the evergreen landscape, combined, probably, with frequent ablutions and imbibations of delectable beverages. "A change, man," as he emphatically expressed it, "is what a person needs." Correct.

Mr. Evans, having his wife, children, horses and buggy here, feels extremely happy. This scribbler is under many obligations to the Evans family for kind favors tendered him. Mr. E. hitches on to his buggy every morning, and we sail furiously through the streets and among the "angels."

He threatens to still punish this hombré—will trot, he says, to Santa Monica, and through Riverside and San Bernardino.

By that time it will be useless, I presume, for a taboose eater to return to Inyo. However, will collect data and send you another brief epistle soon.

Yours truly,
JOHN JENKINS.

A TYPO on the Eureka Leader has recently fallen heir to $25,000, and no longer alludes to Hobart, the editor, as "boss."

THE Hon. Henry Edgerton and Miss Virginia E. Taylor, both of Sacramento, were recently married.

THE total area of waste and uncultivated lands in Ireland is set down at some 4,650,000 acres, of which at least 2,540,000 is irreclaimable.

BEE-CULTURE.—NO. VII.

SWARMING.

Although the bees keep up the strength of the swarm by rearing young bees to replace the old ones, the number of swarms, regarded as individuals, would never increase naturally, were it not for the swarming instinct. In the Spring, when the weather gets warm, honey and pollen plenty, and when young bees are constantly hatching and augmenting the numbers in the hive, this instinct prompts the bees to prepare for swarming by first raising drones, and subsequently starting queen cells. A day or two before the first of these queen cells is ready to hatch, the swarm comes out accompanied by the old queen, and, after circling around for a while, generally settles on some dark colored tree or bush, awaiting the return of the scouts. These are bees that have gone out in search of a new home for the swarm, and if successful, they will on their return, lead the swarm directly to the place. Sometimes these scouts will be out several days in advance, and may be seen hovering around hollow trees, empty hives or any other cavity that might possibly serve as their future home. A swarm should therefore be hived as soon as possible after settling and removed to its permanent stand some distance off, that the scouts, on returning, may not find them and lead them away. The new swarm should be shaded and given plenty of ventilation for the first few days, and as a further and generally sure preventative against their leaving the new hive, they should be given a comb of unsealed brood from the old hive, or from any other strong stock that can spare it. Empty worker combs or comb foundation will be found a great help to new swarms, but under all circumstances they should be examined every couple of days to see that they build their combs straight, and if they do not the combs must be bent, or cut and fastened into place. Empty hives, intended for swarms, should be kept in a cool, shady place, that the heat of the hive may not drive the bees out. Before the bees swarm they fill themselves with honey enough to last them for several days, and from which to secrete wax for their new home. Being filled with honey they are good natured and may therefore be hived without fear of stings. If settled on a small tree or bush they may be shaken directly into the hive. When near the ground, the weeds should be cleared away and the hive placed a couple of feet away from the swarm, which may then be brushed or smoked from its settling place, and will soon enter the hive. If no more swarms are desired from the old hive it should be examined, and all the queen cells, except one, removed. If the queen's wings were clipped she should be found, generally, in front of the hive, as soon as the swarm is in the air, and placed in a queen cage out of the sun. (A queen cage may be made by rolling a piece of wire cloth, three or four inches square, round a stick and closing one end by folding it over and hammering it down on the end of the stick, while a cork closes the other end.) The old hive should then be removed a short distance, and a new one placed in its stead. As soon as the swarm returns and enters the hive the queen may be let loose at the entrance, when she will go in with the bees. The swarm should then be taken to another location and the old hive returned to its original stand. As it is often very tedious and unsatisfactory to wait and watch for natural swarms, many bee keepers resort to what is called

ARTIFICIAL SWARMING

Which with good judgment, and the season being favorable, insures a certain increase, without swarming the bees to death, and without vexatious loss of time, and of bees absconding. There are many different ways of swarming bees artificially but I shall only mention my favorite method, as the safest and easiest for beginners. Three to four weeks before the bees would swarm naturally, when there are plenty of drones in the hive and the bees are strong in numbers, or, as I call it, boiling over every time I open a hive in the middle of the day, I start queen cells as before described. In eight or nine days I count them, and then make as many artificial swarms, less one, as I have queen cells. The swarms are made by taking from two to four good brood combs, containing capped brood and some honey, and with the adhering bees, from each of several strong stocks, and placing them alternating with each other in a new hive on a new stand. Care should be taken that the queens are not removed from the old hives. The combs taken out should be replaced with frames, empty combs or comb-foundation. Many of the old bees will return to their parent hives, but enough will stay to take care of the brood, and with the young bees daily hatching, will soon make a powerful swarm, lacking only a laying queen in being as good as any. The next day I give each of the new swarms a queen cell ready to hatch, and leave one in the hive in which the cells were raised, unless I desire the same stock to raise another lot. In this way the old stock is not weakened materially at the time, and may in a couple of weeks be divided again. Young queens are often raised and fertilized in nuclei or small swarms made for the purpose, and the young laying queeens introduced to the artificial swarms, which is a gain in regard to time over the yet unhatched queen-cells, but the ordinary bee keeper is not likely to trouble himself with all the care and attention this method requires.

THE destruction of live stock in Oregon by the recent floods is very heavy. In Yakima county the loss amounts to 80 per cent., in Wasco county to fifty per cent., and in the section east of the Cascade Mountains it is unprecedentedly heavy.

THE Comstock mines in twenty years have yielded, in bullion, $325,000,000, have raised 1,750,000,000 tons of water, and have hoisted 160,000,000 tons of waste rock.

MAZOURKA.—Several parties are now prospecting in Mazourka Cañon, and new discoveries are being made every few days. At the head of the cañon some quartz ledges have been found, said to be from three to four feet wide. Samples brought to Woodhull & Phillips, assay office show a fine character of free gold. A number of gold veins have been discovered along the cañon at differedt times, but very little work of development has been done on them. The ore when found is of a high grade of free milling quartz, and the outlook is quite promising for some good paying gold mines in that section. We believe a fortune awaits parties who will take hold and develop these ledges. Lower down the cañon some splendid ores are being found, which carry both lead and silver. All the lead ores of the cañon carry gold in quantities varying from $3 to $20 per ton. One assay gave: gold, $160 50; silver, 70 ounces, and 41 per cent. lead. The locality can undoubtedly be made to produce immense quantities of first-class smelting ores, if some of the promising mines already found were properly opened. It is strange that this district which can show more and better prospects than other section of Inyo, excepting perhaps the Cerro Gordo region, should have remained dormant so long. Mazourka Cañon possesses facilities for mining, milling and smelting that are unsurpassed by any other district in California. With wood and water in abundance, no snow at any season to interfere with mining operations, very accessible, and a good wagon road of easy grade, from Independence through the cañon to the summit, it would seem that Mazourka must ere long come to the front; and we predict that it will do so and make a mark that will surprise the people of Inyo.

MARRIED.—We learn that Mr. L. Wick, whom every old resident in this county knows, was married in October last to a Miss Reeves at Southampton, Suffolk county, New York, where Mr. Wick has been residing since he left this county some two years since. As a quiet, peaceable citizen, not in the least of a contentious spirit—as a man of honor and probity in all his dealings, and as a good man and and citizen generally, no man stood higher than Mr. W.; and, in view of his quiet, unassuming ways, it becomes a matter of more surprise how he came to commit this deed, the very thought of which has often made the toughest old blowhards in the country weaken. However, it's all right; it is no felony, therefore no need to plead the emotional insanity dodge; a great many of our best people have perpetrated similar deeds, and no one thought any worse of them on that account—that is, hardly ever. Same with Wick. On the contary, we and all his many friends will warmly congratulate both himself and bride.

OFFICES INSTALLED.—Following is the list of officers of Oasis Lodge, No. 352, I. O. G. T., installed on Saturday night last, for the current quarter: Barney McClusky, W. C. T.; Addie Inman, W. H. R. S.; Katie Hughes, W. L. H. S.; Viola Howell, W. V. T.; D. F. McCarty, W. Sec.; Wm. Hall, W. A. S.; F. H. White, W. F. S.; Zanie Hughes, W. T.; Eddie Clark, W. M.; Stanton Powers, W. D. M.; Chas. McKay, W. I. G.; W. Bursy, W. O. G.; P. W. Forbes, W. C.; F. R. Parker, P. W. C. T.; J. C. Mills, L. D.

THE KEARSAGE.—Arrangements have been perfected by which work in the long Kearsarge tunnel is to be resumed immediately, and continued without interruption until a distance of 200 feet further is reached. If developments in the meantime should satisfy reasonable anticipations, we will have something to say relative to contingent operations possessing considerable local interest at least. The work mentioned above will go on, and that is all we need say about it now.

THE WRONG FURNACE.—Last week it was stated in these columns that Thos. Moran expected to fire up the New Coso furnace for a run on ore from the Hindoo mine. It is the Hidalgo, not the New Coso furnace with which he expects to make the run, for which he has now about 200 tons of good ore already on the dump, and the furnace in complete repair—rebuilt, in fact. The Hindoo is the first mine north of the Defiance, and bids fair to become very productive.

WHAT WE NOW REMEMBER.—We just this moment happened to think, while recalling some of our deeds of omission, etc., and so on, that but for the thoughtfulness and kindness of Messrs. Lank & Kehoe, this establishment, among other good things, would, not long since, have missed the opportunity of carving not only one but several of the fattest, most toothsome young turkeys ever brought to this place. We stand on this last proposition.

NO INSTALLATION.—Owing to the unavoidable absence, through sickness and other causes, of a number of officers of Busy Bee Lodge, No. 250, I. O. G. T., the officers elect for the current quarter were not installed on Monday night, it being decided by the Lodge to postpone the ceremony until the next regular meeting, Monday night next. For this reason we do not now publish the list of new officers.

THE RACES.—Elsewhere will be found the advertised programme of races by the Independence Jockey Club, set for March 3d, 4th and 5th. The "man vs. horse" part will be a rather interesting affair. It is also likely there will be some tall foot-racing in addition to the published programme.

STATED MEETING.—A stated meeting of Inyo Lodge, No. 221, F. & A. M., takes place to-night, and with business of sufficient importance in anticipation to demand a full attendance.

MINING GEOLOGY.

In the course of a recent lecture before the Colorado House of Representatives, Professor B. Clark Wheeler remarked:

The gold and silver of our mountains were formed far differently from what many theorists would have us believe. Their presence amid rough rocks is not the result of volcanic action, but through the action of water which deposited these metals in the sedimentary rock. What is now water was then vapor, carrying the particles of auriferous and argentiferous wealth. The vapor was caused by heat generated through the rotary motion of the earth. The mountains have resulted from compression of the earth's surface during its period of cooling. The aqueous substances existed in gaseous forms ere they cooled off, and in them was carried the wealth of our hills which so many are seeking.

The rock carrying the gold and silver disintegrated, and it is shown that they were formed under water and gained their present positon through the upheavals of a long succession of years. The carbonates that we find at Leadville are results of long contact of the rocks with water and their subsequent decomposition. We find the precious and base metals existing in various kinds of rock, and the electrical currents which caused the fusion were far greater than at the present time. I would rather own a contact lode than a fissure. The aqueous element has played a very important part upon the contact veins in rendering the ores easy for smelting. The walls are loosened and the ores largely desulphurized. In brief, the contact lode is more easily mined. I believe the contact lodes are more liable to deposits through underground bodies of water, which have caused great changes in the rock formation.

THE NEW DISCOVERIES IN THE SALINE VALLEY COUNTRY.— From Mr. J. T. Thompson, just returned from a three weeks' trip to Saline Valley, we obtain the following facts in relation to the mines recently discovered on the eastern slope of the Inyo mountains: The camp is situated about two miles southwest of the springs, most of the mines being located on the first mountain south of Craig's Cañon, with a few locations between the last named and Hunter's Cañon. As the mines were in the boundaries of Beveridge District, a new district was not organized, as at first contemplated. W. L. Hunter is Recorder, and W. T. Grant, Deputy. Some twenty-five or thirty locations have been made, all showing ore of more or less extent and richness. Five mines—namely, the Bullion, War Eagle, Eureka, Gunsight and Lake View—have been bonded to Messrs. Crittenden and McLellan, Superintendent and Foreman of the Mammoth mine, Lake District, and it is presumed work will at once be commenced in earnest. The formation in which the mines are found is lime. The veins are large, well defined true fissures. The ore is free milling silver ore, chloride and black sulphurets, with native silver more or less in all the locations, and assaying from $50 to $2,000 per ton. Mr. Thompson brought with him some beautiful specimens from the mines above named, also from the Arthur and Virginia, owned by J. J. Gunn, G. H. McKenzie, Martin Doyle and Thos. Ryan, of Darwin, and from the Silver Prince, Fortuna, John B and Blue Jay mines, owned by A. W. Eibeshutz and Mr. Thompson. Abundance of water is afforded by the streams in Craig's and Hunter's Cañons and the springs near the lake. Wood in abundance can be had by building trails and roads from two to eight miles. Mr. Thompson is satisfied beyond a doubt that the camp has a near and brilliant future. In our next a more comprehensive description of the formation, probable extent and richness of the veins, will be given.

TRIAL RUN.—The new mill at Keeler made its trial run last week under the immediate management of Mr. J. H. Holt. The working of the machinery and results of the run are reported as extraordinarily fine and satisfactory in all respects; Mr. Holt, to whom the credit falls, and all concerned, are immensely pleased. Some 12 or 14 tons of Ygnacio ore were put through; the value of the ore or sum of proceeds is not stated, but a number of assays of tailings show that but $4.44 per ton was carried off therein, and Mr. H. confidently expects to reduce even this small figure. The mill will start up on an extended run now in a few days.

AN OLD TIMER.—Through a private letter to friends here we learn that W. G. Squires, an old pioneer of this place and county, is now located in the Gunnison country where he has a number of valuable mining locations. These have been sold, and as soon as the money is paid and transfer made, Squires proposes to pay a visit to this, his old stamping ground.

PERSONAL.—We received a call this week from the genial Sam. Cowles, his first visit here in the past three years. He has but just returned from the city, to which place he was lately so hastily summoned on account of the death of Judge Cowles, his father.

FOR THE STATE LINE.—On Thursday three large teams loaded on 10 tons of barley and 15 tons (14,000 running feet) of 4-inch water pipe, all for the State Line mine, and to which reference was made last week.

ANNUAL MEETING.—As will be seen by notice elsewhere the Swansea Company's annual meeting is called to meet in San Francisco on the 19th instant.

TO BENTON.—Mr. Parker, the junior of this establishment, started early this week for a visit to Bishop Creek and Benton. He will get back about Wednesday next.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 12 1881

A MONSTER meeting of colliers at Wigan, England, a few days ago, decided to stand out for an advance of ten per cent. After the meeting separated, the colliers visited several pits and did much damage. The police, who were powerless, were stoned, and a number of them severely injured. The military are on the ground to prevent further disorder.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

THIS HONEY WAS REMOVED FROM THE comb by centrifugal force, with a machine made for the purpose. It is therefore virtually the same as honey in the comb, only you don't have to eat the bees-wax, which is indigestible and therefore disagrees with many persons. When first extracted the honey is liquid, but nearly all pure honey will candy or granulate in course of time, especially if exposed to the cold. Putting the cans in hot water for a short time will bring the honey to its fluid state without injury.

This Honey is put up in 10 pound cans, with patented screw tops, which renders it convenient for family use, and especially for the mines, to which it may be packed, even upside down, without leakage. A neat label on each can gives full directions.

Price, $1 50 per can, or 12½ cents per lb at the Apiary, if customers furnish their own receptacle. For sale at Harris & Rouine's, Independence, and at the Apiary, at Jacob Vagt's place, Camp Independence.

BEE-CULTURE. NO. VIII.

TRANSFERRING.

As I have said before, the man who keeps his bees in box hives has no control over them whatever. The bees may prosper for a while, then, if there comes a great flow of honey, they will fill the combs to the exclusion of the queen, and the first thing you know the swarm is dwindled down to a mere handful, unable to defend their stores, and either abandon their hives in disgust, or give it up to robbers or moth-worms. The owner finding the hive heavy with honey but without bees, is unable to account for this strange state of affairs, and concludes that he has no "luck" with bees. At other times the bees get a drone-laying queen who produces nothing but drones, or they lose their queen from some cause, and a fertile worker reigns in her stead, or they fill the greater part of the hive with drone comb, or, as in some localities, they get the foul-brood, a contagious disease peculiar to bees; all of which causes, with many others, result in the ultimate loss of the swarm. But the owner of bees in moveable frame hives can control or remedy nearly all these things if he understands the nature and instinct of the bees, for by taking the combs out and examining them he can generally tell at a glance what is wrong, and sets to work correcting it before it is too late. It should therefore be the aim of every beginner in bee culture to transfer the bees, if he has bought them in box hives, into frame hives, or, if he has bought them in frame hives in which the bees have been allowed to manage themselves, he should straighten up the combs that each one may be lifted out without injuring those adjoining and without killing bees. If he cannot do it himself either from lack of time or sufficient knowledge, or from fear of stings, let him employ somebody who is competent to do it for him, and he will find himself the gainer by the increased prosperity of his bees, and the consequently larger yield of honey for his table. Having provided himself with the requisite number of moveable frame hives, he will get together his transferring implements, which consist of a table or bench to work on, a smoker, several pans for water and honey, some pieces of planed boards the size of the comb, a knife long enough to reach through the hive in any direction, a butcher knife, a thin sharp coldchisel, a large feather for brushing bees, a claw-hammer or hatchet, a sharp pointed saw, a sponge, a bee-cap and a number of transferring sticks. These sticks should be about one-quarter of an inch wide, one-eighth of an inch thick and one-quarter of an inch longer than the outside height of the frames. They are notched at both ends, and one-half of the sticks supplied with fine wire, twisted round the notches leaving the free ends of the wire about one and one half inches long. Having moved the old hive to the transferring table smoke the bees and proceed to remove the top of the hive and one of the sides by cutting the nails with the chisel, or drawing them if it can be done. Now cut loose the first comb, brush the adhering bees into the new hive; lay the comb down on one of the transferring boards, lay on a frame and cut the edges of the comb away, using the inside of the frame for a guide. Remove the edges, press the frame down over the comb, slip the long knife between the comb and board, raise the comb and frame a trifle with the knife, push one of the wired sticks under the frame a couple of inches from and parallel to the side of the frame, and so that each end of the stick with its respective wire projects one-eighth of an inch outside the top and bottom of the frame; do the same at the other side. If the comb is badly broken or bent, or, if several pieces have to be fitted into a frame, it will be necessary to use three or more pieces of transferring sticks. Now lay on the unwired sticks right over the others, twist the wires tightly round them, raise the board with the frame that the comb may not break out, slide the board off and place the frame in the new hive; wash the honey off the board and proceed as before. When you come to any supporting sticks placed inside the old hive they will have to be sawed off in several places to get the combs out without breaking them. Save all good worker comb; reject all drone comb except such as contains honey, which may be necessary for the bees, or can be used in the upper hive for extracting. After the combs are all transferred shake the remaining bees into the new hive, close it up and return it to its stand. While the transferring is going on it may be well to place an empty hive on the stand that the returning bees may not enter the adjoining hives and thereby cause trouble. Transferring is best done while fruit trees are in bloom. There is then not much honey or brood in the hive and the combs may ther fore be handled with more safety thon if done later in the season, when they are heavy and more liable to break down from a higher temperature. If honey comes in freely, transferring may be done outdoors, otherwise, it is best, on account of robbers, to do it in some outhouse that can be closed to exclude them. Keep everything wiped and scraped up clean, and after finishing do not leave any traces of the work, as it may start the bees to robbing. Examine the transferring colony from time to time and as fast as they get any of the combs securely fastened in the frames remove the transferring sticks, that they may not interfere with the hatching of the brood which has been covered by them. Finally, cleanse the bottom of the hive from all trash and litter which the bees have thrown down in repairing the combs, and see that the queen is all right and doing her duty.

WM. MUTH RASMUSSEN.

Gas in Steel and Glass Making.

A few years ago every maker of crucible steel in the city of Pittsburg surrounded his frail pots of clay and plumbago with coke, the direct heat from this fuel melting the metal. To-day finds every one of these furnaces discarded, and the regenerative Siemens gas furnace has supplanted the coke burning ones. As a consequence, instead of two heats, five or even six heats are obtained from each crucible, while the saving in fuel is a notable item. The gas producing furnace is fed with a grade of bituminous coal which in many cases can be had for the hauling. Such in brief is an outline of the results attained in the use of gas in steel making.

Very recently a glass manufacturer of Pittsburg has, with remarkable success, adopted gas as a fuel in the converting of a "batch" of ingredients into molten glass, and his little furnace is an object of the deepest interest to the glass makers of Pittsburg and elsewhere. The glass melting furnace of the present is in principle that of the furnace of a century ago, a towering mass of refractory brick, holding at its base a collection of costly and fragile "pots," containing usually 2,000 pounds of molten glass each, these pots being exposed to the direct heat of burning coal beneath. The extreme tenderness of these pots, their liability to deposit their costly contents into the ash pit, their first cost, about $50, and the care necessary in preserving them from the sudden lowering of temperature are a few only of the objections that have always existed in the orthodox form of furnace. In the best of these a pound of melted glass produced for a pound of coal burned is considered extremely good results, and the first cost of such a furnace is $6,000. On the other hand, the new gas burnig furnace costs $500, and in it every day there is melted a 6,000 pound batch with 1,000 pounds of "nut" coal in twelve hours after lighting the fires, against 24 to 36 hours in the old furnace.

The new or "open tank" glass furnace is built of fire-brick, and is of the subjoined modest proportions. The "tank," holding 6,000 pounds of glass, is 7 by 5 by 2 feet. Across one end of this space, and separated from it by a fire wall, is the furnace or fire box. This is simply a fireplace, 30 inches square, furnished with grate bars, and not differing in appearance from the ordinary furnace under a steam boiler. To this fire box is led air from a rotary blower. This finds its way to the grate bars and through the flues in the surrounding wall. In the latter instance this air becomes intensely hot before escaping through suitable openings and mingling with the products of the burning coal. So mingled, air, smoke and gasses blend in a flame of intense heat, and following the draught pour over the fire wall and down upon the tank, converting the "batch" into molten glass in the time stated. It should be added that the old style furnace, with its great mass of brickwork, requires two weeks of continuous firing to make ready for melting, and that skilled labor, "teasing," is necessary to properly preserve the pots from undue heat or cold. The new furnace is the invention of Mr. Thomas Atterbury, of Pittsburg, and an inspection of the operation of the gas furnace warrants the supposition that the days of the old style and time honored furnace are numbered.—Scientific American.

Told the Truth, and Why.

"William Henry Stacy, did you get an apple in your gullet or partake of drugged turkey last night?" asked the Court as the next case was called.

"No, sir."

"Were you drunk?"

"I was that."

"Very drunk?"

"Well, sir, I could'nt tell a brick-wagon from a smoked ham. I guess they never get much beyond that."

"Had you any particular reasons for getting drunk?"

"None, sir. I got drunk just to enjoy it, and had a good time."

"How pleasant it is to find a man who owns up fair and square and has no excuses!" observed the Court, as he looked around the room. "William, I've almost a mind to let you go."

"But I'd feel a bit easier in my mind to be sent up. When I break the law I ought to pay the penalty. You should make my case a warning to other law-breakers."

"William, you are right. I will make it thirty days."

"That's very fair, Judge, and I know I shall feel better for it."

"Remarkable man—very singular—wish I'd let him go," mused the Court, as he looked after the retreating William. "If all prisoners were like him I'd willingly submit to a reduction of twenty-five per cent. on my salary."

He had scarcely ceased speaking when a gaunt woman about six feet high, armed with a club and her teeth hard shut, appeared at the alley window, and with her nose flattened against one of the panes she called out:

"Send me husband out here and I'll give him somethin' worse'n six months in the workhouse!"

"Who is your husband?" asked Bijah as he raised the window.

"William Henry Stacy, and I want to interview him!"

"That's the man with a conscience!" sighed the Court, as he fell back in a helpless way. "No wonder he wanted to be sent up. Alas! how much deception I have to wrestle with!"

"He's been sent up—go away," said Bijah to the wife.—Detroit Free Press.

THOMAS CARLYLE, who died on the 5th instant, was born in 1795, and his literary career covered the space of half a century. He ante-dates and outlived Dickens, Thackery, Macaulay, George Eliot, Charlotte Bronte, Mill, Grote, and many others familiar to modern literature. He was the pioneer who deeply understood, and naturalized to English ears the vast and profound literature of the Germans. His literary reputation is second to that of none other of his time.

A LOVELY TRIO.

Of the many abortions begotten of that wretched abortion, the new Constitution, the Railroad Commission seems to be the "boss." At least the three abortions, Stoneman, Beerstecher and Cone, who were elected Commissioners to carry out its intent, have proved to be what we have stated, even though naturally it might not have been such an inert, misshapen thing as now appears. It was a sand-lot emanation to begin with, and like everything else of the same parentage, including the Constitution itself, was designed to do injury to one class rather than to do good to any. In other words, it was to constitute one of the many cinching machines which, together, constitute the entire instrument called the new Constitution. Like all the rest, this one is a dead failure in its intended purpose; as with the rest, it is those who intended to do the cinching who are getting cinched, not the others. True, this Commission is not cinching much in any direction, but whatever it has accomplished in that way has been to the discomfort of the wrong set—it has (for the four years' term) cinched the tax payers of the State out of $36,000 for the salaries of these renowned Commissioners. These men have been at work now for a year. In that time they have actually adopted one resolution to the effect that hereafter railroads shall not charge more than twice present rates; and also one to bring a test case before the courts to ascertain whether they can do what the Constitution and statutes say they must do. To this wonderful labor must be added their first annual report, the sum and substance of which is that as yet they know nothing whatever about what they are to do and have no idea how they are to do it if they ever should find out. Because of its utter imbecility, the report receives high praise at the hands of the railroad organ at Sacramento; the imbecility is taken as proof of the fair-mindedness of the trio.

During the year the lovely trio have ridden up and down the railroads, and held a number of august sittings to find out people's grievances. On one of these occasions, at Stockton, a gentleman was threatened with imprisonment by Beerstecher, the sand-lot spume, for daring to even intimate that he was not overstocked with confidence in the integrity of the Commission! The immaculate Beerstecher! The Boss Idiot of the Three Imbeciles! That any one should doubt the integrity of that Commission, and Beerstecher with the rest!

"'Tis mean to rob a hen-roost of a hen,
But stealing largely makes us gentlemen."

Quotes a writer in the Watsonville Pajornian, referring to this same gang.

This writer says he has heard Stoneman boast many times that while Military Governor of Virginia he had resisted the temptations of innumerable bribes that had been almost thrust upon him there—ergo, there was no use for anybody to try to bribe him here, notwithstanding his anxiety to lift that $30,000-mortgage on his farm. By the same rule there's no use for a roué to waste his time with a "lady" whose virtue is her continual boast. This hero of a nomination by four parties, and victim of a Military Bureau, spends much of his time vaporing in bar-rooms and thanking God he is not as other men—yet he, of whom so much was expected in his present place of absolute power, has done nothing but brag of his incorruptibilty, and earn derision.

Cone, the third of this grand trio, is spoken of as the merest circumstance, or nonentity, that ever occupied so prominent a place. He is totally incapable of leading or originating, and positively unwilling to follow. And so stands the personnel of that great Railroad Commission which was to make Stanford and his sort the contritest of the contrite. But they harmonize well with the deformities of the instrument which created their offices.

THE Washington correspondent of an Eastern paper says that he rode down from the Capitol the other day in a five cent omnibus in which the only other passenger was the Vice-President of the United States. Sir Edward Thornton, the British Minister, whose salary, besides his income, is over $25,000 a year, walks every day from his home away beyond the White House to the Capitol, a distance of hearly three miles. He is a trim, modest looking man with a business air and a quick nervous, step. Mr. Hill, of Colorado, who is worth a million or two, walks, while all around him dash the coaches of men who live on their Congressional salary.

THE first electric railway in Europe built for ordinary traffic was to be opened to public use on the first of the present month. It is situated in the suburbs of Berlin.

THE DEBRIS ACT.

The leading question before the Legislature and people is the Debris Act, or rather the pending bill to repeal that act. The press of the State seems to be unanimous in favor of the repeal; the San Francisco papers particularly have grown exceedingly warm on the subject, so much so as to openly say that the members who are opposing this repeal do so by virtue of bribes received. San Francisco is a hog by nature, and no attention whatever should be paid to anything she may have to say in regard to any public policy of the State extending beyond her own corporate limits. In the matter under consideration, in order to avoid the payment of a pitiful tax of one-twentieth of one per cent. per annum she is willing, and proclaims the fact, that the whole Sacramento valley should go to utter waste; not only that, but that all all placer, particularly hydraulic, mining, yielding $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 in gold annually, should be wiped out of existence; that is, now that the horse is stolen, they propose to burn the stable down—in other words, in order to save this pitiful tax, they propose to directly destroy all placer mining and at the same time consign $70,000,000 to $80,000,000 worth of agricultural lands to destruction.

The opposition to the existing law and all efforts to avert the destruction of so much property is based on the one fact, namely, that it is taxing a whole people for the benefit of a few—which is not true in fact, as every one of these cavilers would see in a moment, were it the will and in the power of the owners of all this vast amount of jeopardized taxable property to forever repudiate their share of the State tax. Yet it is noticeable that the very men who howl loudest about the wrongfulness of a general tax for local purposes, as they assert this to be, are the very first to want to saddle the burden on the nation at large! Men who are so inconsistent and selfish withal, would certainly steal if they got a chance.

Others say again that as the hydraulics have done the damage they should be made to make it good, or be shut down. From some personal knowledge of old time conditions, we will undertake to say that the real cause of the existing and threatened damage was an accomplished fact, in fact, before the first hydraulic was invented. The pan, rocker and long-tom of the days of '49 on down to '59 produced the material which constitutes the long incline over which the detritus of later years is rolled smoothly down to the sea and over the intervening plains. The hydraulics have aided in the mischief without question—have loaded on just about the final feather of the vast number needed to break the camel's back; but all the rest of the feathers were placed there by other hands, and the responsibilty is divisible accordingly. But be that as it may, to now rob the hydraulic miners of their property, and stop their operations in toto will not alone avert an iota of the destruction now going on, and which destruction will continue to go on till the fairest portion of our State is reduced to a wretched waste, unless radical and costly measures are taken to avert it. There is very much more than the ruin of a few hundred farms involved in this matter. It involves the very existence of several towns and cities, including the capital of the State, if not at present, at least at no very distant future. Nothing is more certain that the navigation of river and bays will eventually be ruined, as it is already greatly impaired, and in that is involved the all-important transportation question.

In our candid conviction of right in this matter, it is the bounden duty of the State to at least try to protect people in their property rights in cases of this kind, as it would be to protect their lives and property from human destroyers. It should be only a question how it may best be done; not a contemptible whine about a little taxation "for the benefit of a few." It is not for the benefit of the few. If the interests of the whole State are not involved in this matter then there is no one question that does involve a general interests — certainly not those thieving local gouges, the improvement of Wilmington and Oakland harbors, especially the latter.

And anyway a people of a so-called great State like this who will set down with their fists in their eyes, and refuse to even try to help their neighbors as well as themselves in a case of this kind, all because it may cost a dollar or two, are too mean to be entitled to live in such a State. The proposed plan and all others may fail; but it is none the less a duty to use every reasonable effort, let the cost be what it may, to avert such a great misfortune to the material interests of the State as well as her fair name.

THE Santa Ana Herald reports that a party of engineers are making surveys at the coal mines recently purchased by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, near that place, preparatory to sinking a shaft 400 feet deep on the mines.

SUSPENDED.

Orlando E. Jones' Weekly Bentonian has ceased publication, the publisher succumbing to the present business stagnation of the camp. While perfectly satisfied that the mines and mills of Benton, for many years among the most productive silver yielding properties of the whole interior, will again rise to their old if not vastly greater importance, we can hardly blame the "Bentonian man" for drawing out. It is but proper to state that the principal portion of the material used belonged to this office; such as did not the publishers of this paper have purchased, together with the good-will of the late Bentonian. "Dan" will probably have his last "say" through THE INDEPENDENT next week.

A Practical Legislator.

The measures introduced into the Legislature by Wasson, of Mono, are usually intended to meet a want actually felt by the people. Wasson's Mining Bureau bill was the most valuable measure adopted at the session of one year ago, and it looks as if that gentleman's bill to ascertain and make public the resources of the State would be the most useful legislation growing out of the present session. The bill is entitled, "An act to provide for the practical exposition of the resources of the State of California." The Governor, assisted by the State Mineralogist, State Engineers and the Professors of Agriculture and Geology at the University, is to be the director of the work contemplated by the act. These officers and employees of the State, and other specialists who may be chosen by the Governor, are to produce works of a practical and popular nature descriptive of the agriculture, mineral and other resources of the State, treating such subjects as soil and climate, productiveness of the soil, forests, water supply, irrigation, mineralogy and kindred topics, the whole to be illustrated by proper maps and charts. The first treatises are to be prepared from the data and figures already available, and are to be arranged in volumes for publication and sale. Afterward, beside these special works, an annual report of the resources of California, in pamphlet editions, is to be prepared and distributed throughout the United States, and foreign countries as the Governor may direct. A general map of the State, together with atlas-sheet detail maps, is to be compiled and published also, which are illustrative of the topography, the agricultural and mineral resources of the State. The detail maps are to be sufficiently large to admit of their adoption as county maps, and they are to be furnished to the county officers of the State. The sum of $20,000 is apppropriated for the expense of the work during 1881 and 1882. The employes of the State or of its institutions are to receive no compensation for their share of the work, except for traveling expenses. The bill has been referred to the Committee on Agriculture.—San Francisco Weekly Stock Report.

HARVARD COLLEGE finds that it took an "elephant" into its keeping when it established a Chinese Professorship. Last year the course cost $4,062 15. The receipts were $30. There are two causes for the failure of this professorship. The first is, the Chinese language is so difficult to learn that young men are unwilling to encounter the task; and the second, that after it has been mastered, there would be few chances to find occupation for its use, as hundreds, if not thousands, of Chinese have learned the English so that they can read, speak and write it with fluency.

A BILL has been introduced in the Legislature to amend the the title of the revenue law passed last Winter. The law contained provisions for the assessment of railroads by the State Board of Equalization, and no mention was made of it in the title, on which ground the railroads are now contesting their taxes, with, it is said, a fair chance of success. If they should succeed, it would take over half a million dollars out of the State and county treasuries, or, rather, prevent it from going in. It costs something to adopt a constitution and make laws to fit it.

A PETITION, signed by 30,400 people of California for the pardon of the Mussel Slough settlers, who were convicted of obstructing the progress of eviction issued by the United States Court, has been forwarded to President Hayes. Copies of the petition are still numerous and are being signed and will be sent to Washington from day to day to be presented to President Hayes. It is signed by numerous persons of high station, official and otherwise, and by many of the wealthy class.

GEORGE HARBER, well known in Aurora and Bodie, was shot at the famous Ten-mile Mine, Leadville, on the 3d of this month. A dispatch was received here on Thursday last stating that he had died at twelve o'clock Wednesday night from the effects of the wound. Harber figured conspicuously in the Jupiter fight in Bodie over one year ago, and was one of George Daly's fighters, so called. When Daly went to Leadville, Harber followed and found employment under Daly's management of the Ten-mile mine. What caused Harber to receive the wound that produced his death is at present unknown. He leaves a wife and two children in this place.—Aurora Herald.

PROFESSOR PROCTOR has been decoyed into an engagement to deliver his series of lectures at Sacramento, some irresponsible person having assured him that the place was of real importance.—Stock Report.

Report of W. M. Boyd, Road Overseer Dist. No. 3 accepted and approved, and bill allowed.

Petition of citizens and tax payers, asking that the road leading from the town of Independence, to a point on the west bank of Owens River, opposite Bend City, and from the east bank of said river through Bend City and Mazourka Cañon to Badger Flat, be declared a county road; petition granted, and said road declared to be a county road.

It is hereby ordered, that in accordance with 4,046, subdivision 5 of the political code, a per capati tax of two dollars each, be levied and collected from each and every citizen of Inyo County subject to the payment of a poll tax; said tax to be known as the Hospital Poll Tax, and to be collected in the same manner as is provided for the collection of poll taxes; and with the same commissions to be allowed to the Assessor and Tax Collector for the collection of said tax, and that the net proceeds derived from the collection of said tax be paid into the County Treasury, and credited to the Hospital Fund.

SATURDAY, Feb. 12, 1881.

In the matter of a duplicate assessment roll for the year 1881, it is ordered that it be dispensed with.

Whereupon the Board adjourned for the term.

FOR SALINE.—Jerry McCarty's prospecting in the new Saline District has has resulted already in attracting the attention of such well known mining operators as Dwight Crittenden, of the Mammoth, and Jeff McClellan, formerly prominent on the Comstock. These gentlemen, under guidance of Mr. McCarty, passed through Bishop Creek and Big Pine last Wednesday, and from thence across the Invos to Saline Valley. They have some of the most important locations under bond, and seem so confident of being satisfied with them after examination that they have already ordered an ample supply of mining material to vigorously prosecute work. With such men as these at work there will be but a short time required for the job of putting up a mill and starting bullion shipments. Such is their present intention, at least.

CARP.—Thos. E. Jones, the popular farmer and correspondent, hauled up in front of THE INDEPENDENT office yesterday with three barrels of water containing nearly 400 live carp, for planting in a fine pond on his place in Round Valley. They were obtained at San Benardino, which point he left last Monday. His really meritorious enterprise is bound to prove a successful one—the precourser of a profitable and delightful industry, which will eventually utilize the natural springs and sloughs of the valley in the matter of food production. We shall await reports with great interest.

MINERAL HILL.—Mr. J. R. Gifford, a thoroughly practical miner, is at Bishop Creek organizing work on the Mineral Hill property, or Piute mill and mine, in Piute District, near Bishop.

AT HOME.—Judge A. R. Conklin arrived home last evening. He reports a rough trip and pretty much the whole country below flooded.

PREACHING.—Rev. F. M. Willis will preach to-morrow evening in this place, and in the Milton school house on Tuesday evening.

LEFT OVER.—Various notes concerning Benton, the Indian Queen and the Bishop Creek section are necessarily laid over until next issue.

COMMISSIONER Le DUC's tea farm near Summerville, S. C., comprises 200 acres. Mr. Livingston, the owner, asks the Government nothing for the use of the land for twenty years, and would have given a longer lease, but the Commissioner believes that twenty years is a term sufficiently long for determining the profitableness or otherwise of tea culture, and to propagate sufficient plants to stock the country.

A JOINT-STOCK company has been formed at the sink of the Carson for the purpose of sinking artesian wells. Should a good flow of water be procured the sink will bloom in cereals.

LETTER FROM LOS ANGELES.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Feb. 8, 1881.

MESSRS. EDITORS—When a verdant hombre, like myself, fresh from the "wilds of Inyo," is suddenly precipitated by steam into this Paradise, he feels bewildered—thinks he is merely reveling in a beautiful dream, scanning a spiritual phenomena — the evergreen shore. Can't hardly realize himself to be any longer an earthly being. Must be wrapped in profound slumber, or has shaken off his mortal coil, and entered the glorious realm, the spirit land. "Climate" does have this effect! However, he gradually becomes conscious of his being still a small mortal treading terra firma and munching oranges! Pat was once asked, after visiting London, what he thought of the great city. "Och, by the powers 'o mud!" he replied, "it's a counthry of houses!" This is a country of flowers, fruit and evergreens. It is orange, limes, lemons, blue gums, pepper trees, evergreens and flowers, grasses, etc., by the million; a grand panorama; something to be seen but not to be "writ up."

HOW A RUSTY MINER WAS STRUCK.

About a year ago a miner, who had made a raise in the northern mines, was meandering south. He and his blankets were having a gratuitous ride in a peddler's wagon into the town of Los Angeles. When they confronted a certain place (not fifty yards from where these lines are penned), he desired the peddler to halt, go in and inquire the price of that property. Mr. P. does so; the proprietor informed him that it was worth $20,000. Mr. Miner planked down the money, and immediately sent East for his parents, sisters and brother, and made them a present of the whole property. He soon after returned to the mines. The place contains only a few acres, but is beautiful, and very highly improved. Thirty thousand dollars was lately offered for the same property, which shows that the miner wasn't crazy or devoid of judgment.

SOME FARMING.

Agriculture, as well as horticulture, is carried on on a large scale in this country. One company—the San Fernando Co.—plow, with, the Stockton gangs, 300 acres per day and sow it to barley. During harvest they run six headers, 16-foot cut. The grain is not stacked at all, but is run through the threshing machines from the header wagons. We took a spin over Lucky Baldwin's premises. He has a tract of 14,000 acres, most of which is under a high state of cultivation. His grounds are wonderfully grand—orange groves, vineyards, orchards; in fact, it is properly termed the model farm. Other wealthy men are spending large sums in the same region—Rose, Chapman, Shorb, Wilson and Kinney, the last named having spent over $60,000 on his premises in less than a year. He has built on a high eminence in the Sierra Madre, from which a commanding view is obtained of a large area of country.

Pasadena, in the same belt, is a flourishing temperance colony of several thousand acres in extent. It is owned by actual settlers in small tracts of 5, 10, 15 and 20 acres. It is beautifully laid out, entirely in fruit, flowers and evergreens—no grain. This settlement is only six years old, but bids fair to eclipse any of the others. The entire belt from Los Angeles to San Bernardino, including the far famed Riverside Colony, for a distance of over sixty miles east of Los Angeles, is a wonderfully productive country for grain, grazing and particularly fruit. One man told me that he had raised six successive volunteer crops of barley; hadn't even scratched the ground once during that time.

A magnificent country is also to be seen south and west of Los Angeles, but it won't do to crowd your columns with a lengthy report.

After spinning considerably over this wide domain, my friend here declares that we have "no country at all in Inyo." Your humble servant begs leave to slightly differ with him. All through this great expanse of fertile country products of the soil are necessarily cheap; such an abundance of everything raised and to ship by rail is equal to giving half or more of some commodities to the greedy railroads. Just think of a sack of good, clean barley worth only from four to six bits; a whole sack of cabbage about 30 cents; potatoes about the same. In fact, you can buy a wagon load of garden "truck" for an insignificant sum from the swarms of Chinese gardeners who daily trot around with it. Fruit is dirt cheap; grapes are delivered at the distilleries for $30 to $35 per ton. Wine, of course, is cheap and abundant. Being at an extensive wine cellar, the other day, where thousands of gallons repose, inquiries and sampling were in order just then. The price of wine is governed by its age, the cheapest being 20 cents per gallon—hence no sane person here would shock his stomach with cold water!

Yesterday we traveled 50 miles or more through a farming country, and were all the streams we crossed, Los Angeles river included, concentrated into one it would not equal Bishop Creek in volume. Again, dry seasons play havoc.

We met a man, the other day, with his wife and three babies huddled in a little wagon, striking out he knew not where. We asked him why should he turn his back on this beautiful land and desert such a fine climate. "Can't live on climate," said he, "neither can I compete with these ——— Chinese. I am going north where the snow flies, and where a farmer gets a living price for his products."

THE SPIRIT OF DISCONTENT.

"I'll sell out and leave this Owens River Country; too much wind; too—too—too much—well, it's no country to live in, no how; I'll go south," etc. Such as the above is often heard. The spirit of discontent is prevalent in all localities. It occupies a little corner of the human breast.

Have we a country in Inyo? Yes. The mineral resources are great. We also have a rich and durable soil, an abundance of pure water, a mild and healthful climate, and where can you find a better market? grain, 2½ to 3 cents per pound. Yes, of course, supplies are high in Inyo; taxes are high; the mountains are high, and we are a hifalutin set of people in every respect. In order to regulate taxes, which are exorbitant, we should study political economy and thoroughly investigate local politics. It may avail something.

To the wealthy advice is superfluous. If you are continually bellyaching, migrate, Mr. Growler; others, more useful, will probably take your place. Are you single? If so you are a free agent. Do as you please. But a word to the married: The man who has by dint of perseverance and industry accumulated some property—has a snug and cosy little home for himself, wife and children—pause, old man, pause before you dispose of your property and burst up your home; don't drag that woman and those children mercilessly over the land. Recollect, "Distance lends enchantment," etc. Be cautious. Know where you are going to before you start. A change occasionally—a visit to the coast once a year, if possible, is advisible—conducive to health.

If you can, pile your wife and babies into an empty wagon, put a good cover on it, sail down this way and spend a month or so in mid-winter, and it will be a glorious treat. To an active mind the humdrum of farm life is often a heavy tax. The object of life is happiness; man is not a money-making machine entirely. Farmers, in particular, should have more recreation to make life enjoyable. T. E. J.

IN GENERAL.

The reports of rich mineral discovies in Alaska are still exciting the people up north.

At a Republican meeting in Brooklyn last Monday night a free fight occurred in which several of the brethren were nearly or quite killed.

The Electoral vote was counted last Tuesday in joint convention of Congress, and Garfield and Arthur were formally declared elected Preisident and Vice President of the United States. It was a very quiet transaction. The vote stood—Garfield, 214; Hancock, 155.

Excitement prevails at Colton, San Bernardino county, over a rich mining discovery, twenty miles distant.

Every building at Pass Manchac, La., was swept away by a storm on the 9th.

The jury in the Gray-Glancey murder trial (the second) at Santa Barbara failed to agree, and were discharged.

The distress is so great among the Ural tribes of Russia they are selling their male children for grain and leaving the females to perish.

It seems to be a settled fact the Eureka and Palisade railroad is to be extended south in this direction. An agent is now East buying rails for the purpose.

FOR some time, says Dame Rumor, bad blood has existed between Dennis Harrington, better known as "Double Din," and John Lawless, residents of Candelaria on the Columbus road, and beat the latter over the head with a pick handle, inflicting wounds from which Lawless died on Monday morning. The cause of the killing is said to have been the alleged intimacy of Double Din with Mrs. Lawless. The latter will have his examination in Candelaria, and no doubt be held to answer to the Grand Jury for his acts.—Aurora Herald.

MR. C. J. BARBER gives an exhibition of a patent gold dry-washer, the Waugaman. A large number of mining men were present to inquire into the merits of the new invention. The trial was a perfect success, Mr. Barber putting in twenty-seven and another twenty colors into the dirt, and upon running through the washer saved every color. It is claimed for the machines that they will work twenty tons per day; and upon dirt that would not be worth working by any other process, will yield a large profit. Certainly the working of the machine yesterday carries out this assertion.—Arizona Star.

I WOULD keep "better hours" if I were a boy again; that is, I would go to bed earlier than most boys do. Nothing gives more mental and bodily vigor than sound rest when properly applied. Sleep is our great replenisher, and if we neglect to take it regularly in childhood, all the worse for us when we grow up. If we sit up late we decay; and sooner or later we contract a disease called insomnia, allowing it to be permanently fixed upon us, and then we begin to decay, even in youth. Late hours are shadows from the grave. —F. T. Fields.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 19.....1881

A PREACHER in Rook county, Kansas, had been for weeks conducting a wonderfully successful revival. "Dear brethren and sisters," he said one day, "this is the last meeting I shall hold. It is impossible to keep up a fervor on corn bread and molasses for myself and an ear of corn a day for my horse. God bless you."

IT has been found necessary to begin the formation of a new entrance to the Mont Cenis tunnel on the French side. The former entrance showed dangerous signs of sinking.

ALL the buildings at the United States Fishery, on the McCloud river, have been carried away by the late storm. The loss will be very great.

UNPRECEDENTED floods and gales in Spain have cost agricultural interests a vast sum, and half the orange and lemon crop is ruined.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

THIS HONEY WAS REMOVED FROM THE comb by centrifugal force, with a machine made for the purpose. It is therefore virtually the same as honey in the comb, only you don't have to eat the bees-wax, which is indigestible and therefore disagrees with many persons. When first extracted the honey is liquid, but nearly all pure honey will candy or granulate in course of time, especially if exposed to the cold. Putting the cans in hot water for a short time will bring the honey to its fluid state without injury.

This Honey is put up in 10 pound cans, with patented screw tops, which renders it convenient for family use, and especially for the mines, to which it may be packed, even upside down, without leakage. A neat label on each can gives full directions.

Price, $1 50 per can, or 12½ cents per lb at the Apiary, if customers furnish their own receptacle. For sale at Harris & Rouine's, Independence, and at the Apiary, at Jacob Vagt's place, Camp Independence.

BEE-CULTURE.—NO. IX.

ENEMIES OF BEES.

First among enemies of bees is a careless or ignorant owner; he will kill any amount of bees in handling them, perhaps even kill the queen by his carelessness; he will drop a comb if a bee happens to sting his fingers, and smash bees, brood and honey into a shapeless mass; he will throw pieces of comb round on the ground setting the bees to fighting and robbing each other; he will put caps on his hives when the bees have only half filled the lower story, then take the caps off when they are full, regardless of whether the combs contain brood or not, and if they do he will throw them away instead of fastening them into frames and saving the worker brood. In the Fall, after taking the caps off, he will leave the bees severely alone, supposing they will do well enough until next Spring; instead of examining if they have a good queen, plenty of bees and stores, and a tight, weatherproof hive. Or perhaps he will even leave the caps on the hives, compelling the bees to keep warm double the space necessary for them, in which case they often move up into the cap, and commence breeding there in the Spring; and then the owner is puzzled what to do. The method of sacrificing whole swarms to the brimstone pit, in order to get their honey, is fortunately abandoned in this country, as now the most ignorant know that they can get the honey without killing the bees. But even then many swarms starve during the Winter, because the owner in his cupidity robs them too close. There is especially danger of this by the injudicious use of the honey extractor. The next enemy is the patent-hive vender. Most of the patents pertaining to bee culture are on useless and complicated contrivances, making it easier for the smaller enemies to prey upon the bees, and at the same time more difficult for the owner to handle them, until he in disgust gives it up, or, if he has sense enough, transfers his bees into simple frame hives and throws the patented traps away. All hinges, doors, glass windows, drawers, traps for catching moths and robbers and other such contrivances work very well in theory and in a new empty hive, but after the hive has contained a swarm of bees for a season the owner finds to his sorrow that they are a detriment. The vender of patent hives is generally ignorant of the simplest principles of bee culture, but will like a parrot repeat a learned lesson, which by its length and stilted terms confuses the uninitiated and makes him think that the hive offered is just the thing to make him rich in short meter. Or, if the vender knows anything, he gives the practical bee keeper a wide berth, and visits only such as are easily taken in by his fine talk and pretended improvements. Bears, foxes, skunks, birds, particularly the king-bird, toads, lizzards and certain large insects are all fond of either the honey or the bees. Ants often seek shelter in or near the hive on account of the warmth from the bees, but seldom meddle with the interior of the hives, unless it is deserted. I have seen only one kind of ants, large black fellows, from one-half to five-eights of an inch long, who would attack a swarm. The remedy is to destroy the ants or move the bees out of their reach.

The bee-moth is however the most troublesome pest with which the ordinary bee keeper has to do. The moth itself is harmless enough, but its eggs, which it lays in or near the hive, hatch out worms which feed on the wax in the combs and thereby destroy them. These moth-worms are white, with a brown head, are of rapid growth, and when full grown from one to one and a-half inches long, and three-sixteenths of an inch in diameter, tapering to both ends. Their presence may generally be detected by their droppings, which look like gunpowder. In order to protect themselves against the bees they spin a silken gallery as they work along in the comb, mostly over the brood, which is thereby destroyed or prevented from hatching out, as well in those combs which contain much pollen. The larger worms do not trouble the honey comb much, as the honey would daub them, and prevents them from hiding under the surface of the comb.

The careful bee keeper will examine his combs often, and with some sharp instrument pick out and kill every worm he finds. The moth may often be found during the day time sitting under the edges of the cover, or on the shady side of the hive, where they may be killed by quickly putting the fingers over them, but as they are slippery they easily get away. They are of a dull grayish color, the wings joining each other in the shape of a hen's tail. The female is considerably larger than the male. Being nocturnal in their habits they are only on the wing after dark, and it is at this time that they enter the hive to deposit their eggs. Numbers of them may be caught by placing vessels with sweetened vinegar and water near the hives at night, when the moths will fall in and get drowned, but these vessels should be taken away in the day time. The best remedy against moth worms, however, is to get Italian bees; these do not allow the worms to work in the combs, and if the hive is made right, there will be few lurking places for them. When empty combs are stored away they should be examined occasionally and the moth-worms picked out, or, if they are numerous the combs must be subjected to the fumes of brimstone in a close box. If the combs are hung one and one-half inches apart, or in a place where they are exposed to a freezing temperature they will be comparatively safe.

Kidnaping Extraordinary.

Some time ago a number of the heavy Front street firms of San Francisco were badly taken in by a man named Goldwater of Arizona. Goldwater had done business in the Territory for ten or twelve years, and was in excellent standing with the wholesalers. He purchased on credit about a hundred thousand dollars' worth of goods and had them shipped to Yuma. At Yuma they were taken charge of by a confederate of Goldwater's (to whom Goldwater claims he sold them), and now the whole stock is non est. It was a simple business transaction. Goldwater purchased the goods on credit and he sold them again, and he said to the Front street men, "Gentlemen, what are you going to do about it? You are welcome to all the goods you find." What the merchants did was this: Last week a special locomotive and car went down from here to Yuma. At Yuma the special was brought to a stop in front of Goldwater's house, which is close by the railroad track. A detective and two or three men darted into the house, and finding Mr. Goldwater and some convivial friends at dinner they laid hold of the crooked merchant and hustled him on board their train. Away they went, and in the twinkling of a cat's eye were across the border on California soil. The prisoner was brought directly here, arriving Saturday evening in time to be placed on board the north bound freight train. He is now in quod in San Francisco, where he will be obliged to face his angry creditors.—Los Angeles Express.

The Whittaker Case.

Whittaker has not helped himself by insisting upon a Court-martial, for thus far all the evidence tends to confirm the impression that he himself is the guilty party. The attempt to show animus on the part of the officers of West Point has not been at all successful. In fact it has been elicited that at the outset of the case there was a very general feeling of indignation among those gentlemen against the supposititious assailants of the colored cadet. The moment investigation commenced, however, the strong improbability of Whittaker's statements began to tell against him, and when the experts had completed their examination of the alleged warning note, it was scarcely possible to believe any longer in his innocence. It is we think already evident that the Court-martial will convict him and that instead of retiring voluntarily from West Point he will be expelled with disgrace. And such a conclusion we regard as the only one consistant with the facts of the case as heretofore dnveloped.—Record Union.

THE LATEST.

Following is the brief of the dispatches in the Chronicle of the 23d:

Col. Mendell's report on San Francisco harbor has been transmitted to the House at Washington. It declares that the depth of water on the bar has not been diminished, but that the entrance is a trifle narrower....Senator Booth has asked for $15,000 for the repair of the McCloud river salmon hatchery....A number of Democratic Congressmen have organized a free trade association, and propose to make this a prominent issue in the next campaign ....There is much disquiet among Republicans over the control of the new Senate, owing to Matt Carpenter's dangerous illness....The Funding bill, it is announced on good authority, will not be vetoed....The Senate Committee on Finance has decided to recommend the repeal of taxes on bank deposits....An Atlanta man named Farrington shot the seducer of his daughter....The music festival receipts from seven performances at Cincinnati amount to about $50,000....Washington's birthday was generally celebrated throughout the East. Richmond celebrated the day for the first time since the rebellion.... Two hundred Apaches, a few days ago, killed seven women and children and plundered Carrollas, Chihuahua.... England and Belgium will not rule out American pork.

The legislative news is: The Senate Committee on Contingent Expenses has examined into Speaker Parks' salary, and will censure severely the Controller's action....The debris men in the Assembly have agreed on a line of action....An offer to trade off votes on different measures was rejected....The Repeal, Appropriation and Apportionment bills will probably fail.

THE much talked-of Funding bill passed the United States Senate, on the 18th, by a vote of 43 to 20. The bill provides for 5-20 three per per cent. bonds, and makes the new bonds the only ones receivable as security for National bank circulation. The concurrence of the House in the Senate amended bill is thought to be certain. The passage of the bill produced almost a panic among the bond holders on Wall street, everybody wanting to get rid of their bonds at any price, but the fright soon wore off and previous conditions again prevailed.

THE French Government has forbidden the importation of pork from the United States on account of the prevalence of trichina, and the impossibility of examining cargoes at ports of landing. In view, however, of the considerable consumption of American pork by the lower classes, the French Government will try to devise a less stringent but sufficiently protective method.

THE five convicted Mussel Slough settlers are having quite an elegant time of it in the Santa Clara jail where they are serving out their sentence. The people treat them with the utmost consideration, visiting them daily in crowds, and providing them with every available comfort to render their confinement as little unpleasant as possible.

IN a couple of weeks freight and passenger cars will be running regularly over the Carson and Candelaria railroad to the Walker Lake Indian Reservation, and from which point all stages running in this direction will thereafter take their departure, thereby gaining twelve hours' time.

IT is reported that Pope, the cashier of the Bodie Bank, at Bodie, has gone where the woodbine twineth. The bank is all right, but Pope overdrew his account and did not feel able to tell the story of how he did it to the directors.

OVER 4,500,000 pounds of railroad fastenings, valued at about $140,000, were sold at St. Louis during three days recently. The supplies are to be used on railroads now being constructed west of the Mississippi River.

FERNANDO WOOD leaves an estate valued at about half a million dollars, and eleven children to share it. He had been married three times, but had no children by his first wife.

THE London Times is informed that a memorial is being extensively signed among the business men of Germany in favor of the adoption of bi-metalism.

THE four-dollar-per-day question is still agitating the Nevada newspapers and the miners. Those who ever worked in a hot mine are solid for $4.

THE Union Pacific Railroad Company has subscribed $60,000 towards the erection of a mammoth grain elevator at Omaha.

DID DO SOMETHING, AFTER ALL.

Those newspapers that have been abusing Cone and Beerstecher and Stoneman, the three Railroad Commissioners, calling them idiots and the like, ought now to offer them a conditional apology. We do, anyway, for it really seems the notable trio have done something to show that they are not such imbeciles as appearances have indicated, especially their first report, to which we have referred heretofore. The Commissioners made the disastrous mistake of modeling their first report after the style of the San Francisco Call editorials—that is, that not knowing what sort of an opinion would pay best or be generally most agreeable, they simply embraced that opportunity to say that after a year of close study (by proxy) of the subject in hand they had no particular opinion about it either way. But most everybody derided such an imbecile effort from such high priced officials, whereupon they hired a man versed in figures to arrange a schedule for them, and now, right on the heels of their first effort, they submit a comprehensive schedule of passenger rates for every mile of railroad in the State.

While we, not having studied the subject, do not claim to know any more than the Commissioners themselves did a couple of weeks ago as to what is right and equitable in the premises, yet we are satisfied that the adoption of this schedule of passenger rates will be an immense gain to the traveling public of this State, and yet be not at all ruinous to the railroads. Some one who claims to know estimates that the saving in fares will amount to about one million dollars a year. In that case it is evident that Stoneman, and Beerstecher, and Cone were not created in vain, and that they are entitled to their pay, and also a conditional apology as above stated. But it should be borne in mind that Stanford has fifteen days in which to labor with the three Commissioners, and Stanford rarely or never labors without reward.

The new schedule makes reductions on passenger rates of from one to five cents a mile—about three cents on the average, and no unreasonable discriminations against way passengers or localities allowed anywhere. Heretofore the charge from Los Angeles to San Francisco has been about seven cents a mile; it is now (in the report) reduced to four cents a mile, affecting all intermediate stations in like proportion.

Whether the Commissioners will hold out in their proposition remains to be seen.

THE new version of the New Testament, which has been so many years in course of translation and which is unquestionably the most important literary enterprise this century has seen, is being waited for with anxious curiosity by tens of thousands of people. It is not generally known that a first edition of 500,000 copies has already been manufactured in England, and 100,000 copies are said to be already in New York city, but not one of them is permitted to be sold until permission is telegraphed from the proper authorities in England. We are told that the price per copy of this first edition will not be less than $10; also, that the Literary Revolution is prepared to meet the expected great demand for the book by doing some of the quickest bookmaking that has probably ever been accomplished. Arrangements have been made to put the entire book in type inside of twenty-four hours from the time the first printed copy of the English edition can be procured, and within three days at least 10,000 copies will be bound ready for delivery, and not less than 5,000 copies are to be turned out every day thereafter until the demand is satisfied. It will be printed in large, clear type, making about 500 pages. It is to be sold at 20 cents in cloth binding, 60 cents in half Russia and $1 25 in full Morocco. Address American Book Exchange, New York.

THE Cleveland correspondent of the New York Herald says that he is permitted through a source that may be relied on to give a complete list of the forthcoming Cabinet as it now stands. It is as follows: Secretary of State, James G. Blaine; Secretary of the Treasury, Charles G. Folger; Secretary of the Navy, Nathan Goff, Jr. The other three members will be Horace Davis, of California, James M. Wilson, of Iowa, and ex-Senator Howe, of Wisconsin. Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Garfield are warm friends, and as the General wants a member from the Pacific Slope to balance the two important offices which he is giving in the East, there can be no better man selected than Davis.

ON the 20th instant Parnell addressed an audience of 15,000 people at Clara, a little town in King's county, Ireland. He counseled the people to oppose passive resistance to all Government measures, and urged tenant farmers not to pay rent. He declared that obstruction had delayed suspension of the habeas corpus seven weeks. His progress through Ireland was a continuous ovation.

LETTER FROM SACRAMENTO.

SACRAMENTO, Feb. 20, 1881.

MESSRS. EDITORS—Since I wrote you last legislative life has been somewhat sensational as compared with the first half of the session. Outside the capitol high water has ruled, and at times threatened to convert the dome into an ark of safety, and the bill introduced with a view of providing an elevator therefor does not now appear so much of a joke, and when it comes up for passage, I shall vote for it so my successor here can ride up and down the State observatory and look out over the waste of waters in some style. There is nothing mean about me. The subject of most interest outside, and the "slickens" within the capitol, is the question of pumps to save the streets and back yards from becoming invisible without diving apparatus. However, as the average legislator ought to be hung instead of drowned, I will shortly change the subject. We have heard a great deal about the pumps of the Comstock ruining the country, through assessments and Pine street deals, but this single flood will have done more damage and discouraged more people than all the quartz and gravel mines have done in twenty years.

The Governor's reception has been about the only success during the session, probably because the heels of the members are usually better educated or trained than their heads. The Governor has been kind almost to a fault during both sessions under the new Constitution, but what profit will accrue to himself or those dined and wined remains to be seen. It remains to be seen whether a single needed measure will become a law this session, which has but eleven days more to run; and the Governor will not, under any circumstances, even if the general appropriation bill fails, call an extra session. It is the worst case of dead-lock and aggravating conditions ever seen in the history of legislation. There are all sorts of rumors and guesses afloat, but no one can begin to tell what a day may bring forth aside from the usual filibustering and fooling away the time. The latest is that Jim Farley has been telegraphing members of his side of the house to stave off a re-apportionment of the State at any cost, he being a candidate for re-election to the U. S. Senate. It has been all I could do to stay here the past week, but so far have answered roll-call every morning from the first, and have concluded to see it out, for as long as there is a show to do any good at all by remaining and trying, I feel it a duty I owe to those who were so unkind as to send me here. It is barely possible the County Government bill now engaging the Senate will come up in the Assembly yet, and that some sort of a compromise will be effected between the detritus and anti-detritus members, who have become rather embittered. A more hateful question was never submitted to a legislative body, aside from war and bloodshed, which will yet prevail over this same question, for the ranchers are threatening violence to the hydraulic men and their property. As to the Bear river and Yuba dam business, it is conceded by those who ought to know that but for the system inaugurated by the Engineers, Marysville would have gone under because of the extraordinary floods still prevailing, though subsiding. It seems hard on both parties directly at interest to repeal an act that has done good in its infancy, but I shall not be surprised to see the repealers raise the bone of contention out of its regular order, and then farewell to the effort recommended by such one-horse Engineers as Capt. Eads, Gen. Alexander, Col. Mendell, U. S. A., and others. It is possible I am guilty of more or less prejudice in favor of Eads and his ideas, having known him and his jetty scheme personally during the Winter of 1876-7, when on a visit several months in and about New Orleans.

We have every bill relating in a leading way to general county and town government under the classification system; the apportionment and appropriation bills, the road and highway bill, etc., etc., all under the slickens bill, and it looks as though they would have a much quicker if not cleaner passage were they at the bottom of the Yuba or Bear river instead of the bottom of the Assembly file. The Assembly will have night sessions hereafter, but unless a break takes place at once, that sort of an effort to do something will only add to the weariness and monotony of the scene. I can see no way out of the political scrape the people are in for years to come. I have listened or pretended to listen during most of two days to a stubborn discussion over the question of classifying counties, cities, towns, and do other things in a general way, because the government of San Francisco is a sort of Siamese (as well as Chinese) twin arrangement, and the phrase of "city and county" is going to dance up and down under the constitution for generations to come, or until the organic law is repealed on the score of local or special legislation. This discussion was over a bill regarding an election this year for county officers, so ambiguously disposed of by the constitution. The bulk of San Francisco would like to retire old Kalloch too quick, as they may retire the son, but generally I don't hear of much demand for another election all over the State following so soon after the Presidential turmoil. The Siamese system of government in question, you will see, may forestall every attempt even at a final passage of an act that will satisfy the Supreme Court. If it were possible, it would be a blessing to not only cut the lusus naturæ apart, but divide it around in even smaller sections among the more thinly populated portions of the State. It is "a bad crowd," to use the slang of the day, and I am only sorry that I cannot afford to live on Nob Hill myself. That is a consolidation act I am aiming at, but about one more run for office and it would be a live on bread and water. I learn that San Francisco money is at last going into Arizona, etc., and into things I know do not compare in value to so many properties going begging throughout Inyo county. And Eastern capital shuns this State as if it were a sucked orange and good for nothing but bad politics. The Eastern capitalist prefers the government by guerrillas to that by ward politicians.

MONDAY, 21st.

Business opened with prayer for "all in authority," and a special plea on the part of the Chaplain for harmony in the Legislature. The minutes were but partially read, postponed and a weak attempt made to reach the Debris bill sooner than by suspending the two-third rule. It came near breaking up all rule and more or less heads, the member sitting in front of me being engaged in punishing his clenched fist on the hard wood of his desk, regardless of the scowls of the Speaker. He is engaged as I write in walking up and down biting his lips and otherwise self-abusing his mind and body, while other members continue the discussion of holding an election next Fall. The head of the Judiciary Committee is expounding the Constitution by citing a cart load of authorities. Life is too long for all this. J. W.

LAST Saturday, after spending twenty days in the effort and after examining nearly seven hundred persons as to their qualifications to serve as jurors, the panel in the Kalloch murder case was at last filled, and the taking of testimony begun. It is generally presumed the young murderer will be turned loose by some hook or crook; nevertheless, the evidence already taken proves as clear a case of deliberate assassination as was ever perpetrated.

AFTER ballotting pretty much all Winter in the vain effort to elect an U. S. Senator, the Pennsylvania Republicans finally chose John J. Mitchell, a Cameron man, and so ends that trouble—only the Clan Cameron is still on deck, the which is not pleasing to the antis at all. The vote stood—Mitchell, 150; Wallace, 92; scattering, 2.

THE Pope in an address to the Cardinals, expressed regret at the renewed attacks and insults heaped upon the Church in nearly all parts of the world. Therefore an extraordinary jubilee would be inaugurated this year throughout Christendom, for the purpose of imploring the Almighty to bestow better times upon the Church.

WE learn by the Free Press, of the 24th, that Billy Degan and Dan Weir got up a promiscuous shooting match between themselves over a game of cards. Officer O'Malley came up and took a hand. By the time the evening's entertainment was ended a man named Donahue received a shot which is likely to prove fatal.

THE Arkansas Senate, recently, by a vote of 66 to 17, resolved to propose a constitutional amendment prohibiting the sale of liquor in the State. The Senate also decided that the pronunciation of the name of this State is "Arkansaw."

AT Hull, Canada, on the 20th, a girl who had recently embraced Protestantism, was forcibly taken from her friends by a party of a hundred men led by her brother-in-law.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.,
SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 26 1881

BEVERIDGE.—Taylor, McEvoy & Co's mill is running steadily on the rich gold ores of that district. Things are lively in the Mexican camp. Eleven arastras are running on selected ore, that pays $150 per ton. Quite a number of men are in the camp prospecting, and several fine veins of gold quartz have been found. Moreno & Fuentes, who own the largest mine, allow outside parties to go on their claim and take 25 foot sections, stripping the top of the vein to a depth of some six feet; one-third of the ore taken out is claimed by the owners of the mine; the parties taking it out can have their two-thirds worked in the arastras, or take it elsewhere, as they please. The mines are near the summit on the east slope of the Inyos; the country is terribly rough, and no wagon roads can be made to them nearer than the base of the mountains. It seems to be a settled fact that this will prove a rich and prosperous mining camp, notwithstanding its inaccessibility.

SALINE VALLEY.—Phil. Cartier came in a few days ago from a prospecting trip on the eastern slope of the Inyos. He brought with him some very rich samples of carbonates of lead ores, an assay of which showed 325.62 oz. silver per ton. There is no longer any doubt but that some very rich mines will be found on the east side of the Inyo range. Several parties are going in there from both north and south, and that section will be pretty thoroughly prospected during the next three months. A large sample of ore from the Lake View Mine, one of the new locations in Saline Valley, now at Mr. Woodhull's office, shows an extraordinary amount of native silver throughout the piece.

AT WORK.—We note a good deal of activity in and about the mining office of Woodhull & Phillips lately. A large number of samples for assay and inspection are coming in from the different camps. A number of transfers of mining property are being made, reports and maps drawn up, etc. As straws show which way the wind blows, these are good indications of a mining boom in this section before many months. Messrs. Woodhull & Phillips deserve much credit for the industry and perseverance with which they are trying to promote and inaugurate legitimate mining enterprises in Inyo.

REORGANIZING.—A compromise and consolidation of interests having been effected between the noted Diana and Kerrick mines, at Benton, whereby the legal troubles which shut down the camp have been obviated, there is now an encouraging prospect of a complete reorganization and resumption of work. The "daddy" of Blind Springs Hill, as a successful miner—referring to Albert Mack, of course—has gone to San Francisco to perfect arrangements, in connection with John A. Creaser and John Millner. That is all concerning the matter that we are at liberty to make public at present.

BROWN MONSTER.—Preparations are being made to start the Brown Monster mill in a few days. Ten out of the thirty stamps will be started first on good grades of ore, which is now being taken out of the mine. The Frue concentrater will be run, thereby saving nearly all the gold and silver that is not caught in the batteries and on the plates. The mine shows plenty of ore, and the low cost of milling, with the water power used, and the quality of the ore, as shown by repeated assays, should under proper management make it a good paying business for those interested.

ANOTHER MINE SOLD.—Mr. W. E. Smith, prominent in the Cerro Gordo Mining Co., the New York corporation which has purchased so many mines in Slate Cañon, Swansea District, during the week completed the purchase of the Long John mine, in the same locality. The late owners, L. Lasky and Wm. Burt, received in all $1,500. John H. Ely, of the same company, has a force at work on the Moran mines.

KEARSARGE.—Work will be started in the Kearsarge tunnel in a few days, under the direction of our genial townsman, Mr. T. F. A. Connelly. It is intended to run two hundred feet on the tunnel. Contracts will be let for fifty feet sections at a time. Mr. Connelly has unbounded faith in being able to show up a large body of rich ore within the two hundred feet mentioned.

O. L. M. & M. Co. BULLION.—On the 23d instant, after a run of two or three weeks, a partial clean-up was made and a bar of fine silver bullion of about eighty pounds in weight was shipped from the new Keeler mill on the Lake—the first. The run is being continued right along, on Ygnacio ore.

YGNACIO.—A force of men under the direction of Mr. W. S. Woodhull is at work taking out ore for the Keeler Mill. The old ore piles so long standing on the Ygnacio dumps have been cleaned up, and the ore, about 125 tons, hauled to the above mill.

GOLD PRODUCT.—The shipments of gold from the Mexican camp at Beveridge District, through the Lone Pine office of Wells, Fargo & Co., amounted for January to $2,478. About $1,000 has been shipped so far during the present month.

NEW ROAD.—J. W. Phillips and A. McKellips started out on Thursday last for the head of Mazourka Cañon, with the object of looking up a road from that point to Gold Mountain.

BABBITTING.—Millmen and machinists can find at this office about 100 pounds of very superior Babbitt metal, which will be sold for cash at 30 cents per ℔, to make room for new material.

THE RACES AT BISHOP CREEK.—We are compelled, this week, to curtail our Bishop Creek correspondence to the following mention of the races on the 22d and 23d instants: "All things considered, the races were a success. For the mile and repeat there were but two entries—"Independence," by James Richardson, and "Black Jack," by J. M. Horton. The first heat was won by Black Jack in 2.3¾, as well as the second in 2.2½. He was therefore declared the winner, and of course his owner took the money. The crowd—excepting the ladies and Good Templars—took a drink. In the evening a grand ball was given at Swearingen's Hall, where the old and the young, the married and single, beautiful and otherwise, assembled to sling the fantastic. Some of the young people from Round Valley were here; all went away seemingly well satisfied with the enjoyments of the day. The second race, on the following day, single dash of one-half mile, was contested by three entries: "Black Jack," "Brown Abby" and "Black Harry." In this race pools were sold high as $55, $25 being paid for first choice. Black Jack was again declared the winner, coming out ahead some two feet. There was also a race between saddle horses for a small purse, which created quite an interest among the spectators and upon which some money changed hands."

GOLD MINES NEAR BISHOP.—Quite a little excitement has occurred on Bishop Creek over some gold ledges situated about twelve miles east of the town, in the west foot-hills of the Inyo range. One of the best is a three-foot ledge belonging to Hypolite Galeron, from which, by means of a small arastra on the river, he last week cleaned up $350 in gold after working five tons. The specimens all show gold in a free state, and the entire ledge would pay handsomely with proper milling facilities. Messrs. Keating & Baule, of Bodie, recently made an examination of the property, for which they offered $10,000 and were refused. Extensions on this ledge, probably of equal value, belong to J. H. Stoutenborough and to Munzinger & Phillippay. Higher up on the mountain Gilbert, Sherman & Black have discovered some mines of the same description and equally rich in gold. The veins are contact, in slate and lime; small specimens of the ore may be seen at this office. It is to be hoped that the Bodie party may be encourged to put up a mill.

HIS CONDITION.—George Watterson, who was so severely shot by Ben Alverson at Benton a few weeks ago, is now out of danger and fairly recovering. The ball struck the arm near the shoulder and, glancing around the bone, inflicted a very serious wound. Dr. Middleton, however, has made such a complete success in his bold treatment that the arm will not be disabled. Our account of the shooting was not altogether correct in the first place, but as both the men were somewhat to blame and as the matter has been dropped, it is not now necessary to go over it again.

CONCERT.—Miss Marcia Stevens, assisted by the Lone Pine Glee Club and Mr. S. D. Baker, will give a musical entertainment at the Lone Pine school house on Monday evening, March 7th. A grand ball will follow, in honor of the school. A cordial invitation is extended to all friends of education. We have heard good judges speak in high praise of the acquirements of the pupils of Miss Stevens and Mr. Baker, and no doubt the affair will be an enjoyable one.

THE OFFICERS.—Following is the list of officers of Busy Bee Lodge, No. 250, I. O. G. T., installed last Monday night for the current quarter by F. M. Willis, S. D. G. W. C. T.: S. P. Moffat (re-elected), W. C. T.; Mrs. M. Q. Parker, W. V. T.; Fred. George, W. R. H. S.; Alvah Conklin, W. L. H. S.; John Crough, W. S.; Willie A. Chalfant, W. A. S.; Carrie Willis, W. F. S.; Mrs. M. George, W. T.; Winton Willis, W. M.; Jane Wheaton, W. D. M.; Mrs. E. Willis, W. C.; P. A. Chalfant, W. I. G.; H. P. Cartier, W. O. G. and L. D.

CONTEMPTIBLE TRICKS.—A gang of overgrown hoodlums in Lone Pine have been so annoying the teacher and classes at the evening and singing school that forbearance on the part of the authorities has ceased to be a virtue. Our young friends should bear in mind that the people maintain schools for their benefit—to impart knowledge, not to supply a place for the practice of lawless mischief. The people also provide jails, and it looks as though some of the boys were hunting them, too.

THE FUN.—The fifth years' amusements of the Independence Jockey Club commence next Thursday, and judging from the number of horses and three-year-olds in training there will be some fine sport and a square deal. A social dance is arranged for the night of the 4th—inauguration day. Opinion is about equally divided as to how the race of man against horse will come out, and both sides seem confident of taking in the opponent's $300.

WILL ACCOUNT FOR IT.—The fact that THE INDEPENDENT force has been for the most of the week engaged upon job work for the County Assessor and others, in matters of pressing importance, will account for any shortcomings of this issue.

TAX SALE.—The sale of property for delinquent taxes is progressing slowly to-day. Pretty much all of any value has been paid up, but the remainder will have to go through the usual farcical nonsense of being "listed to the State."

RETURNED.—Dr. B. E. Stevenson, the popular physician and surgeon formerly of Cerro Gordo, has returned from Bodie and will locate at Darwin. Lots of warm friends are glad to welcome him back in Inyo.

IMPROVED.—The interior of the Headquarters saloon has been handsomely remodled and newly painted.

AGOING.—Schalten's new brewery at Big Pine is in operation, turning out an approved quality of beer.

THE INDIAN QUEEN.

Bullion Record of a Paying Property.

At the northern end of the great Inyo or White Mountain range, with its vast mineral belts extending from Darwin and Cerro Gordo to Montgomery—a distance of 150 miles—there is situate the old Indian Queen mine, in what is called Oneoto District. It is in Esmeralda Co., Nev., but, as stated, on the same range as contains the most productive silver mines of California, including Cerro Gordo, the history of which the Indian Queen seems about to rival in the extent of its bullion yield. Matters have been carried on so quietly by the Queen managers that it is only when some newspaper man gets close within its neighborhood that the public can learn of what is going on. The INDIAN QUEEN M. AND M. CO.,

Is now a New Jersey incorporation, with its principal office at Boston. It has a paid-up capital stock of $250,000, divided into 125,000 shares. John Howell is among the Directors and Wm. Adams, Jr., is the Superintendent in charge, both well known in mining circles. The company property consists of the Indian Queen mine, under U. S. patent, four additional locations and a millsite of 80 acres. The average width of the ledge is 38 inches, and the average value of the ore about $113 per ton. The mine is developed by five tunnels, the deepest being 320 feet from the surface. The ore above the 210-foot level is pretty well exhausted, through the insatiable demand of the little four-stamp mill, which has yielded

MORE SILVER BULLION

In proportion to its battery power than any other quartz mill on the coast, as will be shown further on. Below No. 4 tunnel there is sufficient ore blocked out to guarantee dividends for months to come equal to those of the past six, if not much more, as the ore in the deepest point opened assays over $300 per ton. By means of a White & Howell chlorodizing furnace, the ore is worked up to 96½ per cent. of assay. The

Total dividends paid	$475,000 00

With such a financial showing as this, coupled with the fact that the mine is developing richer and more extensive with deeper exploitation, it is no wonder that New York and Boston capital is seeking the stock as an investment. Large blocks are being sold by the new company at $3 per share—$1 above par—and monthly dividends of 2 to 3 per cent promised indefinitely. When Eastern investors come to understand the geographical location of the mine, as relating to many properties of this county, they will in course of time seek investments further south and within the limits of this county.

NO DAMAGE.—Venus and Jupiter, with Neptune for a disinterested witness, occulted the other night according to programme, and are now sailing rapidly and majestically away from each other as if nothing had happened out of the usual course—which was about the facts of the case, since they crossed each other's trail at least three degrees apart, therefore there was no occultation at all; neither was this little mud planet of ours singed out of existence as prophesied by that latter day prophet of New York. But Venus is a beauty for all that, and the three planets together constitute a notable and brilliant trio.

RESIGNED.—S. G. Sneden, Esq., Justice of the Peace at Bishop Creek, tendered his resignation, but which did not arrive before the Board of Supervisors adjourned. As Mr. Sneden is one of the most popular and best qualified officers in the county, the action is very generally deprecated by his fellow citizens. Several petitions have been prepared looking to the selection of his successor, but we would respectfully suggest that a big one, addressed to Mr. Sneden, be made up requesting his withdrawal of the resignation.

LUMBER.—The Black Rock saw mill, Garringer & Co., proprietors, has been running steadily for the past two weeks, with an abundance of orders ahead. Yesterday two large teams were loaded at the dump, destined for Gold Mountain.

RE-OPENED.—Mrs. Sarah E. Drake is again in charge of the popular hotel at Bishop Creek bearing her name. It has been substantially improved and well maintains its former favorable reputation. Advertisement next week.

ON THE TAPIS.—It is rumored that H. C. Johnson, the Nevada foot-racer, has agreed to meet at this point our local speeder, Dan'l Crough, to contest for $250 aside—the match to come off in about three weeks.

MINOR MENTION.—It is, perforce, again necessary to postpone several local mentions pertaining to facts, happenings and personalities relating to our neighboring northern towns.

IN BLOOM.—Apricot and other fruit trees have been in full bloom for over a week, and the season is at least a month ahead of time.

AFTER THE GUNSIGHT.—Matt and Jimmy Macdonald, who have been at Bodie for a year or two past, returned here last week, and have since gone on to the Death Valley country in search of the famous Gunsight or some other lode out there from which they have seen ore of wonderful richness. They are the sort of boys to find it if it is to be found.

STILL IN THE FIELD.—We are backed by the authority of Jim himself in the statement that the old stand-by and enterprising firm of Creaser & Millner are still in the Benton mercantile field, and proposes to stay in business, with a new stock shortly to arrive. Further announcement will be made.

GETTING WELL.—Ramon Montenegro, of whose presumed fatal wounding in a shooting scrape at Belleville mention has been made in these columns, is now reported to be recovering rapidly.

Fish Culture.

There is no question but what water will yield more food than land, and can be made to pay more with less labor. Do the people generally know this? We will presume that they do not; for it is fair to conclude that if they did they would adopt fish culture as an industry, if not for commercial purposes, to the extent of domestic supply. We are taught that fish will not prosper where the temperature of the water exceeds 75°, and as water in Oregon probably never reaches this heat, we may conclude that fish could be successfully grown almost any place where there is running water. Mr. Pevi Davis of Forestville, California, in the Rural Press says: "I bought six carp, paying $30; one died. The first year I raised 2,044; in 1877 I raised 2,672. In 1878 I sold two and raised 4,000. This year (1879) I have not drawn off the water, and therefore cannot tell how many I have raised. I have four ponds which cost $50 each, and $30 for fish makes $230. I have sold fish amounting to $416. I have at least $6,000 worth of fish on hand. My family have used them all the time, when desired, of which I made no account. The ponds are about two by three rods in size." Now we submit that every family in the country where they have running water, are so situated that they can have a pond, can produce fish for home use, and if desired for the market.

"A YOUNG woman recently went to an English fancy ball as a powder puff." It must have been a puff ball. And this reminds us that a young man once went to an American ball as a rifle. No one guessed what character he represented until he went off "half cocked," and staggered against a man who called him a "son of a gun."—Norristown Herald.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

THIS HONEY WAS REMOVED FROM THE comb by centrifugal force, with a machine made for the purpose. It is therefore virtually the same as honey in the comb, only you don't have to eat the bees-wax, which is indigestible and therefore disagrees with many persons. When first extracted the honey is liquid, but nearly all pure honey will candy or granulate in course of time, especially if exposed to the cold. Putting the cans in hot water for a short time will bring the honey to its fluid state without injury.

This Honey is put up in 10 pound cans, with patented screw tops, which renders it convenient for family use, and especially for the mines, to which it may be packed, even upside down, without leakage. A neat label on each can gives full directions.

Price, $1 50 per can, or 12½ cents per ℔, at the Apiary, if customers furnish their own receptacle. For sale at Harris & Rhine's, Independence, and at the Apiary, at Jacob Vagt's place, Camp Independence.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Allgemeine Deutsche Unterstuetzungs Gesellschaft.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 28, 1880.

Messrs. Harris & Rhine, Independence, Cal.:

DEAR SIRS—The undersigned, President of the German Benevolent Society, begs leave to call your attention to this truly benevolent institution, founded in the early days of California, and being now in the 27th year of its existence. The Society was formed to carry out three objects, viz: to assist poor and worthy or deserving people by support, to find employment for those out of work, and to cure those who are stricken down with sickness. For the latter purpose the Society owns a magnificent Hospital, surrounded by extensive grounds, where all patients are under the charge of excellent physicians and a consulting board of the most eminent medical talent of this city. The Society has expended for hospital and grounds the sum of $188,895.

The object of this communication is to propose to you to act as agent for this society, either personally or through one of your employees, suited for such position, for the purpose of enlisting new members.

The monthly fee is only one dollar and the initiation fee on becoming a member two dollars. Only healthy persons can become members, and only Germans or those who speak that language, also their wives and children. Any member who meets with sickness is treated in the hospital without any expense to him until he has been restored to health. All persons who are not members, or can not become such, not speaking the German language, are admitted for medical treatment in the hospital at as low terms as it is possible to make them.

In this city we have about 3,000 members, but throughout the interior only about 300. It is our aim to increase the number of members throughout the State to make the hospital as much as possible self-sustaining, to enable us to extend the charitable department of this benevolent institution. For the trifling sum of one dollar per month members have the best aid and care in the German Hospital.

Frequently sick people in the country are crippled for life by false treatment from incompetent doctors, or even brought to a premature death. Only too late do they find out that if they had become members they would have been restored to health, and their earnings of years would not have gone into the pockets of inexperienced doctors, as the hospital employs only the best physicians. If there are no earnings, the employers and the friends of the sick are generally called upon to pay for his support. All this can be avoided, if the employers would vigorously enforce the rule, now introduced in most of San Francisco's establishments, that every man employed should belong to a relief society in order that in case of sickness he might be well cared for and not be reduced to the rather humiliating necessity of asking aid from the purse of his employer and his friends.

Persons of all nations of the age of 50 years or over are admitted as pensioners for life by paying a certain sum to be agreed upon to the Society. They receive a home at the hospital, first-class board, washing and attendance in in case of sickness, free of any expense.

To enable Germans and others who do not know of the existence of this institution, neither of the hospital or its great advantages, to become members, I have addressed you the above, and hope that you will cheerfully accept the agency and do all in your power to further the interests of this society by enlisting new members, and recommending our hospital to those who may be compelled to seek medical aid.

Your obedient Servant,
JULS. BANDMANN,
President G. G. B. S.

BEE-CULTURE. NO. X.

DISEASES OF BEES.

The bees are subject to certain diseases, of which dysentery and foul brood are the most troublesome and best known. In cold countries, where bees are confined to the hive for months at the time, dysentery is produced by disturbances from the outside or by too early breeding, caused by too high a temperature, generally when they are in a cellar, under which circumstances they consume considerable honey, and being unable to fly and void their excrements, become bloated and die from the effects. It is also produced by thin, unsealed honey, gathered in the Fall, and by liquids obtained from cider mills, grape distilleries, or from injured fruit on the trees. Where bees can fly every two or three weeks, or oftener, they are not troubled with this malady.

FOULBROOD

Is a contagious disease, acting on and killing the brood while it is in the larva state. It does not affect the grown bees. The signs of this disease are a particularly offensive smell, which sometimes can be detected in merely passing the affected hive. Also, the capping of the worker-brood will be concave and often have a small hole pierced in the middle. The dead brood, whether capped or not, turns into a brown, ropy substance, adhering to the bottom of the cell. This disease is caused by a microscopic fungus, which, being carried by the bees from hive to hive, for instance in robbing, spreads through the apiary, and if not checked in time will soon destroy all the colonies. If honey for a diseased stock is fed to a healthy one, it will, unless it is scalded, communicate the disease. The same is the case where a swarm is put into a hive in which a diseased colony has died. A cure has been effected by means of salycylic acid, but the method is so slow and tedious and at the same time not always successful that the best remedy is to destroy the whole colony, with hive and contents, by means of brimstone and fire, rather than risk having the disease spread among the other hives. I am happy to say that as far as I have been able to ascertain, foulbrood is not found in this locality; and I would earnestly warn everyone against buying and importing bees from any locality where it is found. The southern counties, I know from experience, are much troubled with it, and if once introduced into this valley no bee-keeper could be safe from it, as the bees will carry the germs for miles, in robbing weak hives in other apiaries. Several States have laws for the protection of bee-keepers by the destruction of foulbroody stocks by officials appointed for the purpose, and it would be well if this State would adopt similar laws.

ROBBING.

When honey is scarce bees are very apt to help themselves to any sweets where they can get them. If they find a weak hive, unable to protect its stores, they will clean it out in a very short time, and when they are through with it they are likely to go for the adjoining ones. As soon as the honey season is over the entrances to all the hives should be gradually contracted, which will enable the bees to better defend themselves, and during the Winter an entrance of one-half to one-inch in width is large enough. When honey begins to come in, in the Spring, the entrance may again be gradually enlarged. If a hive is being robbed the entrance should immediately be contracted, so that only one or two bees can pass at a time, and watch must be kept that it does not get clogged with dead bees from the inside, as that will quickly smother the swarm, which at such a time generally is in a highly feverish state. If that does not stop the robbing the entrance must be entirely closed, and ample ventilation given in such a manner that the robbers inside the hive can not pass the honey out to those on the outside—which may be effected by covering the hive with an inch board, in which a large hole is cut and covered on both sides with wire-cloth. After sundown the hive should be opened to let the robbers go home, and the original cover put on and the entrance adjusted to a narrow spacer. If robbing commences again the next morning the hive must be moved a mile or more away and remain there for several days, or it may be placed in a dark quiet room, with the entrance open until the robbers have given up their depredations. Giving such a hive a comb or two of hatching Italian brood will often help them, as the Italians resist robbers better than the black bees. When robbing is going on bees are very apt to sting anything they find on which to wreak their vengeance, and they will even fight a stovepipe or other inanimate object of a dark color until it is covered with something white, or until they are driven away by a dense smoke. The bee keeper should never throw pieces of comb or sprinkle honey round where bees can get at it, as this is the most frequent cause of robbing, and if he looses his bees thereby or gets the bees to stinging people and animals promiscuously he has only himself to blame for it.

WM. MUTH-RASMUSSEN.

How They "Packed" an Elephant.

Capt. J. Mullett, the famous sea lion catcher, arrived in the city yesterday from San Francisco. The Captain did not bring his usual assortment of sea lions this time. He had an elephant on his hands. Unlike some other people in that situation the Captain knew just what to do with it. The elephant, a a medium sized quadruped of the Asiatic variety, was purchased in Japan by Adam Forepaugh, the showman, and was to be delivered in good condition at the show quarters in Philadelphia.

There was no trouble on the voyage over the placid Pacific to San Francisco, but when the time for the overland journey from San Francisco came Arctic weather prevailed this side of the Rocky Mountains. The temperature was so low as to congest the lungs of the biggest elephant if left unprotected.

The Central Pacific Railroad Company refused to let Captain Mullet put a stove in the elephant's car, because of supposed danger to the company's property, and the Captain set his wits to work to devise means of getting heat without fire. He soon hit upon a practical plan. The elephant was led into the box car and stable compost was thrown in by the cart load. It was piled high around the sides of the car and loosely heaped around the elephant until only the head and back of the big beast were visible. Unnecessary chinks in the car were stopped up and the journey was begun. As the temperature lowered a few pailsful of water were thrown upon the compost, and the warm vapor from the fermenting heap filled the car. In this way the monster from the tropics invaded the home of the Blizzard, and traveled in his pathway from Cheyenne to Philadelphia, where he was safely delivered to his owners.

Capt. Mullet visited Central Park yesterday to see one of the sea lions that is his property. He found the pinnigrade enjoying an afternoon nap on a cake of ice. The Captain will start for San Farncisco in a few days to capture another lot of sea lions for which he has customers.—N. Y. Sun.

WOMEN, it is said, are often more expert than men in worming out state secrets, and such is the character which the fair sex enjoys in France for craft and finessing that very few Frenchmen, says a late writer, could be found to doubt that Germany and Russia both employ female spies on a large scale to wheedle soft-hearted statesmen. A little reflection, however, ought to show that a lady who evinced great anxiety to worm out political secrets would very soon put her acquaintances on their guard. Supposing she obtained a secret and betrayed it, how long could she remain undetected? That she could continue for years, as some ladies are stated to have continued, collecting confidential news here and there, and making mischief between her people and the strangers among whom she lived—that she should do this without exposure and loss of character it is difficult to believe. The fact is that political spies are of little use in a country that has a free press.

OLD Bob Keyworth is noted in Galveston for being an exceedingly stingy landlord. Jim Groce was paying him $20 a month for an old, weather-beaten house. He asked to have it painted, but his request was refused, and he did the work himself. As soon as the painting was done Keyworth raised the rent to $25 a month. "Why do you raise the rent?" asked Jim. "On account of the improvement," replied the old man. "You know the house has just been painted, and a newly painted house is worth $5 more than a shabby one."

THAT portion of Eureka, Nev., lying between Buel street and the mountain, and which has so often been swept by fire and flood, will, apparently, never be rebuilt. Property holders evidently desire to take no more risks.

An Unlucky Number for Him.

It is seldom, remarks the Los Angeles Express, that a given number can be found to repeat itself in so singular and significant a manner as in the following case, as discovered by the San Francisco Examiner:

On the 19th of October George A. Wheeler strangled his sister-in-law, Adelia J. Tillson, under circumstances unparalleled in the annals of crime on this coast. On the 19th of November he was indicted by the Grand Jury. On the 19th of December he was arraigned for his crime. On the 19th of January he was convicted of murder in the first degree, and on the 19th of February he was sentenced to be hanged on Tuesday, the 19th of April, by the neck until he was dead. Evidently 19 is an unfortunate and unlucky number with Wheeler.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Scientific American says: "Let any one who has an attack of lockjaw take a small quantity of turpentine, warm it and pour it on the wound, no matter where the wound is, and relief will follow in less than a minute. Nothing better can be applied to a severe cut or bruise than cold turpentine; it will give certain relief almost instantly. Turpentine is also a sovereign remedy for croup. Saturate a piece of flannel with it and place the flannel on the throat and chest, and in every case three or four drops on a lump of sugar may be taken inwardly."

WHILE Charles Miller was eating breakfast, in Detroit, his wife embraced him affectionately and cut his throat. She explained that she was the Queen of England, that he was the Emperor of Germany, and that the cause of peace demanded his death.

DR. MARY WALKER's brother believes her to be insane. His views are in accord with people in general.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

SATURDAY, MARCH 5.....1881

A CABLE dispatch from London to the New York World says: Just when the belligerent Britons were daily expecting news of the wiping out of the Boers, and just when the peace loving section of Englishmen were hoping that conciliatory negotiations would lead to a cessation of hostilities, news comes that the Boers are again victorious, that the British were defeated with great slaughter, and that General Colley has been killed. This intelligence has caused an excitement which is not easily described. It painfully recalls the defeat at Isandula. General Colley is condemned generally and the utmost horror at the number of lives sacrificed is expressed amid condemnatory ejaculations, expressions of confidence in a future victory, a demand for more re-enforcements and editorial screams for the vindication of the British arms. There is not one sympathizing word, not one just acknowledgement of the bravery of the handful of Dutchmen who have thus vindicated their honor and bravely fought their right to independence and liberty. The Standard, whose correspondent is supposed to have been killed or captured in the fight, says: Hitherto it has been with impatience and with an uneasy sense of shame that Englishmen have heard that their Government was negotiating on equal terms with victorious and defiant rebels. That is all at an end. There can be no more talk now of terms or conditions until the victorious British General at Pretoria publishes the terms which shall be granted to such of the defeated insurgents as shall come in and sue for pardon. There is more to be done than to settle terms with the Boers. The stigma of defeat must be wiped out, and the honor of the British arms triumphantly vindicated.

NUMEROUS bills have been introduced into our present Legislature to do away with the emotional insanity dodge in murder cases. One of these bills proposes that when a person charged with murder escapes conviction under the plea of insanity, he shall be confined in a lunatic asylum for the rest of his life. Why not? Bona fide crazy people are so confined whether they kill anybody or not; the amateur crazy person who actually does murder somebody ought not to fare any better. Actually crazy or only emotionally so for the occasion, as in the case of Schroeder down here at Oakland, or Buford, the Kentucky assassin, he who does one deliberate murder ought to be so fixed that he could never do another—common sense and the safety of society demand that much; common sense demands the enactment of some law like the above in this State if anywhere in the world outside of Kentucky.

THE new Masonic Temple lately erected in Oakland by the Masonic Fraternity, was dedicated in due form on Washington's Birthday, Grand Master S. C. Denson officiating, assisted by the officers of the Grand Lodge. Bro. M. D. Boruck delivered the oration to a very large concourse gathered to witness the highly interesting ceremonies. The Temple is said to be a most beautiful structure in every respect.

DEWEY & Co., Patent Agents, have received official notice of the issue of the following patents to Pacific coast inventors for the week ending February 8, 1881: G. P. Adams and J. Miller, San Francisco, box; E. Boesche, S. F., lamp; E. A. Leigh, S. F., separating fiber; R. E. Shannon, S. F., horse holding attachment; J. C. Uhley, S. F., stock indicator.

WE read that the cards of invitation for the Presidential inaugural ball are very handsomely engraved. They are ornamented with the heads of Washington, Garfield and Arthur, and pictures of the capitol, the eagle and stars and stripes, but come down to the common level in this old time legend: "Admission, $5."

GEORGE DALEY is in trouble again, and this time in Colorado. He had some difficulty with the miners at Robinson's Camp, and was compelled to call upon the Governor for arms and ammunition. The Carson Appeal thinks that George's Bodie experience should have taught him a lasting lesson.

AT Salt Lake, February 25, Associate Justice Twiss rendered a decision in the Cannon-Campbell mandamus case, to the effect that the Court has no jurisdiction over the Governor. Cannon's attorney give notice of appeal. Campbell has gone to Washington to take his seat.

THE Illinois Senate, by a vote of 43 to 1, has passed a bill imposing upon telegraph companies a tax of 2 per cent. on the gross receipts.

FLORA'S HUSBAND.

As everybody knows, Flora, Senator Sharon's daughter, not long since, married Sir Thomas Hesketh, an English nobleman. Everybody knows this to be the fact because every society newspaper in the land devoted whole columns in explanations of the main facts of the all important affair, and still other columns to the minutia, the details, the etceteras, of the notable event. (You see, Flora had never married anybody, not even a common scrub, previous to this, so she thought everybody would like to know about it, and that's how the wretched reporters came to be there instead of in their own garrets). Then all the newspapers not "society" told about it, the same as if it had been an agricultural show. In this way Sir Thomas's and Flora's purely private and personal venture was given to public keeping, more especially after the press across the water told all they knew about it—the grand reception at home, and how a car load of big policemen were sent down to guard the family plate. And it so came about that all America became Flora's guardian, while England looked after Hesketh.

But now comes the discouraging information that some London Jews "put up a job" on Flora—that is, they sent Hesketh out here to marry a sack of ducats. Flora had a bushel or so of ducats. Otherwise she could never have been "my lady," though never so lovable for her own sweet self, as lovable and sweet she doubtless is.

This is how it is: Hesketh is an English nobleman who, as they say in that country, is "in the hands of the Jews." He once owned immense estates, but mortgaged them and, foolike, squandered all the proceeds in riotous living. Soon his creditors owned him body and breeches, but found it impossible to cash him in England for anything like the amount of the balance due. There was but one place in the world where it could be done—shoddy America. It is well understood in England that American heiresses generally will trade themselves and all their coin any moment for a title; even an Italian count is assured of catching quite a merchantable heiress of the genus shoddy. So the creditors made up a liberal pony purse for Sir Thomas; fitted out the splendid yacht, Lancashire Witch, in which he could travel about in style until he could bag an American heiress. That he did bag one with reasonable dispatch is now history. Then the creditors paid the expenses of the big reception concerning which the papers had so much to say. Now the next question is, how are those Jews going to come out in their venture? Will Flora's pap open his celebrated sack and take Hesketh out of soak? (We believe that is the proper phraseology for elite questions). However, that need not worry Flora's American guardians. Artemus Ward wanted to know of Queen Victoria "if Albert was a good provider?" That's all the American guardians need to know about Flora's husband—is he a good provider?

We are told, though, that notwithstanding Hesketh's incumberances and his peculiar method of securing a wife, or rather, the means of paying his debts, that he is an intelligent, noble-minded young man, and Flora might well be proud of him even though he couldn't trace his pedigree back to the Crusades—but he ought to go out of the wild-oat business at once and permanently.

There is a moral to be deduced for girls from this simple little story: Unless "Dad strikes ile" immensely, don't wait many years hoping to marry an English lord on your mere personal attractions, great though they may be.

A WASHINGTON dispatch of Feb. 28 says: Senators Farley and Booth and Representative Berry called on Hayes yesterday and laid before him the petitions signed by upwards of 30,000 citizens of California praying that the Mussel Slough prisoners be pardoned. Mr. Hayes suggested that the petitions should be filed in the Attorney General's office, but promised that he will pass upon them before his term of office expires. He intimated that he would like previously to have an expression of opinion on the subject by Judges Hoffman and Sawyer and District Attorney Lattemer, to which Berry replied that an expression of their views had already been solicited by telegraph and that they would doubtless be heard from within a few days. Booth, Farley, and Berry each earnestly commended the petitions to Mr. Hayes' most favorable consideration. In the course of their remarks calling attention to the strength of the petitions, they informed Mr. Hayes that one of them, bearing only 80 signatures, represented at least $100,000,000 of property. They were not particularly encouraged by Hayes' inquiries and manner, but, of course, if he declines to act favorably the effort can be renewed with his successor.

AN 1,800-pound slab from Nineveh, with a King nearly seven feet high cut in it, has been sent to Boston. It is supposed to have been made 800 years before the birth of Christ.

LETTER FROM SACRAMENTO.

SACRAMENTO, Feb. 27.

MESSRS. EDITORS—In looking back over the work of the past week there is little to add to what I have already sent you. An election bill, permitting county officers to hold over this year, has passed and will doubtless be signed by the Governor, who is disposed to let the Supreme Court interpret the Constitution. It has become more apparent the past week that an extra session is imperative, and the Governor as much as admitted it to me last Friday, but thought he would let the animals go home and cool off until September or October. Since then, however, the impression is gaining ground that he will not wait longer than April, as the fiscal year ends July 1st.

About two weeks ago the Republicans made an attempt to take the general appropriation bill out of its regular order—it was and is quite down on the file—but the Democrats filibustered against it. Within the past week the Democrats experienced a change, and desired to elevate the measure. Here, then, began the real fight of the session in a party sense. The Republicans declared war unless they could get up the apportionment bill also. So far as all these bills, including the debris repeal act, are concerned, and have been, they are on the file in regular order, and on that score there has been no deadlock whatever. They are made a handle of, however, and the result is that neither they nor other leading measures can be brought forward out of their turn. That is the situation in a few words. It has been plain for a fortnight past that, owing to the vast amount of difficult and important legislation necessary in connection with starting the New Constitution, to say nothing of the hundreds of bills put forward by individuals on a variety of subjects of lesser importance, the time is too short by at least one month. It is a physical impossibility to meet here 120 strangers as it were, and get committees formed and bills on the file short of twenty days, and when all have to be read in full three times, to say nothing of discussion and amendments on the floor, forty days is not half long enough. The Senate is quite ahead of the Assembly, though that body is the same to a man that was here last session, to say nothing of being only half so unwieldy. That is all there is to say on the subject to any one who has ever been through such a mill, or paid particular attention to it. The Governor can call us together and say what we shall try to do, but he cannot limit the time the animals can graze on the public grounds. I have heard it said he declares he will name the debris business, but I doubt it. I was gratified at the editorial in THE INDEPENDENT of one week ago, for I was getting mighty tired of debris myself, but still think the system inaugurated has not had a fair trial and should not be tossed about by one-horse politicians and writers paid by the day to write it down out of pure cussedness.

It is possible the Senate County Government bill will reach the Assembly before adjournment and become a law, but I doubt it, as the Assemby has a list of favored bills on top now, and two or three that may run out the session—such as the Revenue, and a bill to regulate water companies. As you well say, "San Francisco is a hog," and through sheer physical or brute force, can impose upon the rest of the State through legislative machinery.

Mr. Laird, your District Attorney, has favored me with memoranda for County Government bill use, and which has not been forgotten. But I now feel sure it will be of no use except for an extra session, as the present session ends next Friday noon, as resolved by the Assemby; but the Senate threatens to hold the Assemby here by refusing to adjourn—but to make the horse drink is another thing. In short, the only logical, sensible way out of the scrape is by an extra session, and the limiting thereof to a few measures about which there is and will be much argument as to constitutionalty. I think the bills the Governor will propose are Appropriation, Apportionment of State into Congressional, and Senate and Assembly districts under the census of 1880, county and city and town bills, also a road bill and possibly one or two others. By being quick about it I have succeeded in getting several propositions through the House and on to the Senate files, but there they will remain no doubt. This is not pleasant. It takes all the pride one has in the business out of it. That nine-tenths of all the members here are in the same boat does not afford ample consolation for the trouble and expense of getting here. I can see no better fortune for any one in the 60-day programme. There is no inducement for any one to come here, except to gratify the veriest imaginable vanity for the shortest time and the greatest cost in proportion.

THE Brooklyn clergymen are considering the propriety of a revival movement, not so much, apparently, to bring in new members as to wake up the old ones. At their meeting Mr. Pentecost said incisively, that "in the early days of the Church 3,000 converts were made by one sermon, and now it takes about 3,000 sermons to make one convert."

STOCKTON is one of the largest manufacturing cities in the State. A paper mill there turns out 340,000 pounds of printing paper every month, and gives employment to nearly ninety operatives.

GEN. BUTLER told a New York reporter that after reading Gen. Schofield's testimony at the Whittaker Court Martial, he came to the conclusion that "Whittaker bit off his own ears."

IT is said ex-Congressman R. M. Daggett, of Nevada, will be appointed Superintendent of th Carson mint.

Arizona—Letter from an Inyo Boy.

HORTON'S LANDING, A. T.,
Feb. 23, 1881.

MESSRS. EDITORS—I suppose you will be surprised to receive a letter from this place, and more so one from me. But on my road down here I saw a piece of machinery at Havilah which I thought would interest you and others who are interested in Inyo county. There is an eastern company there who are running a twenty stamp mill and two Burleigh drills with air that is compressed by a water power which is situated seven miles away. The air is compressed by a large turbine wheel and is carried in two and a half inch pipes to a large receiver at the mine and there runs a common steam-engine which propels the mill the same as usual. The superintendent said that he would guarantee two hundred horse power fifty miles through an inch and a quarter pipe. It would be a fine thing to take power from Owen's river to work Beveridge mines.

This place is a new camp on the Arizona side of the Colorado river, about 50 miles above Yuma. It has one small furnace that has been running three months and during that time has shipped some of the richest base bullion that ever went into San Francisco. The superintendent is F. F. Thomas, formerly of Cerro Gordo. The mines are about four miles from the river and the ore is quarried out, the vein is so large. The ore is very dry, only going six or seven per cent. lead, but it is said to be very rich in silver. The company paid one hundred thousand dollars for the mine, and it is said, would not take a million for it now. Another mine was sold a day or two ago for one hundred and seventy thousand dollars and there are several others which their owners ask all the way from ten to one hundred thousand dollars for.

Yours truly,

FRANK M. DRAKE.

A CHICAGO dispatch of February 28 says: The storm on the lake yesterday, according to an old lake Captain, was the severest experienced for years. At the crib the wind blew at the rate of 63¼ miles per hour, and the ice surged by at the rate of seven miles an hour. There was great danger that the portholes would become obstructed with ice and cut off the city's water supply, but a gang of men, working with the water up to their waists, have managed to keep them clear. A gentleman who arrived here from Clinton, Iowa, said that the train passed through some sections of prairies where the little farm houses were almost half submerged by water, and that miles of the road track were covered.

LIZZIE GALLAGHER was a prisoner in the Arizona Territorial prison serving a sentence for man slaughter. But she was pardoned the other day on account of her youth, and good conduct in prison, and because a marriage to a worthy man had been arranged on her liberation. The petition for her pardon was signed generally by the citizens of Yuma, including the Judge before whom she was tried.

IN the British House of Commons March 1st, Dilke said Peru asked England and France to mediate in the war between the South American Republics, and they agreed to do so provided Chile was agreeable. England and France asked Germany and Italy to join in the mediation. Italy accepted the proposal, but Germany declined.

THE friends of General Hancock desire it to be known that he will not accept of any political demonstrations whatever while in Washington. He comes to Washington as an invited guest of the Inaugural Committee, and attends now as he did the inauguration of Grant and Hayes.

THE amount of money invested by the Land League is considerably over £50,000, principally in American securities. A portion will be placed in French securities, but Gambetta's hostility has caused complications in that direction.

MR. MAHONE, the ubiquitous Senator from Virginia, is going to vote for George C. Gorham for Secretary of the Senate. George's star seems to be in the ascendancy again.

AT Stockton Guglielmo Magnani is suing the Central Pacific Railroad Company for $10[illegible],000 damages, on the ground that the company is responsible for the death of plaintiff's father, who was run over by the cars and killed last July.

SATURDAY, MARCH 5 1881

THE RACES.— First day, half mile dash, three entries: Billy Moore, Kate and Joe. Won by three lengths by Billy Moore. Second day, half mile colt race--seven entries, namely: Orphan Boy, Eva Flowers, Hickey, Gray Pete, Fritz, Blackbird and Jack. Won by Gray Pete. The attendance was quite large, especially the second day, and pool selling was lively, though for small sums. The great event of the meeting takes place to-day. This is the novel race between James, the foot-racer, against the race mare Mary Hammond, the former to run 157½ yards, the latter 300 yards. The odds seem to be in favor of the four-footed racer, although James has strong and confident backers. We shall probably get the result in time for this issue. The indications now are that the concourse to witness this contest will be the largest ever gathered on the Independence track.

ACCIDENT.—About 9 o'clock on Monday evening last Under Sheriff J. J. Moore met with a singular and painful accident. He passing rapidly out of the Court House hall, in the dark, and in reaching for the door, drove his right hand through the glass, which cut a deep gash across the back of the hand just below the wrist. All the veins, apparently, were severed, and the blood flowed at an alarming extent until it was finally stopped by Dr. George. The wound is now getting along all right, but Jack thinks that it was a ridiculous idea to get hurt in that way.

CONCERT AND FESTIVAL.—The ladies of Bishop Creek, aided by Mrs. E. Willis of this place, are making elaborate preparations for a concert and festival at that place, to come off on the 15th instant. The proceeds are to be applied in reducing the debt of the fine new church building, which is now pretty well advanced toward completion, and which is a credit to its projectors and its locality. The concert is intended to be quite a grand and complete entertainment in all respects, and it is much to be hoped every body will help to make it a perfect success.

HOW THEY CAME OUT.—In the man vs. horse contest this afternoon, James slipped and injured himself so that he could scarcely run at all afterward, so the mare passed him when near the outcome, winning money and race. The general opinion is that but for this accident, coupled with the annoyance of the wind and dust, James would have won. Prior to the race, however, the odds were largely on the mare, all knowing her to be very fast for a short distance.

AN ERROR.—In the haste last week week, at about the last moment of making up the paper, a compositor perpetrated a ridiculous blunder under the head of "Born," which entirely escaped detection. It is righted up this issue, however; and we sincerely trust that the young miller may meet with the fullest success in the race of life, under a fair send-off this time.

APOLOGETICAL. — Through a crowd of extra work the first of the week, and on account of the illness of a part of our force the past two or three days, the present issue will be found decidedly short of its usual amount of reading matter. If an extra printer could be had occasionally in the place there would be no reason for apologies.

COURT.—The case of the People vs. Charles Baker, charged with highway robbery, comes up in the Superior Court next Monday, at which time a venire of thirty trial jurors is returnable. The prisoner has been quite sick and may be unable to appear in Court, in which event a continuance will be taken.

THEATRICAL.—The "Gaiety Theatre Combination Troupe" will, to-night, give an acrobatical, theatrical, musical and burlesque entertainment at Mairs' Hall, and which entertainment promises to be one of the most unique and entertaining affairs we have yet had in this country.

A CHANGE.—J. J. Moore has resigned his position as Under Sheriff, and will remove to Big Pine. He has been so long identified with the Sheriff's office that certainly no one "knows the ropes" better than he. "Sher" Stevens, of Lone Pine, is his competent successor.

BEING REPAIRED.—The Masonic Hall, with its most shabby-looking exterior, is about undergoing a system of repairs. The main and most important work, that of replacing the foundation and straightening up the structure, is now being done by Mr. Thos. Parker.

GOLD SHIPMENT.—A shipment of gold amounting to 201 ounces, valued at $2.775, was made on the 24 instant, through Wells, Fargo & Co.'s office at Independence. It belonged to Moreno, Otero & Montaña, and came from the Mexican camp, Beveridge District.

THE BALL.—The Jockey Club ball, given at the Blaney House last night, was rather too much of a success in the matter of attendance, there hardly being standing room for all who were there, the ladies especially being there in unusual force.

THE CROWD.—All the towns of the valley are well reprsented in the large number of attendants upon the races—in greater proportion than Independence is generally represented elsewhere on such occasions.

SUPERVISORS.—The Board of Supervisors will hold a special meeting on Monday, to let contracts, attend to bridge matters, etc.

PREACHING.—Rev. F. M. Willis will hold services at the School House tomorrow evening at the usual hour.

TO MEET.—Inyo Lodge No.221, F. & A. M., will hold a stated meeting at the hall next Saturday.

LETTER FROM BENTON.

BENTON, March 2d, 1881.

MESSRS. EDITORS—The hearses almost daily passed the front gate. "Helen's babies" became accustomed to the sight, and it was a diurnal custom of theirs to go down and straddle the fence, where they would discuss the passing cortege, and came to look upon the inhabitant of the coffin as the "deader;" that's what Helen's babies called it. Viewed from a business and mining stand-point to-day Benton is dead, quite dead—it might almost be classed as excessivly dead; but the most weak kneed of our population are not prepared as yet to acknowledge that the camp has really become a "deader." Recently important transfers have taken place in some of our most valuable mines, in the way of sales and relocations, and it is now believed that much of this class of property has passed into the hands of men of such sagacity and experience as will insure the working of the mines to their fullest capacity.

Should your correspondent's views prove correct on this proposition, it would take but a short time to insure for Benton a season of renewed prosperity, and perhaps much beyond anything the little camp has heretofore experienced.

To attempt to send you anything like an epitome of news notes would be impossible, for, as stated in the begining, there is absolutely nothing transpiring here. But there is one thing I desire to call your attention to, and that is the almost continuous sale of liquor to Indians. Benton has perhaps been more cursed by this evil than any other small town in the State; and as the camp becomes apathetic the evil seems to increase. As you are aware that for a couple of years last past we had a little paper here, whose editor for a long time fought this evil, but he finally ceased his labors in that issue; whether through disgust, or some other reason does not transpire.

You journalists understand the rule that it is imperative for the correspondent to commence his favor, or rather the asking of his favor, with the stereotyped "Your valuable and widely circulated journal," but your correspondent omits the rule. Seriously, however, THE INYO INDEPENDENT is more generally read in this community than any other paper received at the Benton Postoffice, because we are compelled to look to that paper to guard our interests.

But to return to the drunken Indian evil: Indians are drunk here almost continually. The most recent outrage of this character occurred last Sunday. Three drunken bucks and one drunken squaw broke into a barn which is between Kremkrow's brewery and Main street, and by their orgies proceeded to make the afternoon hideous; so much so that it became necessary for the officers of the law to put in an appearance and attempt to quell the disturbance. The Court (Judge N. Daniels) essayed to make an arrest of the party, but was repulsed without serious loss. He was reinforced by Thos. Arnold, but the two combined forces failed to make a flank, and it looked for a while as though Benton would be deprived of its temple of justice, through the sapping of the foundation of justice itself. However, Acting Deputy Sheriff, Bob Linford, arrived on the scene at this juncture, and a preconcerted charge of the three army corps resulted in the capture of the enemy. The Court and its adjuncts did not exactly succeed in getting away with all of the enemy, because one of the bucks got away; the other three were lodged in the calaboose to sleep off their debauch.

Now this crowd of drunken Indians were seen coming directly from one of our leading breweries in a state of beastly intoxication; the same parties had been observed to previously visit that place to all appearance sober. This same or a similar incident occurs almost daily. It is not fair to presume that these Indians became intoxicated by merely nosing around that brewery, and inhaling the fumes of the beer vats; there is no rule on the principle of distillation that will bear out any such theory. There is not a resident of Benton but knows in his own mind, that that brewery furnishes both whisky and beer to Indians indiscriminately and regularly for coin. This man has undoubtedly made a great deal of money through the traffic; for it is known that the "noble red" will pay any price he can command for liquor.

A man who will place a bottle of whisky into one hand of an Indian, should at the same time, place a torch in the other hand, for by the time he has finished the former he will be prepared and in good condition to start in with an energetic use of the latter.

Within two years we have had two convictions for this crime; the first was a negro who was fined $40, and it transpired after trial that he had in his possession just $40; the other was a half idiotic vagrant, who in the absence of coin, was sent to Bridgeport. There is no desire or intention to censure the Courts; they probably do the best they can, but it is a notable fact that the rich culprits and responsible men, who have grown rich in this detestable and debasing crime—this crime against law, against humanity and against society, always manage to escape punishment. This latter remark has direct reference to the gentlemen of the brewery. In the mean time the traffic goes regularly on, and property is jeopardized, young children are frightened almost into convulsions, the heart of the young mother is caused to palpitate with an increased thrill of horror and the law is openly set at defiance.

If the law cannot be enforced let it be repealed, and let all who desire enter into competition for this Indian liquor trade, for it is known to be valuable.

S. A. M.

NOT long since at Fort Colville, W. T., Samuel Buchanan shot and killed Louis Fenwick, wounded Miss Mary King, and then spared the country the expense of a useless trial by committing suicide.

Another Gold Mine Reported.

BISHOP CREEK, March 2.

MESSRS. EDITORS--I am pleased to inform you that the mines of Inyo, or at any rate those of our locality, are looming up, and the prospects of this place seem better than ever. The Mexican mine is improving, and other discoveries in the same locality look just as good and equally as rich. The veins are growing larger as they sink down upon them. To-day Messrs. J. R. Ross and M. Page brought in some very rich specimens of gold-bearing quartz which are literally covered with gold. They say they have a ledge which is from

SIX TO FIFTEEN FEET IN WIDTH

And crops out about 600 feet in length. The ledge is in porphyry formation and the walls are well defined. They have gone down on the ledge on an incline about seventy-five feet, and it holds its own all the way. The ledge is pitching south.

This mine is located about twelve miles from here, in the Piute District, and is very accessible. You can at present drive a team within one and a half miles of the mine, and within one and one-half miles of the mine water can be had sufficient to run a twenty-stamp mill. With a very small expenditure a road can be made direct to the mine. Wood can be had in abundance a very short distance from the place, and the mine can be worked the year round without any hindrance from the snows. Take everything into consideration, I think this is one of the best "finds" that we have heard of in a long time.

You know of the advantages of our valley agriculturally, of which I will refrain from writing, but of which you can say as much as you please.

I hope some of your mining experts will come up and see what we have got, and perhaps they will not be disappointed. Yours, etc.,

J. H. S.

DE LESSEP says the Panama canal will certainly be finished in 1888, at an estimated cost of 512,000,000 francs. The work will not require more than eight to ten thousand workmen in the most busy portion of the work, who will be recruited from the colored population of Colombia and the West Indies.

TENNYSON can take a worthless sheet of paper, and by writing a poem on it, make it worth $6,000. That's genius. Mr. Vanderbilt can write fewer words on a similar sheet and make it worth $50,000,000. That's capital. And the United States Government can take an ounce and a quarter of gold and stamp upon it "an eagle bird" and make it worth $20. That's money. The mechanic can take the material worth $50 and make it into a watch worth $100. That's skill. The merchant can take an article worth 25 cents and sell it to you for $10. That's business. A lady can purchase a comfortable bonnet for $10 but prefers to pay $100 for it because it is more stylish. That's foolishness. The ditch digger works ten hours and digs out three or four tons of earth for $1. That's labor.—Montreal Herald.

A PROMINENT Virginian, while visiting Carson a few days ago, was asked how long it would take Virginia City to regain its former busy appearance in the event that a big bonanza should be uncovered. He replied that "in ten minutes after publicity had been given to such a fact Virginia would resume the liveliness of the prosperous period of 1873 and 1876."

A SURVEYING party will soon begin a survey of the route of the proposed Yosemite Division of the California Central Railroad. The party will begin their work at a point near Fresno Flats, and survey towards Merced.

LOS ANGELES people are speaking of a project on foot to establish a narrow-guage railroad from that city to San Francisco by way of Santa Monica, San Luis Obispo and other coast towns.

The Carson (Nev.) Appeal says that Mrs. Crandall of Carson has in her possession an autograph letter of Robert Fulton, the builder of the first steamboat, dated in Washington in 1808.

THE Denver (Col.) Tribune has interviewed A. McCarger, acting agent of the Indians at the White River Agency, and he predicts an Indian war in the Spring.

THIRTY-NINE suits for divorce, in every one of which the wife is plaintiff, are brought forward for trial in the recently convened Circuit Court at Portland.

LOVE.

Love is the dearest boon of life,
The bright and golden band
That binds together without strife,
True souls in every land.

Thoughts then may flow from heart to heart,
And breathe their deepest sighs;
Making us feel, though far apart,
They meet with sweet replies.

Our guiding star through darkest night
Of weary wanderings here;
No joy of earth is half so bright—
To heaven we are held dear

By those on whom our trust is staid,
When perils 'round us come,
To hear them say: "Be not afraid,
You are not left alone."

When we shall meet on that blest shore,
In realms of peace above;
O, may we live forever more
United there by love.

FREMONT'S CANNON.—It would not be a bad idea to pass a bill establishing a museum for the cannon left on this coast by Gen. Fremont. These valuable historical relics are now scattered all over Nevada and in some parts of California. Fremont was like Napoleon—he had a decided weakness for artillery, and, in his famous expedition over the plains, must have brought along a couple of thousand cannon—about two to each man. A soldier who could carry a two thousand pound cannon across the plains comes of good, sturdy stock, such as was eminently fit to discover and develop this glorious country. If these field pieces were all gathered in one place they would form a valuable and interesting collection, Capt. Pray, of Glenbrook, has two; there are two in Virginia City, held by the Pioneers, and several are in the possession of the Sacramento and San Francisco Pioneers. Nearly every town in Nevada has a couple. Fremont only had three guns when he started, but probably manufactured more along the route.—Carson Appeal.

A MELBOURNE correspondent writes: "A singular circumstance is reported from a hot, dry valley in New South Wales. Last year the drought there was of long duration, and the denizens of the apiaries suffered much from it. This year the bees have made provisions against a similar emergency. They have filled a large number of the external cells in every hive with pure water instead of honey. It is thought the instinct of the creatures leads them to anticipate a hot Summer."

OLD Peter Cooper built the first locomotive engine in the United States, and assisted to build the first Croton acqduct. The Cooper Institute, which he presented to New York, has cost him over $850,000, and the same amount of money has been spent in free instruction in it by the Trustees paying for the same out of the rents. There are 2,000 students in the schools of science and art, and the pupils earned $13,000 last year.

AT the insane asylum of Bicetre, in France, the other day, there died, at the age of 103, a patient named Jubissier, who had been an inmate of that establishment ever since 1798. He was impressed with the idea that his body was composed of glass. Haunted by this belief, he is said to have scarcely moved during the 83 years he passed in the asylum, and to have only opened his lips intelligently once during that period.

AN Ohio paper proposes to number the hours of the day and night consecutively from 1 to 24, or from midnight to midnight, thus doing away with A. M. and P. M. railway tables everywhere. The advocate of the proposed new method says that there is no more reason for having two 12 o'clocks in one day than there is for two twelve mile posts on a twenty-four mile railroad.

AT the close of 1880 there were stored in the Pensylvania oil regions over 16,000,000 barrel of crude petroleum. This is more than double the amount of stock held at the beginning of the year. At the present rate of demand these 16,000,000 barrels would supply the world for nearly a year, but the surplus stock is daily being increased.

THE recent earthquake at Cholame, Monterey county, was attended by many strange phenomena. Mud and water were thrown to a great hight. From a large spring boiled out a hot liquid. A sulphur spring was thrown up, and the ground surrounding was depressed about four feet.

THE United States Cable Company have begun a suit at New York to prevent the consolidation of the telegraph companies.

BULLION producers are holding their product for higher figures. A short while ago they were glad to get $1 12 per ounce for their silver.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

THIS HONEY WAS REMOVED FROM THE comb by centrifugal force, with a machine made for the purpose. It is therefore virtually the same as honey in the comb, only you don't have to eat the bee's wax, which is indigestible and therefore disagrees with many persons. When first extracted the honey is liquid, but nearly all pure honey will candy or granulate in course of time, especially if exposed to the cold. Putting the cans in hot water for a short time will bring the honey to its fluid state without injury.

This Honey is put up in 10 pound cans, with patented screw tops, which renders it convenient for family use, and especially for the mines, to which it may be packed, even upside down, without leakage. A neat label on each can gives full directions.

Price, $1 50 per can, or 12½ cents per lb at the Apiary, if customers furnish their own receptacles. For sale at Harris & Rhine's, Independence, and at the Apiary, at Jacob Vag's place, Camp Independence.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Allgemeine Deutsche Unterstuetzungs Gesellschaft.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 28, 1880.

Messrs. Harris & Rhine, Independence, Cal.:

DEAR SIRS—The undersigned, President of the German Benevolent Society, begs leave to call your attention to this truly benevolent institution, founded in the early days of California, and being now in the 27th year of its existence. The Society was formed to carry out three objects viz: to assist poor and worthy or deserving people by support, to find employment for those out of work, and to cure those who are stricken down with sickness. For the latter purpose the Society owns a magnificent Hospital, surrounded by extensive grounds, where all patients are under the charge of excellent physicians and a consulting board of the most eminent medical talent of this city. The Society has expended for hospital and grounds the sum of $188,895.

The object of this communication is to propose to you to act as agent for this Society, either personally or through one of your employees suited for such position, for the purpose of enlisting new members.

The monthly fee is only one dollar and the initiation fee on becoming a member two dollars. Only healthy persons can become members, and only Germans or those who speak that language, also their wives and children. Any member who meets with sickness is treated in the hospital without any expense to him until he has been restored to health. All persons who are not members, or can not become such, not speaking the German language, are admitted for medical treatment in the hospital at as low terms as it is possible to make them.

In this city we have about 3,000 members, but throughout the interior only about 300. It is our aim to increase the number of members throughout the State to make the hospital as much as possible self-sustaining, to enable us to extend the charitable department in this benevolent institution. For the trifling sum of one dollar per month members have the best aid and care in the German Hospital.

Frequently sick people in the country are crippled for life by false treatment from incompetent doctors, or even brought to a premature death. Only too late do they find out that if they had become members they would have been restored to health, and their earnings of years would not have gone into the pockets of inexperienced doctors, as the hospital employs only the best physicians. If there are no earnings, the employers and the friends of the sick are generally called upon to pay for his support. All this can be avoided, if the employers would vigorously enforce the rule, now introduced in most of San Francisco's establishments, that every man employed should belong to a relief society in order that in case of sickness he might be well cared for and not be reduced to the rather humiliating necessity of asking aid from the purses of his employer and his friends.

Persons of all nations of the age of 50 years or over are admitted as pensioners for life by paying a certain sum to be agreed upon to the society. They receive a home at the hospital, first-class board, washing and attendance in in case of sickness, free of any expense.

To enable Germans and others who do not know of the existence of this institution, neither of the hospital nor its great advantages, to become members, I have addressed you the above, and hope that you will cheerfully accept the agency and do all in your power to further the interests of this society by enlisting new members, and recommending our hospital to those who may be compelled to seek medical aid.

Your Obedient Servant,
JULS. BANDMANN,
President G. G. B. S.

BEE-CULTURE. NO. XI.

PREPARATION AND MARKETING OF HONEY.

As soon as the lower hives are full of comb, and the flowers secreting honey freely, is the time to put on the upper stories or caps, as they are often called. In the cap one or two combs less than the number in the lower story will be sufficient. This will make fewer combs to handle and less labor in extracting. When the surplus combs are about two-thirds capped over they may be extracted.

THE HONEY EXTRACTOR

Consists of an outside stationary can or case with a large molasses gate at the bottom, and an inside revolving frame for holding the combs. This frame has sides of heavy open wire cloth, against which the combs rest and which prevents them from breaking out of the frames during revolution. By the centrifugal motion the honey flies through the wire cloth in a fine spray, settles on the perpendicular walls of the outside case and flows down to the bottom, where it is drawn off by the gate. When the honey is thrown out of one side the comb is turned round with the other side to the wire cloth, and the operation repeated. New combs are apt to break or crack if revolved too fast, and only experience can teach how fast each comb may be turned. If there is unsealed brood in the comb it may also be thrown out if turned too fast, otherwise it does not harm the brood if there should happen to be a little in the honey combs. Either two or four combs should be extracted at a time, so that they balance each other. If they do not, the uneven weight and consequent shaking and jarring, will soon injure the extractor. Before the combs are put into the extractor the capping over the honey must be shaved off, by hot knives made for this purpose. To hold the cappings a box of suitable size is used, on the top of which sits a frame of sharp sticks to rest the comb frame on while uncapping. Three to four inches from the bottom of the uncapping box is placed a perforated metal plate on which the cappings fall. By leaving them in the box over night, the honey that adhered to them, will have drained through the plate, and may be drawn off through a gate at the bottom. The honey, after being drawn from the extractor and uncapping box, is poured into a tank where it remains for several days, when the scum and small particles of comb will rise to the top and must be carefully skimmed off, while the clear honey is drawn off through a gate at the bottom of the tank. The cappings after being drained are placed in the

SUN STRAINER.

This is a triangular box something like a corner cupboard, laid down on its back edge and covered with glass sash. Half way between the glass and the bottom is a perforated metal plate on which the cappings are placed. The sash being put on to retain the heat and exclude bees the sun will soon melt the wax, which, as soon as it flows through the plate forms a solid cake at the bottom of the strainer. What little honey still adhered to the cappings flows through a pipe in the bottom of the strainer into a separate tank; and as this honey generally will be a little darker and of inferior flavor on account having been heated it should not be put together with the extracted honey, but may be either fed to the bees, used at home or sold at lower price. This is really what is called "strained honey." The perforated plate retains all the refuse, which may easily be removed while it is warm, but sticks tenaciously when cold. The wax, after being removed from the sun strainer, must be remelted to make it marketable. Before the advent of the honey extractor, this way of trying out honey and wax by means of the sun strainer, was exclusively used in southern California, and the strainers were therefore often very large. Now, in connection with an extractor, the sun strainer need not be larger than that it may be covered with a good sized window sash, even for an apiary of 50 to 75 hives. In the Fall, when the rays of the sun lose their strength, if the bee keeper has any old combs or refuse wax to be tried out he must resort to the

WAX EXTRACTOR.

This consists of a perforated metal receptacle or comb basket placed inside a boiler the bottom of which contains hot water. The comb basket rests in a shallow pan fastened near the bottom of the boiler. This pan catches the wax as it drips from the comb basket, and an inclined pipe inserted through the boiler and into the pan leads the wax out into some vessel into which it is allowed to flow and cool off. The boiler is of course placed on a stove over a brisk fire and covered closly to retain the steam. Nearly all pure honey will crystalize (granulate or candy) in more or less time, especially if exposed to the cold. The mere fact that honey is candied is a perfect proof that it is pure. There are however certain flowers which yield a honey that does not granulate readily. Also honey that has been heated is slower to crystalize than that which was extracted cold. But if honey is mixed or adulterated with any foreign substance it will not granulate at all. As many people prefer the honey in its liquid form dealers have mixed it largely with glucose or corn syrup, and labled it "pure honey." But this is a plain fraud, and as the glucose not only is considerably cheaper it is mixed with the honey in predominating quantities, and contains only one-third the sweetening power; but besides, being produced from cornstarch by means of sulphuric acid, lime and other chemical substances, which can not be wholly eliminated, it is injurious to the human health, and consumers of such stuff are ignorantly eating a certain amount of poison. Many of the syrups offered for sale are adulterated in the same manner. If it is desired to return candied honey to its fluid state it is only necessary to place the can containing it in hot water, and it will soon become as liquid as when first taken from the hive. The cover or stopper must of course be loosened to prevent the can from bursting by the expansion of the air and honey. If the honey is in a glass vessel the water should be heated gradually. Comb-honey is now raised in neat light frames or sections, holding one or two pounds each. These are placed in larger frames which are suspended in the hive as usual. In order to compel the bees to build the combs straight and of an even thickness strips of tin or separators, as they are called, are placed between the sections, leaving only room enough for the bees to pass in and out. The bee keeper can however secure much more honey by the extractor, with more certainty and with less labor and expense than in the above mentioned manner; and there is no doubt that extracted honey ere long will be a standard article, used in every household, while comb honey will always be a luxury preferred and enjoyed only by the rich, for the sake of its appearance and higher price. In putting honey up for sale the following points should be observed. The packages should be neat and attractive, not exceeding ten pounds in weight, except when intended for manufacturing purposes, and closed in such a manner that the purchaser can examine them before buying. However, if the producer's integrity is well known, a sample in a clean glass jar will be sufficient guaranty for the quality of the honey. Each package should be furnished with a label giving the name and address of the producer, and if possible the source from which the honey was gathered. Finally, the honey should be put up in such shape that it is convenient for the retail dealer to handle, and so that it does not make him disgusted by leaking, and daubing everything with which it comes in contact.

An Important Postal Order.

Nearly everybody will be interested in an order issued by Postmaster-General Maynard on Monday to postmasters throughout the country, and which goes into effect to-day. It revokes a "regulation" made by Postmaster-General Key in April, 1879, and in effect requires that all commercial documents, wholly or in part in writing, shall be subject to the ordinary letter rates of postage (three cents per half ounce), instead of the third class rate (one cent per half ounce) to which Gen. Key's order assigned it. Assistant Postmaster Pearson said yesterday that the operation of this order will be to increase the revenue of the New York Postoffice alone to the extent of about $1,000 a day. The statute of March 3, 1879, defining mail matter of the first class, places within that category "all matter wholly or partially in writing," excepting certain specified objects. The revocation by Postmaster General Maynard of section 232 of the postal regulations will subject to the first class, or letter, rates an immense amount of correspondence forwarded by railway and insurance companies, partly in writing and partly in print, "prices current," with the quotations filled out in writing, deeds of all kinds on printed forms with blanks filled in writing, waybills, insurance policies, vouchers, cash checks, drafts, and the like. The following is the text of the order referred to:

"It is ordered that section 232, postal regulations, be revoked, and in lieu thereof the following order is made:

"Mailable matter of the first class shall embrace all matter wholly or partially in writing, except as herein provided.—Act of March 3, 1879, sec. 8, 20 Stat., p. 358.

"The exceptions are as follows:

"1. Corrected proof-sheets and manuscript copy accompanying the same.—Ibid., sec. 17, p. 359.

"2. Date and name of the addressee and of the senders of circulars, and the correction of mere typographical errors therein.—Ibid., sec. 19, p. 360.

"5. Upon matters of the third class, or upon the wrapper inclosing the same, the sender may write his own name and address, with the word 'from' above and preceding the same, and in either case may make simple marks, intended to designate a word or passage of the text to which it is desired to call attention.—Ibid., sec. 19, p. 360.

"6. There may be placed upon the cover or blank leaves of any book, or of any printed matter of the third class, a simple manuscript dedication or inscription. Such dedication or inscription must be confined to a simple address or consignment of such book, or other printed matter, as a mark of respect, and must not contain anything that partakes of the nature of a personal correspondence.—Ibid."

"7. Upon matter of the fourth class the sender may write his own name and address preceded by the word 'from,' and also the number and names of the articles inclosed. He may also write upon or attach to any such articles, by tag or label, a mark or number, name or letter for purpose of identification.—Ibid."

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

SATURDAY, MARCH 12 1881

JUST prior to the close of the late Congress, that everlasting McGarraban actually persuaded a House Committee to report a bill giving him 8,000,000 acres of land in lieu of his worthless title to the New Idria claim. The majority of the members of the committee were about to leave Congress, and, it is reasonable to suppose, with no expectation of ever returning to it. 'Tis well if they don't, for it is a two to one bet that nothing less than the most barefaced bribery induced every one of those men to agree to that scoundrelly report. How else could it be? Those Congressmen all knew, if they know anything about it at all, that the Courts and Congress, too, have passed upon this McGarrahan claim time and again, and in every instance it was decided that McGarrahan had no title to the ground in either law or equity. Such being the admitted fact this committee must be composed of a pack of hard cheeked scoundrels indeed. Who they are remains to be seen. It is not probable Congress will ever affirm the report; but it is hard to say what Congress will do under the influence of even half the value of 8,000,000 acres, and the wiles of the never tiring McGarrahan.

THE English guinea was so called because the gold of which it was first made was brought from Guinea by an African trading company. Originally it was intended that the guinea should be worth 20s.; but, owing to a number of errors in calculating the proportion of the value of gold and silver, it never circulated at that value. Sir Isaac Newton fixed the true value of the guinea at 30s. 8d., and by his advice the Crown proclaimed that it should be current at 21s.

THE following is told of the origin of the name of "Crazy Woman's Fork," a branch of Powder river, Colorado: When a party of white men camped in that locality, a white woman was found roaming about in a distracted condition. It was subsequently ascertained, or rather believed, that she belonged to a party of white people moving to California, all of whom except herself had been killed by the Indians.

SOLID mountains of gold quartz are reported from Alaska, but the metal will not become a drug in the market all at once. MR. HAYES, as his final official act, vetoed the Funding bill. He bases his objection to the measure on the fifth section solely, saying that he would sign the bill but for its presence. He says that section would seriously impair the usefulness of the national banks, and would be a step toward the destruction of the national banking system.

OUR new President favors the equality of gold and silver, or the double standard money, and as the different Governments, with few exceptions, will all send representatives to the Paris Silver Congress, the probabilities are that silver will hereafter be largely used in addition to gold as a basis for bank circulation.

IT is stated that the Western Union Telegraph Company has decided to place its wires in New York City underground. In all our large cities the telegraph wires will soon have to be changed, for they are unsightly, besides the roofs of buildings are injured by the attachment of so many wires.

ONE night last week, while the Minnesota Legislature was in session, the State Capitol at St. Paul took fire and was totally destroyed. The fire spread so rapidly that some of the members had to escape by ladders, and received slight burns. The records were saved in a vault.

VENUS is rapidly getting away from Saturn and Jupiter. These three planets have figured in almost every possible form of the triangle, and ere long will make a bee line for other regions.

THE INAUGURATION AND OTHER MATTERS.

The pageantry at Washington on the 4th instant is said to have been without a parallel in extent, impressive brilliancy and general good management in the history of that city if not of the entire country. The morning opened with rain and snow and a cold March wind, making the prospect gloomy enough; but before the ceremonies of the day were begun, the sky cleared and the day became all that could be desired.

Promptly at 11 o'clock the monster procession began its march, Gen. Sherman, with a brilliant staff, riding at the head of the front division. Gen. Garfield rode with President Hayes in an open carriage, and was greeted during the entire progress to the Capitol with hearty cheers of recognition and kindness. The President-elect read his inaugural to an audience estimated at from 40,000 to 50,000 persons.

A noticeable feature in the memorable scenes of the day was the presence of Garfield's aged mother; and a still more striking feature was the presence and grand reception accorded Gen. Hancock. On his arrival in the city the horses were taken from his carriage, which was drawn through the streets by men, cheered on by an escort of many thousands; and his reception in the Senate chamber was even more flattering to his pride and gratifying to his friends. It is said, too, that the greeting between Garfield and Hancock was unaffectedly cordial. The presence of the man who lost the great prize to congratulate and aid the man who won it, taken in connection with the fact that those who stood with the defeated man and opposed the winner in the contest for that prize, each and all did his full part to give eclat to the occasion, and in the main, managed the whole affair, cannot but inspire pleasant feelings and pride of American citizenship in the heart of every American. Though bitter partisan contests, "all along the line," will immediately follow and go on as before, they will occasion not the slightest distrust of the permanency of American institutions. That is or will be the moral effect of this, the grandest inaugural display yet witnessed in this Republic—the grandest because made so by the unsolicited aid of tens of thousands of people from all parts of the Union, and of all factions and beliefs.

ON the afternoon of the 4th, President Garfield sent in the following nominations for Cabinet officers, all of whom were confirmed without a nay from any Senator: Jas. G. Blaine, of Maine, Secretary of State; Wm. Windom, of Minnesota, Secretary of the Treasury; Wayne McVeagh, of Pennsylvania, Attorney General; Thomas L. James, of New York, Postmaster General; Samuel J. Kirkwood, of Iowa, Secretary of the Interior; Robert T. Lincoln, of Illinois, Secretary of War; Wm. H. Hunt, of Louisiana, Secretary of the Navy.

WE are led to infer that the immortal curl on Roscoe Conkling's brow is bristling right up at the way Garfield has started in to run things. Roscoe's dignity is touched; the idea that he is not to be consulted about everything is what sours Roscoe. At last accounts Grant and Cameron were with Roscoe helping him not to like it. These distinguished gentlemen have started in to not like things rather too previously; they will be apt to get flattened out.

THE Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Arizona have under consideration a memorial asking Congress to segregate the southern portion of Arizona from the northern, and to form a new State embracing the southern portion of the Territory and the California counties of Los Angeles, San Bernardino and San Diego.

ON the 3d instant, President Hayes issued a pardon for young Hicks, of Tehama county, California, who is now in the Oregon Penitentiary for passing counterfeit money. The application for pardon was presented by Congressman Berry.

GARFIELD'S INAUGURAL.

President Garfield's inaugural address is generally commended as being an able document, while all concede that it is nowise namby-pamby, but, on the contrary, is outspoken and "stalwart" to an unusual degree.

Under the latter head will come his declaration in effect that "the supremacy of the nation and the laws should not, in his belief, any longer be a subject of debate." That, he says, was settled by the civil war; that there can be no appeal from the Constitution or laws made in pursuance thereof. This is a good sentiment; no one need object to it. But won't there be some little trouble hereafter as heretofore as to how that instrument and the laws under it are to be interpreted?

He holds that the General Government is under special obligations to aid in removing illiteracy among its voting population. This implies recommendations for general educational laws likely to be beneficial in other quarters of the Union than in the South.

He touches up the old polygs at Salt Lake as if he meant business, as it is much to be hoped he does with respect to polygamy, the beastly feature of Mormonism which alone interests the outside world. He says, referring to the human propagation establishments of Utah, that "No ecclesiastical organization can be safely permitted to usurp, in the smallest degree, the functions and powers of the National Government." This means that if Congress will do its duty the Salt Lake system of peopling the earth will soon have to be materially modified.

In regard to the much talked-of Civil Service Reform, he says: "At the proper time I shall ask Congress to fix the tenure of the minor offices of the several executive departments, and prescribe grounds upon which removals shall be made during the terms for which the incumbents have been appointed."

Jupiter vs. Bodie.

The testimony in the suit of the Jupiter Mining Company against the Bodie Con. Mining Company was all in on Friday last, and Harry Thornton, of counsel for the Jupiter, made the opening argument for the plaintiff, and immediately thereafter departed for Washington. The case was then adjourned until this (Tuesday) morning, when Mr. Reddy and Senator Stewart will speak for the Bodie Company. Thereafter Gen. R. M. Clarke will close the argument for the Jupiter. The case will then go to the jury. The statement has been made, and has received general currency in Bodie, that the original case of the Jupiter against the Bodie for alleged trespass and for damages in the sum of $5,000, has been withdrawn, and another case, involving more directly the questions between the two mines, substituted. This statement is an error. The case at issue is the one originally presented to the Court.

The case has been ably handled on both sides, and the jury has been furnished with a tremendous array of facts and scientific theory for the guidance of their judgment. The number of exhibits filed, in the way of maps, charts, models, quartz, porphyry, cap rock and what not, is simply remarkable. The jury is a remarkable one in its composition, it being said that there is from six to ten millions of dollars represented by its members. The jury has taken a great interest in the case, interrogating witnesses frequently, as does also Judge Sawyer, when the attorneys fail to bring out some point which they think of importance. The rulings of the presiding judge have been very fair, and in no way have indicated what his own views of the merits of the case may be. Mr. Reddy, as associate counsel with Senator Stewart, has created a decidedly agreeable impression upon the mining men of San Francisco, and will doubtless have his time fully employed in his new field.

Both sides to the controversy are confident of obtaining a verdict, while a good many others think it not improbable that the jury will disagree. The case will doubtless come to a close about Thursday of this week.—Bodie Free Press.

PRESIDENT HAYES, the day before his retirement from office, informed Horace Davis, who conveyed to him the supplemental petition for the pardon of the Mussel Slough settlers, and also said to General Miller, who visited him on the same subject, that he felt he must decline to take action upon the petition in the absence of any expression of opinion from the Federal Judges and District Attorneys. He said it was not necessary to have their favorable recommendations, but it should be ascertained whether they had anything to say against the proposed pardon as he had found during his administration that important facts and considerations, adverse to the exercise of Executive clemency, had not been known to the public or communicated to him until after pardons had been granted. This case has, therefore, come over to the present administration, and the efforts of the California delegation will be renewed with President Garfield.

IN response to a cablegram from the Orange Emergency Committee of Dublin, the Orange Order of British North America will shortly issue circulars to the lodges throughout Canada, asking for contributions to aid their brethren in Ireland in resisting the Land League tyranny, and to relieve the persecuted Irish royalists.

Mormonism and Politics.

C. C. Goodwin, for many years editor of the Virginia City Enterprise, and at present the able conductor of the Salt Lake Tribune, has an article in the March North American Review, on the political attitude of the Mormons, which affords a clear and intelligent insight as to the future aims, designs and expectations of that strange people. Living among and coming into daily contact with the Mormon Saints has given Mr. Goodwin an opportunity to study and become familiar, not only with their religious creed, but to learn their political designs and ambition. The writer estimates that twenty-four twenty-fifths of the inhabitants of Utah Territory are believers in the Mormon faith, and earnest followers of Joseph Smith, their inspired Prophet. The Mormons are also numerous enough to hold the balance of political power in Idaho and Arizona, and at present are colonizing Washington, Montana, Colorado and Wyoming. Bishop Lunt recently informed Mr. Goodwin: "We look forward with perfect confidence to the day when we will hold the reins of the United States Government." A very brief residence among the Mormons will satisfy any Gentile that there is no limit to the faith of this peculiar people. They are in dead earnest, and believe every prediction they make in regard to their future political and religious power and sovereignty.—Carson Appeal.

Old "Virginny's" Burial-place.

The Virginia Chronicle inquires; "Does anybody know where Old Virginny,' in whose honor Virginia City, Nevada, was named, is buried? John Lothrop says that he is buried at the head of Main street, Dayton, within a stone's throw of A. Bonham's residence, while others hold that the man buried there is a Mr. Claggett, a brother of ex-Delegate Claggett, of Montana. Can anybody speak knowingly on the subject? If Old Virginny's body is indeed entombed close to a public highway in Dayton, it ought to be disinterred and buried in the cemetery on the hillside."

To this the Winnemucca Silver State adds: "J. M. Kirby, of this county, who was a partner of Old Virginny from 1856 to 1861—the time of his death—informs us that John Lothrop is right in saying that the grave is at the head of Main street, Dayton. He says there are two graves close together, and that the lower one is that of Dan. Maillen, who was killed by a colored man in 1857, and the upper one is Old Virginny's. Mr. Kirby participated in the funeral services, and therefore knows whereof he speaks."

THE Virginia Enterprise says that the Frenchman who owns the herd of camels ranging to the eastward in the valleys bordering the Carson river will utilize his "ships of the desert" this Summer in carrying goods from the terminus of the Carson and Colorado Railroad into camps out into the wilderness. The camels now number forty, all but two or three of whom are natives of Nevada. In our deserts these animals find grasses and bitter and prickly shrubs and plants suited to their taste.

A CERTAIN editor of a weekly paper made a practice of "stopping the press to announce," even if he had nothing of more importance to announce than a dog-fight. One week everything was dull as a patent-office report, but the ruling passion cropped out as follows: "We stop the press to announce that nothing has occurred since we went to press of sufficient interest to induce us to stop the press to announce it."

A LETTER from the Wood River country, Idaho, says in many places are to be seen the rifle pits and holes sank in the bed rock by the first parties who passed through the country looking for placer mines and fighting Indians. There were large parties from Boise Basin and Rocky Bar who scouted through the country as early as 1844-5. In one place three skeletons were found in a rifle pit.

THE Calumet & Hecla Copper Mining Company, of Michigan, will pay a quarterly dividend of $5 per share at Boston on the 15th instant. This dividend aggregates $500,000, and is the largest now paid by any mine in the United States. The total amount paid in dividends, including the above, is reported at $18,850,000.

MINERS' HOSPITAL.—Wasson's Miners' Hospital Act passed both branches of the Legislature, and is undoubtedly a law. It is said that Mackey, Fair and other mining men of this coast will endow it liberally. Well done, thou good and faithful servant, Joe Wasson!—Bridgeport Chronicle.

THE Ontario, one of the big mines of Utah, has no superior in the country at the present time in profits and prospects. A grand total of $3,150,000 in dividends has been paid to date. The mine has yielded nearly $2,000,000 per annum since work fairly began, and for the year 1880 went ahead of those figures.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

Report on the Gold Mountain Road Survey.

MESSRS. EDITORS—We beg leave to report, through your columns, for the information of those who subscribed toward a preliminary survey of a road to Gold Mountain, that after two weeks of thorough examination, we found a good and feasible route for a wagon road, on a good natural grade, for a distance of about forty miles from Independence. Owing to the depth of the snow we were obliged to take it afoot, and carry our provisions, water and blankets.

We propose, however, to commence where we left off and go through, when we will report fully. The route, so far, is from Independence via Mazourka Cañon to Badger Flat, crossing the summit near the Grand View mine to Squaw Flat, thence down Phillips & McKellip's Cañon for about ten miles. The grade is lighter than that of Mazourka Cañon. An expenditure of two hundred dollars will make this ten miles a good road—thence across Jim Parker's Park, which is about six miles long by from one to two miles wide; the only obstacle to the road is sagebrush for the six miles; thence through Grand Cañon some four miles or more we come out on a succession of low hills of a loose formation that would permit of the road being built in almost any direction. We found no water on this route, but we feel confident that there is water in Parker's Park from the fact that fresh horse trails were observable in several places, evidently feeding in the Park, as well as the innumerable deer tracks, flocks of birds, etc. Considerable work will have to be done in Grand Cañon blasting the rocks that have fallen from its very high and precipitous sides. The formation in Phillips & McKellip's Cañon is a coarse grained granite; crossing the summit, limestone; from Parker's Park to and through Grand Cañon, principally slate and limestone. Very respectfully,

J. WAL. PHILLIPS,
A. MCKELLIPS.

SWANSEA.—Mr. J. H. Ely has a force of men at work in this district prospecting the claims lately sold by Moran and Lubken to New York parties. On the Mountain Star mine two shifts of men are at work, and Mr. Ely expects to strike a body of ore in a short time. This mine has a splendid prospect; it is one of the series on the same ledge or belt as the Indiana and Virginia which has produced such rich ores. The Swansea Belle is also reported as showing rich ore in the bottom of the shaft. New discoveries of fine smelting ores have been made a little to the north of the French Flag and Pioneer mines, and on the same belt. There is every evidence that immense bodies of argentiferous lead ores exist in this locality. On the French Flag and Pioneer locations the surface showing is astonishing; ore crops out on every hand in a bewildering manner. Several small shafts have been sunk, covering a width of over fifty feet on the French Flag, and all in ore. Swansea is waking up, and in our opinion it will not be long before it will come to the front as one of the greatest bullion producing districts in the State.

SUPERIOR COURT.—In the Superior Court, Judge Hannah presiding, March 7th, in the case of the People vs. Chas. Baker, on motion of the defendant's counsel, S. P. Moffat, it was ordered that the prisoner be removed from the jail to the jury room and provided by the Sheriff with a suitable nurse until further orders by the Court. The case was continued until Monday, March 21st, and the persons summoned to act as trial jurors for the January term, 1881, were discharged. Although quite ill the prisoner is not dangerously so, and is reported to be very anxious to get his trial disposed of.

FROM THE BLIND.—W. B. Harvey, of Lone Pine, is in receipt of a clearly-written letter from David Davis, a young man formerly employed at the Emigrant works, Lee District. About a year ago the writer met with an accident in Bodie, whereby he lost both eyes. He is now at the Vinton (Iowa) College for the Blind, where, "among some other things" he "expects to learn a trade." His letter is full of pertinent inquiries regarding this county, and he closes by sending special regards to all old friends.

SAD NEWS.—The following press dispatch, dated Phœnix, Arizona, March 7, conveys sad news to relatives and friends, residing here, of the boy referred to, who passed his younger days in this valley. The dispatch reads: "Louis Shearer, aged twelve, while out gunning with a companion on Saturday afternoon was accidentally shot, receiving wounds from which he died this afternoon at 6 o'clock."

STARTED UP.—The Brown Monster mill started up on Monday last, with good prospects for an extended run. Plenty of ore of good quality is coming out of the mine, and we expect soon to see the gold product of Inyo considerably increased.

COOL.—We have been having some substantial winter-weather for several nights, during which ice formed a full half-inch thick. Peach, nectarine and apricot trees were mostly in full bloom, and about all that kind of fruit has come to grief.

PROSPECTING.—Several parties from Independence are prospecting in Mazourka Cañon, and on the east slope of the Inyos in the region of Saline Valley.

FOUND.—The loser of a small package of photographs can obtain the same by calling at this office and proving property.

MATTERS IN LONE PINE.—A correspondent writing from Lone Pine, under date of March 8th, says: "Our town has resumed its quiet again. Beveridge folks have gone to work for another month. The concert by the Lone Pine Glee Club was a grand success; eclipsed all expectations. Great credit is due Miss Marcia Stevens for the result. The song, "Meet me by moonlight alone," was rendered in a splendid manner by Miss Blanche Meysan and Mr. Baker, although marred by the effects of Mr. Baker's severe cold, from which he is still suffering. Song by Miss Minnie Lasky, "I'm going abroad with pa.," was also sung in splendid style. Quartette, "Come where my love lies dreaming," was rendered in an excellent manner, taking into consideration the absence of Mr. Baker. By request, Mrs. Gelcich favored the audience with several favorite Spanish songs. After the concert, the company adjourned to the hall for dancing, when to the dismay of all, the violinist could not be found after two hours diligent search, with the assistance of our Bodie friends. We much regret the disappointment caused to our Independence friends, and also the gentlemen from Bodie, who will probably soon leave with a poor opinion of Lone Pine. By inserting the above you will much oblige. SUBSCRIBER.

TREES.—Messrs. Horner & Hammond, the Eastern tree and shubbery men, were in the valley during last week delivering thousands of trees and shrubs for which Mr. Horner secured orders last Fall. From what we can hear, all purchasers are well pleased. The real worth of such investments will begin to show up in two or three years from now.

MOVING.— Ex-Under Sheriff J. J. Moore is to-day packing up preparatory to removal, with his family, to Big Pine, where he proposes to settle down in the mercantile line. Both as an officer and man, "Jack" has won the respect of all, and there are none but wish him and his the highest success in their new field and sphere.

BULLION SHIPMENTS.—On the 1st instant the Owens Lake M. & M. Co. shipped a bar of fine bullion, and a similar one on the 5th, worth about $1,000 each. The new mill, with its peculiar labor-saving appliances, is reported to be working to a charm.

THE EPIZOOTY.—This horse whooping cough seems to be prevailing quite generally throughout the State. Many animals in this section are afflicted with it, but, here, as elsewhere, in a much milder form than when it raged several years ago.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

Proceedings of the Special Meeting.

WEDNESDAY, March 7, 1881.

On the above named day the Board of Supervisors of Inyo County, State of California, met in special meeting pursuant to notice heretofore given, at 10 o'clock A. M. C. Meysan, Chairman, D. Olds and E. Robinson present.

Petition of citizens for the rebuilding of the Bend City bridge was taken up, and after due consideration it appearing necessary that said bridge should be rebuilt, said petition was granted.

Plans and specifications of Felix Meysan for the rebuilding of the Bend City bridge were accepted and ordered filed.

Ordered, That the Clerk hereof cause to be published in THE INYO INDEPENDENT for the period of four weeks, from April 9th to April 30, 1881, inclusive, notices inviting "Proposals to furnish material for the Bend City bridge," and "Proposals for rebuilding the Bend City bridge."

The bid of H. Levy, proposing to board county prisoners at the rate of 75 cents per day for each prisoner. Bid of V. G. Thompson for board of county prisoners at the rate of $1 per day for each prisoner. The bid of H. Levy being the lowest, was accepted.

Bid of Mrs. Margaret Lewis for care of indigent sick for the ensuing year, on the basis of an average of four patients throughout the year, for the sum of $1,600, and for each patient in excess of the average $1 each per day. This being the only proposal submitted, it was ordered accepted, upon the filing of a good and sufficient bond in double the amount of said $1,600.

Bid of D. Stubblefield proposing to supply wood for county purposes at the rate of $11 per cord. Bid of Frank Lawrence proposing to furnish wood for $12 per cord. The bid of D. Stubblefield being the lowest was ordered accepted, upon his giving a good and sufficient bond in the sum of $100.

Board adjourned.

THE SHOW.—The many who attended the exhibition of the Gaiety Combination last Saturday night express themselves well pleased with their investment. The boys have returned from Big Pine, where they gave a successful entertainment, and now go hence to Lone Pine and Darwin, showing in each, and probably return this way. They are very pleasant gentlemen, and seem deserving of patronage by amusement seekers.

STARTED OUT.—Assessor May is on his rounds in the northern part of the county, with something less than a ton of blanks with which to worry the good people.

A QUESTION.— It is a matter of mere guess, now, as to who belongs to the Independence Jockey Club. It is hard to find anyone who will acknowledge it, anyhow.

TO-NIGHT.—Masonic lodge meeting at the hall to night, for important business.

HOW.—How's the early "garden truck" and fruit and sich now?

Hunting Evidence.

The Nevada Silver State says: "Mrs. S. E. Carlton, from Carson, arrived here yesterday. She is tracing up evidence to secure pardon of her brother, Alf Chartz, who, it will be remembered, killed Conductor Rieker, in Eureka, about three years ago Chartz has been more than sufficiently punished for his crime (if crime it was), which, in our opinion, was justifiable, and should be pardoned. Mrs. Carlton is deserving of great praise for her indefatigable effort in behalf of her brother."

The Carson Appeal adds: "On the day of the adjournment of the Legislature the members made up a handsome purse for Mrs. Carlton, and many of the members who contributed remarked that they hoped the money would enable her to get the evidence to release her brother."

IT is stated that at the present rate of depletion, it will only take twenty years to exhaust the pine forests of the country.

A CABLE is to be laid north and south from the Isthmus of Panama, to connect with the United States and Europe.

The Bishop Creek Mines—Tarrytown District, Etc.

BIG PINE, March 8.

MESSRS. EDITORS—Active operations will be resumed on the Mineral Hill property in about a week or ten days. It is a great pity that some enterprising company has not taken hold of this mine, for I am certain they would soon be rewarded by opening up one of the finest mines to be found in the county. Considerable work has been done in the last five years, one tunnel having been run into the hill a distance of 585 feet, but the ledge was never discovered. Higher up other tunnels were started, but only succeeded in cutting a slide, which shows some of the finest carbonates to be found on this Coast, which give high assays in silver. All that has been done is really only prospect work, which has been done by the locators of the mine personally. My opinion is that if the middle tunnel was run in about 180 feet further it would show something that would "astonish the natives." The property is surrounded by wood and timber in abundance, and about one mile from the mile is a fine spring of water, running continuously about 30 miner's inches. This is only one claim out of a hundred in the White Mountains. To the east of Bishop Creek, further down in the foot hills, there has lately been discovered some

RICH GOLD LEDGES.

They are small, but numerous, and as they dip both east and west it is probable that they all come together at a certain depth. During the past month a large number of locations have been taken up, and quite a number of men are at work sinking shafts, running tunnels and putting up arastras. While at Bishop I saw one arastra cleaned up, which turned out nearly $500 from two or three tons of rock.

"TARRYTOWN" MINING DISTRICT

Is on the east slope of the White Mountains, and to the west of Deep Spring Valley. The district abounds in ledges, the greater portion of which carry base or smelting ores. Thousands of tons can be extracted that will assay from $30 to $90 in silver and 60 per cent. lead. Among the most notable of these claims are the Buckeye, J. K. Polk, Medway, Concordia, Champion, Tajo and Copalá. The three latter are owned by myself and partner. There are also a number of ledges which carry free milling ores. Some assays have gone high as $780 in silver and $49 in gold. These ledges average from one to five feet in width, and carry well-defined walls. The Silver King and Comet mines were bonded a short time since to some New York parties.

You would be surprised to know of the number of locations that have already been taken up. Myself and partner are the owners of nine claims in the district, which I will describe in full in my next. A company sent here last year a gentleman with instructions to

LOCATE ALL GROUND

Available for mining purposes which was not already located, and so well did he perform his duty that if said company were to sell out to-day at the rate of $5 for each location made they would find themselves in the possession of a magnificent fortune.

Money is a very scarce article in this, the future great mining camp of the Pacific Coast. So is whisky; but do you know that the people here seem to feel the want of the latter more than the former? On my remarking the other day to a gentleman here that if whisky was scarce water was plentiful, he replied: "To —— with water; we get too much of that —— truck in our tarantula juice at Big Pine." If money is scarce at present I do not think it will be long before it will be pouring in here in abundance, for the mines are bound to be opened up soon. Capitalists can

HAVE THEIR CHOICE

Of mines in this district, according to their means—such as lead mines, silver mines, gold mines, iron mines, big mines and little mines, cheap mines and high priced mines; indeed, so high-priced do they run that the owners of one mine say that they would not commence to talk of selling unless the would-be purchaser set the ball rolling with a bid of a million dollars as a starter. But, laying all joking aside, there as good mines, if not better, to be found around Deep Spring Valley as anywhere in Inyo county. The great want felt here at present is a

MILL FOR CUSTOM WORK,

So that mine-owners could run through some of their rich ore to enable them have a little coin with which to develop their mines. A mill would pay its owners a handsome profit, for there is rich ore in abundance. There is plenty of water and immense quantities of wood within a mile or two of a good mill-site.

Yours, truly, JOHN R. GIFFORD.

SEVERAL movements are now being made in New York to assist the Boers in their struggle with the British. Money is being raised by subscription, and an effort is to be made at once to establish a line of steamers from that port to the nearest port of the Boers. One of the most prominent men in America has been invited to preside at the coming mass meeting of the Hollanders at Cooper Institute. Numbers of volunteers are said to be waiting for transportation to the scene of war to join the army of the Republic.

IN the case of Lassen County vs. the Treasurer of Tehama, what is known as the migratory stock law, passed in 1874, has lately been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, on general principles—or something to that effect. A pertinent point now arises as to whether or not Inyo County can not make Mono and Tulare disgorge the money heretofore paid on this account during the past six years.

THAT $73,000 gained by the people by Governor Kinkead's veto of the Bullion Tax Bill will not be a bad thing to take just now. Storey county will get over half of it; the rest goes to the State.—Carson Appeal.

Alleged Wit.

What is the prime object of soldiers' drills? To make holes in the enemy.

An exchange asks: "When does a leek get ripe enough to pick?" As soon as the Spring opens, of course.

Nasby is going to Europe in the Spring. For his health, probably. He has long had a bad spell.

Surprise parties are coming into vogue again. The person who is to be surprised issues the invitations through a friend.

The internal arrangements of a newspaper office is not considered complete unless it is ornamented with a deceased Spring poet.

If you were an editor, and a poem builder should tender you a production in which the word "wafture" stood out in bold relief, would you waft your inkstand at his head? or would you nearly die of lafture?

The touching sentiment, "Our first in heaven," appeared after an obituary notice in a Philadelphia paper, and the father of the child came into the office raging mad. It was the third death in the family, and he desired to know of the clerk where he supposed the other two had gone.

"WELL, now Rutherford," exclaimed Mrs. Hayes, as she took a pipe down from the shelf and eyed it with a stoney glare, "if I don't think this is carrying things a trifle too far. Here is this beautiful meerschaum that the Connecticut man sent to you, and which I allowed you to keep as a curiosity, and I declare, if Mr. Evarts hasn't filled it with nasty plugs of tobacco and smoked it till it smells like everything. I do think, Rutherford, you don't do right to let such things go on right here in our best rooms, and we to leave them so soon, too. What do you suppose the Garfield women will say to come in and find the lace curtains loaded down with nasty tobacco smoke?" The good lady's voice died away as she went out of the room bearing the offending pipe at arm's length, while the President, smiling feebly, rubbed his head in a thoughtful mood, and muttered to himself that "really, he should have thought Mr. Evarts—".—Cincinnati Star.

MISS MARY BEAM, a handsome girl aged 24, living in Curry county, Oregon, committed suicide a few days ago because her family were displeased with her beaux. She had been visiting her nephew, who was one of her admirers, and he escorted her home. Her brother met them in the yard, knocked her escort down, kicked him and cut him slightly in the back. Miss Beam went to her room, swallowed a dose of strychnine, took the bottle down stairs where her brother was, and threw it on the floor, saying: "That will end all trouble," and breathed her last.

ONE of the villages of New Zealand is built on a thin crust of soil roofing over a vast boiler. Hot springs hiss and seethe in every direction—some spouting upward and boiling with the greatest fury, others merely of an agreeable warmth. So thin is the crust on which the people have built their little homes that in most places after merely thrusting a walking stick into the ground beneath one's feet, steam instantly follows its withdrawal; and the greatest care is necessary in walking among the hot mud holes and boiling springs.

A BOOK agent, who had retired from active labor upon the hard-earned accumulations of a life of industrious cheek, says that the great secret of his success was, that when he went to a house where the female head presented herself, he always opened by saying: "'I beg your pardon Miss, but it was your mother I wanted to see.' That always used to get 'em. They not only subscribed for my books themselves, but told me where I could find more customers."

THE Hawkeye man thinks it would save a great deal of embarrassment to clergymen and add to their revenues if they were to charge a fixed rate for marriage—say $5 for the first offense, $10 for the second, $20 for the third, and so on.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

THIS HONEY WAS REMOVED FROM THE hive by centrifugal force, with machinery made for the purpose. It is the recent virtually the same as honey in the comb, only you don't have to eat the beeswax, which is indigestible and therefore disagrees with many persons. When first extracted the honey is liquid, but nearly all pure honey will candy or granulate in course of time, especially if exposed to the cold. Putting the cans in hot water for a short time will bring the honey to its fluid state without injury.

This Honey is put up in 10 pound cans, with patented screw caps, which renders it convenient for family use, and especially for the miners, to which it may be packed, even upside down, without leakage. A neat label on each can gives full directions.

Price, $1 50 for can, or 12½ cents per lb. at the Apiary. Customers furnish their own receptacles. For sale at Harris & Rhine's, Independence, and at the Apiary, at Jacob Vagt's place, Camp Independence.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Allgemeine Deutsche Unterstuetzungs Gesellschaft.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 28, 1880.

Messrs. Harris & Rhine, Independence, Cal.:

DEAR SIRS—The undersigned President of the German Benevolent Society, begs leave to call your attention to this truly benevolent institution, founded in the early days of California, and being now in the 27th year of its existence. The Society was formed to carry out three objects, viz.: to assist poor and worthy or deserving people by support, to find employment for those out of work, and to cure those who are stricken down with sickness. For the latter purpose the Society owns a magnificent Hospital, surrounded by extensive grounds, where all patients are under the charge of excellent physicians and a consulting board of the most eminent medical talent of this city. The Society has expended for hospital and grounds the sum of $188,895.

The object of this communication is to propose to you to act as agent for this society, either personally or through one of your employees suited for such position, for the purpose of enlisting new members.

The monthly fee is only one dollar and the initiation fee on becoming a member two dollars. Only healthy persons can become members, and only Germans or those who speak that language, as their wives and children. Any member who moves with sickness is treated in the hospital without any expense to him until he has been restored to health. All persons who are not members, or cannot become such, not speaking the German language, are admitted for medical treatment in the hospital at as low terms as it is possible to make them.

In this city we have about 3,000 members, but throughout the interior only about 300. It is our aim to increase the number of members throughout the State to make the hospital as much as possible self-sustaining, to enable us to extend the charitable department in this benevolent institution. For the trifling sum of one dollar per month members have the best aid and care in the German Hospital.

Frequently sick people in the country are crippled for life by false treatment from incompetent doctors, or even brought to a premature death. Only too late do they find out that if they had become members they would have been restored to health, and their earnings of years would not have gone into the pockets of inexperienced doctors, as the hospital employs only the best physicians. If there are no earnings, the employers and the friends of the sick are generally called upon to pay for his support. All this can be avoided if the employers would vigorously enforce the rule, now introduced in most of San Francisco's establishments, that every man employed should belong to a relief society in order that in case of sickness he might be well cared for and not be reduced to the rather humiliating necessity of asking aid from the purses of his employer and his friends.

Persons of all nations of the age of 50 years or over are admitted as pensioners for life by paying a certain sum to be agreed upon to the society. They receive a home at the hospital, first-class board, washing and attendance in case of sickness, free of any expense.

To enable Germans and others who do not know of the existence of this institution, neither of the hospital nor its great advantages, to become members I have addressed you the above, and hope that you will cheerfully accept the agency and do all in your power to further the interests of this society, by enlisting new members and recommending our hospital to those who may be compelled to seek medical aid.

Your Obedient Servant,
JULIUS BANDMANN,
President G. G. B. S.

BEE-CULTURE.—NO. XII.

WINTERING.

The problem of wintering bees successfully is one which occupies the best apiarian minds in the Eastern States, and is not yet solved satisfactorily. The difficulty is that what is efficient for one Winter proves disastrous for another, the Winters being so different in the same locality. Some bee keepers favor indoor or cellar wintering, while others prefer to leave the bees on their Summer stand, properly packed. In this State, where bees are seldom confined to their hive for any length of time, we have no difficulty in bringing them through the Winter, provided we observe the general rules which are necessary for this purpose. When the upper stories are taken off in the Fall all the hives should be carefully examined to ascertain their condition. If any are weak or queenless they must be united with others or they will die out before next Spring. If they lack stores, combs of sealed honey must be given them, and for this reason the examination should take place before the last extracting, for it does not pay to extract the honey and then feed it back to the bees. Besides, giving combs of sealed honey is the very best and easiest way of feeding bees for Winter. See that the hives have no cracks through which the heat may escape, or robbers enter. Contract the entrance as before stated. Put a thick soft cloth over the frames, and be sure that the cover fits well and does not leak. Leaky covers have ruined many good swarms. Place a stone or other heavy weight on the cover to prevent it from being blown off. Some kind of a windbreak will be beneficial in keeping off cold winds, and allowing the bees to fly on pleasant days without danger of being blown away, and chilled on the cold ground.

As soon as Spring opens and the bees commence to carry pollen examine the hives, and see that they all have honey enough to last them until fruit trees blossom. It will be well to keep on hand some combs of sealed honey to give to such stocks as possibly may run out of stores before they can obtain new honey in the Spring. After the bees have commenced breeding well, an empty worker comb may occasionally be inserted between the brood combs, which will give the queen more room to lay; but beware of spreading the brood too fast as it is liable to get chilled on cold nights.

THE APIARY.

In locating an apiary the following points may be observed with benefit: Place the hives in rows facing South or East. Let the hives be 4 to 6 feet apart from center to center. Place the hives on small blocks, bricks, frames made of 3-inch strips or shallow boxes turned bottom up, and place them close to the ground, which will enable the weary honey gatherers to enter their home without delay. Placing several hives on one bench is a great misiake, as one hive can not be opened without disturbing all the others. Setting hives on benches several feet high causes the loss of many bees which miss the entrance and fall to the ground, and also of queens when they are clipped and the bee keeper not at hand the moment the bees swarm; whereas, if the hive were close to the ground the bees or queen could easily regain the entrance. Keep the apiary free from weeds, exclude chickens, hogs and other stock, that are liable to cause trouble, and keep a sharp lookout for toads, which should be killed or removed to the garden, where they will be more useful. In Summer shade the hives with boards or growing plants, but do not place them under evergreens or trees with a close top. The sun should be allowed to shine on the hives in the morning and evening. Perhaps unpainted hives are the best for the bees, in allowing the moisture to be absorbed and pass off through the boards, but as the hives last longer and look better if painted, many prefer them that way. They should however always be painted white and never any dark color, which will absorb the heat of the sun and make the bees very uncomfortable, compelling them to hang out when they ought to be at work, and often causing the comb melting down, and drowning or smothering the swarm. To help the bees distinguish their particular hive the entrance board, or a small square, circle, or other figure over the entrance, may be painted some other color, differing with each hive; or some particular plant or weed may be left standing to serve as a landmark.

IN CONCLUSION

I will say, keep your stocks strong, attend to them at the right time, care for them as you would for your horse or cow, and they will repay you with a larger profit for the time and money invested than any other stock on the farm.

In writing these articles I have given general rules, which in most cases will prove successful, but the reader must bear in mind what I said at the beginning; that there are no rules without exceptions. This is perhaps the case to a greater extent with bees than with anything else, and for the benefit of those who desire to go deeper into the matter and post themselves thoroughly on the business, I will give a list of publications, which, with practical work, will enable any lover of bees to become a true bee keeper.

Langstroth's book is a standard work, but was written before the invention of the honey extractor, and comb foundation and is therefore in some respects behind the times.

The Sutro Tunnel.

The Virginia City "Chronicle" says the Sutro tunnel is in a deplorable condition actually, and financially the tunnel company is in straightened circumstances, being compelled to rely entirely upon the receipts from the mining companies through whose ground the tunnel runs. The price paid by the companies is $70 a foot for the lateral drifts. The old bonanza mines, which have been yielding considerable ore for the past year, have let up, and the tunnel no longer receives the royalty which it has been in the habit of collecting. It will be seen that the tunnel company is in very poor condition either to put in another drain-box or to cut a drain in the bottom of the tunnel. The north end mines are really in a bad fix on account of this state of affairs, for if the drain box should be broken down for twenty-four hours all the lower levels would be flooded. These drain boxes are liable to be broken down at any time, as the tunnel is scaling off in many places. It greatly needs repairing, but the company is too poor at present to stand the expense. The capitalists who have heretofore lacked the enterprise have withdrawn their support, and the tunnel must hereafter be made self-sustaining or it must be abandoned. The striking of a good body of ore at any place on the lode would soon restore its prosperity, as the company hoisting ore would be compelled to pay the tunnel company a royalty of $1 for every ton of ore yielding $40 or less, and $2 for every ton yielding over $40.

THE Gulf Stream received its name from the fact that it was long supposed to originate in the Gulf of Mexico. According to Humboldt it receives its first impulse near the southern extremity of Africa. From the Gulf of Mexico this stream flows into the Atlantic Ocean between Florida and Cuba, whence it runs northward, nearly parrallel, to the American coast until it reaches Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, whence one branch runs downward towards the Azores, while the other flows toward the British Islands and thence to the Polar sea.

THE rule which works both ways is no rule at all.

Deep Mining Shafts.

It is somewhat singular that continental countries should be so much in advance of England in the matter of deep mining. The deepest perpendicular shaft at present existing is that of Przibram, in Bohemia, which has reached the depth of 21,000 meters, or 3,280 feet, although there are others still deeper, though not quite perpendicular. The rock-salt bore-hole at Spesenburg, near Berlin, was carried down 4,175 feet some few years ago, and a coal mine at Viviers, Belgium, is 3,542 feet. Two other shafts in Belgium, at Gilly, are sunk to the depth of 2,847 feet, and from these an exploring shaft was carried 666 feet farther, though it was unsuccessful as regards finding the expected seam. The deepest shaft in Prussia mining is the Samson shaft, at the Oberhartz lead and silver works in Hanover, which is 2,437 feet. The Rosebridge colliery, near Wigan, is 2,458 feet in depth, and that of Dunhill colliery, near Dunkinfield, 2,824 feet. France has nothing beyond 1881 feet at a colliery at Ronchamp. There is only one case on record where a depth exceeding one mile from the earth's surface has been reached, namely, at the artesian well at Potsdam, Missouri, in the United States, where the chisels have been carried down to 5,500 feet, or one mile 220 feet.—[London Capital and Labor.

THE CAMP INDEPENDENCE BILL.

Among the laws passed by the late Congress and approved by the President, relating to this coast, was one restoring the lands included in the Fort Crook and Fort Reading military reservations in this State to the public domain. All patents heretofore issued upon any lands within either reservation are confirmed, and also all rights the settlers would have acquired had settlement been any other public lands. So far this is the identical act petitioned for by the settlers upon the Camp Independence reservation, here in this vicinity; but in addition to those provisions, or the last one rather, we also ask the donation of a small portion of the ground and buildings thereon for high school purposes—an institution that is needed in this county if any such is needed anywhere. We had no expectation that any action would be taken on this petition until taken up by the present or new Congress. But now we do expect it. All the conditions are exceedingly favorable for the passage of Mr. Pacheco's bill relating to this matter without amendment. The precedent of the Forts Reading and Crook bill covers all that our settlers ask for themselves as to the recognition of their prior right to the lands on which they are settled. The new President has declared himself strongly in favor of a most liberal national policy in favor of building up educational institutions, and we may be sure his signature will not be withheld from a bill making the required donation. And the late Congress was actuated by a similar spirit, as shown by grants of lands for universities in certain Territories, and it is fair to expect a like spirit to prevail in the present one. Barring possible but not probable objections from the War Department, this Camp Independence bill will certainly become a law this coming session if Mr. Pacheco will exert himself to that end, which we are confident he will do.

THE Governor of Madrid (Spain) is a man of originality and energy. He came to the determination that gambling should be suppressed in the city. He reasons that if he called on the police for their services, they would inform the gamblers and enable them to escape. He would not trust them, but had them locked up, and with the Chief Constable set out to make a raid on the gambling dens. They found twenty-four such places, seized the "chips" and money visible, marched off the proprietors to prison, and thus, by one grand coup, accomplished in a few hours what the Governor's predecessors had been unable to do in years. Here was an ample illustration of the adage, "Where there's a will there's a way."

A TRAVELER in India writes that he has seen in a bazaar a devotee who has lain for sixteen years on a bed of nails. His body was full of sores. Another aspiring saint was holding a flower-pot at arm's length, and had held it in that position for five years. A third stood with his arm uplifted and without power to move a muscle, the arm being apparently stiff and the long finger nails growing into the wrist. They all seemed to take a gloomy view of life.

IT seems to be a settled thing that Governor Perkins will immediately issue a proclamation calling an extra session of the Legislature, to convene on the 4th of April. The points for legislation are the Appropriation and Apportionment bills, and to propose amendments to the Constitution. In regard to the latter, the best thing to do is to propose to abrogate the whole thing, and begin again at the bottom to construct a new one.

THE Catholic Archbishops of Cork and Dublin have each addressed pastoral letters condemning the Land League in unqualified terms. The Ladies Land League comes in for especial condemnation. As Ireland will not revolt against the Church, it is thought these letters must put an end to the Land Leagues, especially the latter.

THE Baroness Burdett-Coutts is so happy in her marriage that she wants to make all about her happy also. She has given $5 each to the tenants on one of her estates, spending for this purpose about $2,000. Substantial presents were also bestowed by her upon the persons employed upon her other estates.

COLORADO is ahead in the bullion producing line, having extracted and shipped last year over $30,000,000. This is a grand showing for so young a State. It is predicted that New Mexico will, in the next two years, equal Colorado if not surpass it, as a bullion producing section.

EXTRACTION OF GOLD BY CHLORINATION.

In the Mining and Scientific Press (a paper, by the way, that every mining man ought to take), of the 12th, we find an article, under the above caption, that may suggest something of value to Inyo gold miners. Certain it is that the number of gold-bearing quartz veins in this county is so great as to make it quite probable that will be the leading branch in Inyo mining. As a rule the gold from the surface ores from most all these ledges will freely amalgamate and can be saved by the simplest processes. But, in a few instances within our knowledge, it was found that the ore at comparatively shallow depths became more and more refractory, so that but little of the gold could be saved by the ordinary processes, although, we are assured, the ore actually contained more of the desired metal than that from nearer the surface. In any case processes more or less expensive and elaborate become a necessity to the successful manipulation of refractory gold ores as well as other kinds, no matter how rich the former may be. Which or what process is the best is an unsolved problem as applicable to all conditions and localities alike. If the one described below is of any value anywheres it would be in this country.

It is well known, says the article from which we quote, that chlorine will dissolve gold and other metals, and form valuable chlorides, which can then be leached out, leaving substances not attacked by chlorine, and also such chlorides as are not soluble. This chlorine process is in common use, especially in making exact assays of gold ores and mixtures, and also as a working metallurgical method, under pressure, and various other ways, all of more or less practical difficulties.

The new process, which is the invention of a citizen of Saco, Maine, differs from any of these. It consists, first, in exhausting the air from a strong, air-tight cylinder containing the finely pulverized ore prior to admitting the chlorine in the form of gas. Second, in preparing the gas and storing it in a gasometer, or holder, so that it may be supplied as wanted to the vessel containing the ores. Third, in a device for manipulating the ores in suitable vessels, so that the gas is not allowed to escape to interfere with the workmen, so that there may be no useless waste of materials, and so that a complete control of the operation be secured.

That is the plan in general. A perfect understanding of the details requires a lettered diagram of the apparatus, for which we refer those specially interested to the Press. Suffice it to say here that the gas, by reason of the exhaustion of the air, penetrates every interstice between the particles of ore, those in the bottom or center of the mass as well as the surface. The "chlorinator," as this ore cylinder is termed, is then "tumbled" while the chlorine is combining with the gold and other metals. As the chlorine enters into combination additional quantities are drawn into the chlorinator. Since the gas combines with the metals, and is thereby condensed, the effect is produced by exhaustion, not by pressure as is the principle in the older methods. By this means (exhausting) the chlorinator is free of all air, vapor and gases, the surfaces of the particles of ore are brought into perfect contact, insuring a more perfect action as there are no conflicting elements to prevent the action of the chlorine. When this action has ceased the chlorinator is gradually filled with water, by which means the gas is driven back into the holder. The ore is then taken out and leached with water to obtain the metallic chloride.

A mixture of common salt, black oxide of maganese and a small addition of sulphuric acid produces chlorine gas. In this, as in all these elaborate processes, the ore has to be well roasted. Except that, the process and apparatus does not appear to be particularly expensive.

THE Los Angeles Express devotes several columns to a glowing account of the doings of the Pacific Coast Press Association, the excursion, banquet and all that. The "press gang" were royally entertained by the leading citizens of Los Angeles, and the average country editor may be pardoned for indulging in a little gush over such appreciation and entertainment.

SAN FRANCISCO is in the enjoyment of another homocidal sensation. On the 14th James Adams, a mining man of Eureka and a member of the late Nevada Legislature, was shot and mortally wounded by Adolph Scharder, a clerk in the Bulletin office. The difficulty originated about some mining business, and reports differ as to which was the aggressor.

THE Candelaria True Fissure of the 12th says that the furnace at the Walker river copper mines was started last week, but it was found that there was a leak in the water jacket and, after a run of three hours, it was shut down again. The smelting of the ore is at least a success. What the grade of the ore is has not yet been determined.

THE CZAR ASSASSINNATED.

It is doubtful if any crowned head in any age has ever been the object of so many desperate, yet, until now, futile attempts at assassinnation by his own "beloved" subjects as has Alexander, late Czar of All the Russias. But the persistent efforts of the crazy Communists and Nihilists to take his life have finally been crowned with success. On Sunday afternoon last he was blown into eternity as described in a dispatch from St. Petersburg, March 13, as follows: "The Imperial carriage was attacked when opposite the Imperial stables, while the Emperor, with the Grand Duke Michael, was returning from Michael Palace in a closed carriage, supported by eight Cossacks. The first bomb destroyed the back part of the carriage. The Czar and his brother alighted uninjured. The assassin, on being seized by the Colonel of Police, drew a revolver, but was prevented from firing it. The second bomb was thrown by another person, and fell close to the Czar's feet, the explosion shattering both legs, and inflicting other terrible injuries. The Czar was immediately conveyed, in an unconscious state, to the Winter Palace, where he died at 4:30 o'clock the same afternoon. The explosion also killed an officer and two Kossacks."

The bombs were of glass filled with dynamite. The first was thrown by a man standing behind a knot of people who had stopped to watch the Emperor pass; this fell directly under his carriage, the splinters from which being thrown in all directions, wounding many persons. Before the smoke and dust from this had cleared away, and in the incident confusion, a man on the opposite side of the street threw the second bomb, with the fatal result above stated. Both the assassins were immediately captured and very roughly handled while being hurried to prison.

Alexander II, the murdered Emperor, inaugurated many reforms in the early part of his reign to ameliorate the miserable condition of the lower orders of his vast empire. Among the most notable of these efforts was the emancipation of the serfs, and the decree of a general amnesty to political offenders. The Polish insurrection greatly embittered him, and his subsequent refusal to allow a representative government gave rise to Nihilism, and their many attempts to murder him, to prevent which the most extraordinary precautions had to be taken at all hours of the day and night. He could not feel a moment's security awake nor sleeping, at home nor abroad, nor in any spot in all his broad dominions. His must have been a most wretched life, though he was the most powerful potentate of the earth.

IT looks very much as though the general outlines of the insanity plea in the De Young-Kalloch case had been taken from the Schroeder trial. There is precisely the same argument of an antecedent period of mental distress and anxiety, the same kind of physical manifestations of this condition, in short the same general and very familiar theory. It must be admitted that this is a very tempting line of defense, for its elasticity is such that it can be made to cover any period of time, and almost any period of incubation. It remains to be seen whether it will affect the San Francisco jury as it did the Oakland one.—Record-Union.

The unsophisticated Record-Union don't seem to know that such high-toned native tax-payers as Con. Mooney, the Dog Fighter, Barry, the Horse Artist, Clemetshaw, of San Quentin, and a number of other equally responsible gents, all swear that the dead man fired the first shot, therefore, that this a is remarkably clear case of self-defense. If the defense find it necessary to prove that De Young swallowed the pistol with which he fired the first shot in order to account for his other remaining full charged, Messrs. Mooney, Barry and the rest can doubtless be prevailed upon to appear as experts, and satisfy the jury that that was just the way it was done.

CONCERNING the assassination of the Czar, a St. Petersburg dispatch of the 15th says: Rousseaukoff, who threw the first bomb, has been a student for two years at the Mining Academy. The second bomb thrower is also a young man. The Czar, it seems, was warned against attending parade on Sunday. After alighting from the shattered carriage, the Emperor approached Rousseaukoff (the first bomb thrower) and ordered his removal. The police had difficulty in protecting the second assassin from the fury of the crowd. Rousseaukoff has been for a long time under suspicion of the police. Gen. Melikoff announces that only one assassin has been captured, but the police have made many arrests.

THE last spike has been driven to connect the second trans-continental railroad, and through passenger and mail trains are now running regularly over it. From Los Angeles to New York the highest price passenger ticket is $112, and the lowest, or third class, $65. The rates from San Francisco over the southern route are the same as over the Central Pacific.

ONE of the handsomest of publications is the Illustrated Scientific News, published by Munn & Co., New York. Every number contains thirty-two pages, full of engravings of novelties in science and the useful arts. Ornamental wood work, pottery, vases and objects of modern and ancient art are finely shown. The March number contains, among various other subjects illustrated, a full description of the manufacture of paper hangings, with engravings; how the deceptive curve is produced in casting the ball by the baseball pitcher, his attitude, how he holds and handles the ball, all fully illustrated. The number before us also contains engravings of Capt. Eads' proposed ship railway across the Isthmus, and a novel hydraulic railway locomotive. In addition to all this it contains many valuable recipes for artisans and housekeepers. This publication will be found instructive and entertaining to all classes, but will be best appreciated by the most intelligent. Published by Munn & Co., 37 Park Row, New York, at $1 50 a year, and sold by all news dealers.

A COMMUNIST named Julius Schwab, in New York, told a Times reporter that Gould and Vanderbilt would soon follow the Czar. If the carcasses of this Schwab and all his sort were utilized as guano, the world would be just that much and no more the gainer for their existence.

IN the Jupiter-Bodie suit, the jury on Saturday last, after being out four hours, brought in a verdict in favor of the Bodie. P. Reddy and ex Senator Stewart were counsel for the Bodie, a fact that "accounts for the taste in the water" quite naturally.

THE second and eldest living son of the late Czar has been formally crowned Emperor, and bears the name of Alexander III. It is broadly intimated that the new Emperor was not entirely ignorant of what was going to happen to his respected sire that Sunday.

IN Sacramento, an election was held on Tuesday of last week, which resulted in a grand triumph of the Citizen's ticket, against both Republicans and Democrats. The city is republican ordinarily, but has fallen into "Machine" hands, hence this defeat.

ON the night of the 16th a stage coach was fired at near Contention, A. T., and the driver and a passenger named Roe were killed. R. H. Paul, W., F. & Co.'s agent, returned the fire. The horses ran away and saved passengers and treasure from robbery.

SENATOR FARLEY, of California, has obtained the passage of a bill through the Senate to provide for a dead letter office, at San Francisco for the Pacific coast, and thus avoid unnecessary delay in sending uncalled for letters to and from Washington.

THE New York Mining News very pertinently remarks that the duplication of the names of famous mines by the owners of comparatively worthless properties is a fraud upon the public, and should be prohibited by law.

ONE Kelly, a car conductor in San Francisco, has been convicted of defrauding the Sutter street railway company by using a drum shaped cylinder which when pressed in the palm of the hand gives forth a sound similar to the bell punches used on the road.

FROM all quarters of the State reports come that the weather of the past ten days has been the coldest known this Winter, and in some places the coldest for seven years past.

GARFIELD'S reference, in his inaugural address, to the Mormon question and the necessity of dealing sternly and resolutely with the polygamous Saints, has created a small storm in Salt Lake City. The same old defense is made by the organs and advocates of the "twin relic" that a plurality of wives is a part of the Mormon creed, and that the supreme law of the land prohibits interference with religion. It would be idle to enter into a discussion of a subject upon which every argument that can be advanced has been said a thousand times. The country has made up its mind in regard to the Mormon iniquities, and the universal judgment is that its existence is a blot upon our civilization. Garfield, if he shall succeed in wiping it out, will render a great service to humanity and make his administration one of the most remarkable in our history.—N. Y. Herald,

A KANAS CITY special says: Tom Gordan, a desperado, killed the City Marshel of Socorro, N. M., a few days ago, but escaped and fled to Albuquerque. He was rearrested there, and on Friday was taken to Socorro where he was hanged to a water-tank by a mob of 200 or 300 men.

THE Grass Valley Free Lance is in a great stew because a woman has been appointed Superintendent of a mine. We see no reason why a woman may not, with a few months practice, learn to sit in an office, draw her pay, and smoke cigarettes, with her heels resting on a $450 table, just as well as a man.—Carson Appeal.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

SATURDAY, MARCH 19 1881

DEEP SPRINGS.—Ex-Sheriff Greenly came in yesterday from Deep Spring Valley, where he, with Scott Broder and Billy Lake, has been working during the past Winter. The party has been prospecting their claims on the Indian Scout, Greenly and other ledges. Mr. Greenly reports that the shaft on the Indian Scout has been sunk to a depth of sixty feet, with a drift running ten feet from the bottom. The vein is perfect from the surface down, with an average width of two and one-half feet, and all ore of an average value of $75 per ton in gold and silver. On the Greenly claim two tunnels have been run on the vein, one for a distance of 45 and the other 60 feet, with an average width of vein and value about the same as the Scout. On the Lake claim a shaft has been sunk 50 feet, with a showing similar to the above. A tunnel 150 feet in length has peen run on the Cairo claim, and 50 feet more has to be driven to strike the ledge. The developments on these claims have proven them to be permanent and valuable mines. Messrs. Greenly, Broder and Lake are well satisfied with the showing their work has made, and there is no longer any doubt but that these mines can produce ore enough to keep a ten stamp mill running steadily.

DRESS MAKING.—As will be seen by an advertisement elsewhere, Mrs. H. D. Gelatt, at the Post, has opened a dress making and milliner establishment, and invites the patronage of all who wish to have dresses fitted and made in true artistic style, or who desire to purchase materials of any description pertaining to bonnets, dresses, etc., etc., which she keeps for sale literally at San Francisco prices, when the cash accompanies the order—don't forget this last named condition, for it is important. Mrs. G. will also give instructions in measuring, cutting and fitting in accordance with the simplest and most perfect system known. We are wretchedly ignorant as to how ladies' dresses and bonnets are framed and built—couldn't tell no more about the plans and specifications than we could about a Chinese weather map—but we are assured by those who do know that Mrs. Gelatt is not only an excellent dress maker, but also very liberal in her charges. And we know that she is deserving all the patronage this country can afford.

ABOUT A TELEPHONE.—It is proposed to try to organize a local company to build a telephone line to connect this section with the rest of the world. A line has recently been opened from Caliente to Keruville, something near 50 miles in length. The object would be to connect with that line. The distance from this place is about 140 miles. It is said the cost of the line above mentioned was not to exceed $40 per mile, poles, wire and labor all included. We shall not at this time endeavor to show the great advantages that would accrue were these enterprises carried out. It can be built if our citizens will try to build it, and nobody be out many dollars in cash either. And it is certainly needed, or else a regular telegraph line to Mohave.

ANOTHER M. D.—The card of Dr. R. A. Goodenough, Jr., who has located at Lone Pine, will be noted in this issue. Dr. Goodenough is just from Belleville, Nev., from which point he brought Ramon Montenegro, who was so terribly wounded in a shooting fracas there last January. The Dr. will remain at Lone Pine some two or three months and perhaps permanently.

DRAKE'S HOTEL.—Bishop Creekers and the traveling public generally will find elsewhere something that will be of interest—the announcement of our popular hostess, Mrs. S. E. Drake.

SCHOOL.—The term of school at Milton District, Camp Independence, will close next week, and in a week thereafter Mr. Crough will begin a new six months term at this place.

BARLEY.—Two of Frank Shaw's twenty-mule four-wagon trains from Mohave, unloaded barley at Bell's mill during the week, for grinding, and returned southward.

YGNACIO.—A force of men has been placed on the Ygnacio mine, Cerro Gordo, under direction of Mr. W. S. Woodhull, with orders to extract 200 tons of ore.

COURT.—The Superior Court will convene next Monday—the principal business on hand being the case of Charles Baker, charged with highway robbery.

LEGAL BLANKS.—The attention of Attorneys, Justices and others is invited to the advertisement elsewhere announcing legal blanks for sale.

PREACHING.—Rev. F. M. Willis will hold services in this place tomorrow evening at the usual hour.

BABBITTING.—See advertisement of a lot of very superior Babbitt-metal, for sale at this office.

LETTER FROM MR. WASSON.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 13.

MESSRS. EDITORS—The twenty-fourth Legislative wave has passed and the State still survives. We are now passing through a cold wave, sympathetic, perhaps, with the series of Eastern blizzards and blockades prevailing at this time. In meantime, if we are to have an extra session, the average legislator can "cool off," as the Governor proposed, to some purpose. It is generally believed that such an event will take place, and that the date will be April 4th, just one month subsequent to the day we marched forth this month.

Well, you should have been present the last day or two of that immortal session. Members called each other liars and slapped each others' faces in open session, and were ready for any sort of a disturbance one might name. And looking back over the political disturbances and upheavals of the past three or more years, and what more in reason, with human nature constituted as it is, could be reasonably expected? It was conceived in infamy, born in insanity and assassination, and is continued in idiocy and apathy unparalleled. And the end is not yet.

The long and short of the New Confusion is just this, and no amount of preaching, praying or philosophizing can put any other satisfactory construction upon it at all: The adoption of the Constitution involved the creation of at least half a dozen additional Constitutions or organic laws, each and all more difficult to formulate than the original document. These so-called "general laws," all of which have yet to be framed, if ever, are much more troublesome to harmonize with the main organic law than it was for a set of men to get together and say to succeeding bodies of men "you shall" do so-and-so, without ever stopping to think how or when it could or can be done, if ever. The county government, municipal government, taxation and revenue, roads and highways, etc., I am afraid in a State of this kind can never be, in a general way, practical. If California were like Iowa, Illinois, Texas, Kansas, etc., mostly level as a billiard table, possessing the same sort of climate throughout each respectively, and given up to a very few industries, it would be well enough. California is not such a community and never can be. I do not know what the Governor intends to include in his list of subjects for an extra session, but as sure as fate if he mentions any one I have just alluded to, the extra session will blend i to the one for 1883, unless members get worn out and go home. If he confines it to appropriation of money to carry on the State government as it now stands; to apportioning the State under the new census into new Senate and Assembly districts, if not Congressional, the extra session may be short. But even the question of apportionment may hold the two parties in interest all Summer, for it was on that point the whole question of an extra session hinged. The bill to repeal the debris act was a fire brand during the entire session, of course, but it only played second fiddle to the political case proper. The repeal act took its place on the files in regular order and remained there. It was the struggle to get it up out of order that caused the great waste of time. That is all there is of that. I see the would-be Congressmen (chiefs of the "repealers" in Senate and Assembly) have petioned to the Supreme Court to put the act of last Winter on trial, and have been granted a hearing by Judge Morrison, on the 18th instant. I hope that august body will turn the crank of their brain-mill right along, and have an end of it, one way or the other, accordingly. If the act is rendered void, then farewell to the upper Sacramento Valley, so far as any State relief is concerned; and I would bet anything that the Federal Government will never consent to appropriating $1 to building dams in the cañons of the Sierra Nevadas, whether the farmers and miners concerned lose all, and the business of thousands upon thousands of the people, the work of thirty years, drags and goes to the dogs. The Washington government may assist in dredging rivers and harbors, by driblets, and there an end. It is a sad thing when a part in this way can be greater than the whole, and through malice, selfishness and what not. Southern California is not as great by any means as the northern part of the State. Neither is San Francisco greater than both sections, except in brute, bullying force and fraud. Leading journals here, the placards of the railroad, are doing more to help the ruination of the navigable streams than everything else combined. There are many unwritten chapters concerning the mainsprings and secret springs governing the workings of the last Legislature. Who will be the historian? Not the average would-be leading newspaper—not much. The work of that important power for good or evil is to cover its own tracks. Who will be the next Denis Kearney? There is a rich field for the exercise of all his faculties political. The growl of the Granger is deep and sore; the curse of the middle-class taxpayer is loud and execrating, as the Assessor makes his inquisitorial rounds. The only party to the contract that is not only harassed but able to strike back and hold the fort is the wealthy individuals and corporations. They can hide away their stocks, bonds, etc., and let further enterprise in California take care of itself. They can go to Mexico, or the Southern Territories, and they are going and will keep going until this political insanity goes plum to seed and dies of sheer exhaustion.

Without speculation there is no progress. Progress in every condition of life and affairs is speculative per se. With all its gains and losses to individuals, the Comstock has been the incentive to activity in every department of affairs for twenty years, and nothing but a deep, big development in said lode, and that soon, will prevent San Francisco from practically standing still for at least ten years to come, and the census of 1890 will prove it.

The extensive railroad system spreading over all the south country, as far as the Isthmus of Darien, is creating as much excitement, is as distracting to the people of all parts of the Union as was the discovery of gold hereaways in 1849. Is it not easy then to see the effect that will have upon the average mind of the people of this State and Coast, both old and young? It is in the air. California was one day considered the poorest part of Mexico. Then why not capture and hold the mother country itself? That is just what is doing, and that is why California must take a back seat and wait for a new generation and new order of industrial enterprise, accompanied by some contentment.

I will stop in this city (330 Pine street) until the question of an extra session is settled one way or another. So long as there is a show to get anything for Mono and Inyo, at Sacramento, I will stand in, but the outlook is dubious. It will be worse than being buried alive to have to remain in that sickly Sacramento during the hot weather. With me, as well as many other members, it is a case of quinine now, and has been for several weeks past. The water came up all around the Capitol, and when the weather turned warm it fairly stunk. It stinks enough during the best of seasons.

The Death of Louis Sherrer.

We, last week, published a brief telegraphic dispatch announcing the accidental shooting and death of Louis Sherrer at Phœnix, Arizona. As the unfortunate boy formerly resided here, where near relatives and many friends and former playmates still reside, and most deeply mourn his sad fate, the following extracts from the Phœnix papers of the 8th instant will be read by all with melancholy interest, and in profound sympathy with the great grief of all those to whom this most promising lad was inexpressibly dear, more especially his mother, Mrs. E. Robinson, of this place:

Louis Sherrer, who was accidentally shot by Willie La Bar on Saturday last, died yesterday at 6 P. M. Just before his death he appeared to be greatly improved, and desired that he be allowed to read, but this seeming improvement was but the forerunner of fast approaching dissolution. His funeral took place this afternoon from the residence of Dr. Thibodo, and proceeded from that place to the Center Street church, where Rev. Wm. Meyer read the funeral services and Prof. Frambes delivered an eulogy on the many fine qualities of heart and mind which had distinguished the deceased. From the church the funeral cortege proceeded * to the graveyard, the school companions and youthful friends of the dead boy acting as a mourn ful escort, in company with the Odd Fellows. The funeral was probably the largest ever witnessed in Phœnix. Mr. Sherrer in his loss of so promising a son has suffered a great bereavement. —Gazette.

The funeral of Louis Sherrer was attended by the largest concourse of citizens ever known in Phœnix, including the members of the Odd Fellows as a body. The public schools were closed, and the scholars formed in procession and accompanied the remains to the grave. A touching song was rendered by the class of which he was a member.

Louis was one of the brightest boys of Phœnix, universally beloved, and his death has cast a gloom over the entire community. Though but a lad of but a dozen years, he has shown tact and wisdom far in advance of his years. In his father's business he has shown a shrewdness seldom seen in young boys. His entire life has been one worthy of emulation by all our boys.—Herald.

Garden Valley Lodge, No. 1, I. O. G. T., met and adopted a preamble and resolutions of condolence, from which we need copy but the following:

Resolved, That we, as a Lodge, tender to Brother and Sister Sherrer our heartfelt sympathy and condolence in their hour of affliction and bereavement, and hope that in their great sorrow they can put their trust in Him who doeth all things well, knowing that it was His will that they should suffer.

The Bishop Creek Church Concert and Festival.

MESSRS. EDITORS—The concert and festival held for the benefit of the new church at Bishop Creek, on the evening of the 15th instant, was one of the most pleasing entertainments that the good people of that place have ever gotten up. The attendance was simply immense; every foot of room was taken, and several went away unable to obtain admission. We hear only commendation for the manner in which the programme was carried out—in fact, too much credit cannot be given the young people of Bishop for the perseverance and talent displayed in performing their several parts. Special mention ought to be made of so many that I dare not open the list; I should not be able to close it before the space allotted me should be taken up.

The thanks of the public are due Mr. Jackson for his kindness in training many of the singers, and his able manner of conducting the greater part of the musical exercises, and to Mr. and Mrs. Glenn for several musical duets, which were very fine, and for assistance rendered to singers.

The supper, ice cream and candies were served out in the best possible manner under the circumstances. The receipts, above expenses, amounted to $120.

Your correspondent was greatly pleased by the kindly co-operation of the people of Bishop in helping the young folks on in their interesting work, and also for their unbounded hospitality, which will remain a bright memory all through my life.

EMMA M. WILLIS.

Independence, March 19th, 1881.

THE inhabitants of Metallic City now feel that they are as many sixes as Candelaria is sevens. The Postoffice Department at Washington has granted the place a full charter and established an office there. The name is Metallic not Metallic City, however much its people may be chagrined at the curtailing of their large sounding name. Mr. R. T. Pierce is the newly appointed postmaster, while Joe Pinschower, the affable and plesant spoken Joe, so well known to all, will officiate in the capacity of deputy. No doubt the new office will prove of great convenience to all living there and in the vicinity.—True Fissure.

WAR AMONG THE MINERS—BLOOD SPILLED.

A press dispatch from Battle Mountain, Nevada, of the 11th instant says:

"The trouble between the Miners' Union and the non-Union men at Lewis came to a head yesterday. Before the Union was formed at Lewis wages were cut from $3 50 to $3 and all the mines were shut down. On Monday fifty-seven miners petitioned the Miners' Union to allow them to go to work at the old rates, $3 50, but, no answer coming to the petition, Bothwell, Superintendent of the Starr & Grove mine, concluded to put men at work at the old rate, and at 2 o'clock P. M., yesterday, thirty-five men started from the lower town to the mine. The constable and two others went ahead as a committee, and were met in the cañon near the mine by the Miners Union, who asked where they were going. The answer was returned:

"We have waited long enough for an answer to the petition and are now going to put on a force at $3 50."

The Union men replied they could not go unless $4 was paid, unless they were "better men than they were," and advised the miners to return to the lower town. The Constable had pistols shoved in his face and was told to leave, and the miners all returned to town.

Afterwards Hannah, a Union man, and William Edwards, who had withdrawn from the Union, met in the mill. Hannah accused Edwards of being a traitor. Edwards said, "We might as well settle it now," and pulled a pistol, but Hannah shot him twice. He cannot live. At the same time Beasley, a Union man, drew a pistol and used the same words to Edwards. Coyne, a non Union man, took the side of Edwards. Beasley fired five times. Coyne returned the fire, and during the fight both men were struck.

Bothwell telegraphed to Deputy Sheriff Dunlap for help and arms, and at 8 o'clock last night a posse went to Lewis on a special engine. On arriving they found all quiet, and all returned this morning but Dunlap. The Miners' Union will hold the Starr & Grove mine, and are determined not to let anyone go to work for less than $4 per day.

It is rumored that the Union men expect reinforcements soon, and the end of the trouble is not yet reached. Only twenty-one Union men refused to allow the miners to work for $3 50, but these twenty-one are determined men. During the trouble no property was damaged or destroyed, but both mills and all the mines are shut down. Hannah gave himself up and is in jail here."

"I HAVE no faith in this camp," remarked a Bodie belle last evening. "Why is that?" asked her fair companion, biting off a large piece of gingerbread. "Because I have had two or three Superintendents on the string for a long time and none of them have made a proposal of marriage." The only thing which relieved the monotony for the next five minutes was the clock striking nine.

What the Comstock Wants.

What the Comstock lode now wants is a head—a general director or superintendent, who shall have charge of all the mines within a certain radius north and south of the main tunnel. It matters little whether this is secured by the mines consolidating and getting control of the tunnel property, or the tunnel property securing the ownership of the mines. It is quite evident that the only salvation of the Comstock mines is through the tunnel. Most of them are working at depths where nothing but the tunnel will make it possible to continue work much longer. There may be no hope for them long with the tunnel to help them out; there certainly would not be without that enterprise, even were more pay ore to be discovered. The Tunnel Company, therefore, hold the key to the situation, and yet the position is useless without the ore. The revenue must come from the amount of ore raised. Last year there was a little over 100,000 tons raised. As nearly all this was less than $40 rock, the income of the company was only $1 per ton. This is only one-half of one per cent. per annum on the capital. It is feared that there will not be 100,000 tons of ore raised this year. But that will depend altogether on circumstances The consolidatiou of the company appears to be about the best thing that could happen under the existing condition of things. Such an arrangemeut would result in uniformity in operations, and an intelligent scale of salaries and a faithful working of the ores.—[Virginia City Chronicle.

A SANTA FE correspondent tells this: Drinking saloons of every degree are very abundant in Santa Fe. I admired the truthfulness of one sign over the door of one grogshop kept in a forbidding-looking old adobe building nearly opposite the fandango. An old fashioned perforated tin lantern hangs upon a rude bracket, and in the night throws a dim and fitful light upon a strip of white muslin on which is inscribed in large letters: "Nose Paint."

A WESTERN newspaper publishes the following: "Wanted a correspondent, I am 25 years old have one hundred and sixty 160 ackars of Kansas land worth 1500 dolars tolaberl fair looking comin school educatoon eny lady fairly educated will oblige me by righting I will send my PhotograPh by return male. William lemons."

IN the Jupiter vs. Bodie mining suit, just concluded in San Francisco, a model of both mines was on exhibition in the court-room, as also duplicate miniature underground workings of the mines, the drifts and crosscuts being skillfully shown. Surmounting the workings are small buildings representing the hoisting works.

THE new workings in the Belcher are not entirely to search for low-grade ores. They are prospecting to open the new ground south and west of the shaft on the 520 level, where lies a portion of the back ledge never yet explored. There are reasonable hopes of success in the venture.

A PIECE of news from the Comstock is the announcement of the filing of the agreement between the Overman, Caledonia, Belcher Crown Point and Seg. Belcher Mining Cos., dated April 30, 1879, by which the companies engage to sink the Forman shaft to the depth of 4,250 feet.

ALL the men in an entire county in Minnesota turned out in a wolf-hunt, the other day. The result was thirty-six dog fights and the capture of a fellow who had run away from his wife.

New Remedy for Pruritus.

Physicans are often sorely puzzled to give relief to the symptom of itching which so frequently forms a prominent feature in certain skin diseases, and the most varied local measures are often used with the result of aggravating the local irritation. The list of internal remedies used for allaying this distressing condition is a limited one, and from it chloral and bromide of potassium stand out almost alone; but the objections to the continued use of these are too obvious to require mention. In searching for a vegetable neurotic which would probably have the desired effect, Dr. L. D. Burkley says, in the New York Medical Journal, that he concluded that gelsemium, from the relief that it affords in certain cases of neuralgia, etc., might possibly act as a nervous sedative to the skin. This, on experiment, turned out to be true, and now, after prescribing it with considerable success for two or three years, mainly on adults suffering from eczema, he feels prepared to advise it as an adjuvant for the relief of itching in certain cases. He has used the tincture of the drug only, giving it in ten drop doses to begin with, and, when no relief was obtained, repeating the remedy in twelve or fifteen drop doses at intervals of half an hour, until results were obtained or until a drachm or so has been taken in two hours.—Scientific American.

Over 10,000 young criminals are turned annually into the streets out of prison, and more than 3,000 are hopeless vagabonds.

"TO POUR oil on the troubled waters," is a proverbial expression signifying to restore peace and harmony where strife and passion have prevailed. It is founded on a popular belief that oil will instantly smooth the surface of the roughest sea. This belief, however, is erroneous, as experiments made in France in 1844 by a scientific commission, appointed for the purpose, satisfactorily established. Notwithstanding this, a sea captain recently claimed to have used oil with success.

FIFTY years hence there will be an abundance of trees at the West. Agriculturists are rapidly planting them, and the railroads are planting hundreds of acres. A Boston capitalist has engaged a raiser of forest seedlings to plow a large area in Kansas, and plant 2,720 trees to the acre, cultivating them until they shade the ground, when the plantation will be delivered to the owner. This will take about ten years.

STATISTICS show that only one man in twenty pays a bill on sight. Even if they have the cash in their pockets, "Call again" is a national watchword.—[Hawkeye.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

THIS HONEY WAS REMOVED FROM THE comb by centrifugal force, with a machine made for the purpose. It is therefore virtually the same as honey in the comb, only you don't have to eat the bees wax, which is indigestible and therefore disagrees with many persons. When first extracted the honey is liquid, but nearly all pure honey will candy or granulate in course of time, especially if exposed to the cold. Putting the cans in hot water for a short time will bring the honey to its fluid state without injury.

This Honey is put up in 10 pound cans, with patented screw tops, which renders it convenient for family use, and especially for the mines, to which it may be packed, even upside down without leakage. A neat label on each can gives full directions.

Price, $1 50 per can, or 12½ cents per lb at the Apiary, if customers furnish their own receptacle. For sale at Harris & Rhine's, Independence, and at the Apiary, at Jacob Vagt's place, Camp Independence.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Allgemeine Deutsche Unterstuetzungs Gesellschaft.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 28 1880.

Messrs. Harris & Rhine, Independence, Cal.:

DEAR SIRS—The undersigned, President of the German Benevolent Society, begs leave to call your attention to this truly benevolent institution, founded in the early days of California, and being now in the 27th year of its existence. The Society was formed to carry out three objects viz.: to assist poor and worthy or deserving people by support, to find employment for those out of work, and to cure those who are stricken down with sickness For the latter purpose the Society owns a magnificent Hospital, surrounded by extensive grounds, where all patients are under the charge of excellent physicians and a consulting board of the most eminent medical talent of this city. The Society has expended for hospital and grounds the sum of $188,895.

The object of this communication is to propose to you to act as agent for this Society, either personally or through one of your employees suited for such position, for the purpose of enlisting new members.

The monthly fee is only one dollar and the initiation fee on becoming a member two dollars. Only healthy persons can become members, and only Germans or those who speak that language also their wives and children. Any member who meets with sickness is treated in the hospital without any expense to him until he has been restored to health. All persons who are not members, or can not become such, not speaking the German language, are admitted for medical treatment in the hospital at as low terms as it is possible to make them.

In this city we have about 3,000 members, but throughout the interior only about 300 It is our aim to increase the number of members throughout the State to make the hospital as much as possible self-sustaining, to enable us to extend the charitable department in this benevolent institution For the trifling sum of one dollar per month members have the best aid and care in the German Hospital.

Frequently sick people in the country are crippled for life by false treatment from incompetent doctors, or even brought to a premature death. Only too late do they find out that if they had become members they would have been restored to health, and their earnings of years would not have gone into the pockets of inexperienced doctors, as the hospital employs only the best physicians If there are no earnings, the employers and the friends of the sick are generally called upon to pay for his support. All this can be avoided, if the employers would vigorously enforce the rule, now introduced in most of San Francisco's establishments, that every man employed should belong to a relief society in order that in case of sickness he might be well cared for and not be reduced to the rather humiliating necessity of asking aid from the purses of his employer and his friends.

Persons of all nations at the age of 50 years or over are admitted as pensioners for life by paying a certain sum to be agreed upon to the society. They receive a home at the hospital, first-class board, washing and attendance in in case of sickness, free of any expense

To enable Germans and others who do not know of the existence of this institution, neither of the hospital nor its great advantages, to become members I have addressed you the above, and hope that you will cheerfully accept the agency and do all in your power to further the interests of this society by enlisting new members and recommending our hospital to those who may be compelled to seek medical aid.

Your Obedient Servant
JULIUS BAUMANN,
President G G B S.

How the French Workman Lives.

The French laborer probably gets more for his wages than any other. His food is cheaper and more nourishing. His bouillon is the liquid essence of beef at a penny per bowl. His bread at the restaurant is thrown in without any charge, and is the best bread in the world. His hot coffee and milk is peddled about the streets in the morning at a sou per cup. It is coffee, not slops. His half bottle of claret is thrown in at a meal costing twelve cents. For a few cents he may enjoy an evening's amusement at one of the many minor theaters, with his coffee free. Sixpence pays for a nicely cushioned seat at the theater. No gallery gods, no peanuts, pipe, smoke, drunkenness, yelling, or howling. The Jardin des Plantes, the vast galleries and museums of the Louver, Hotel Cluny, palace of the Luxembourg and Versailles, are free for him to enter. Art and science hold out to him their choicest treasures at small cost, or no cost at all. French economy and frugality do not mean that constant retrenchment and self denial which would deprive life of everything which makes it worth living for. Economy in Franne, more than in any other country, means a utilization of what America throws away, but it does not mean a pinching process of reducing life to a barren existence of work and bread and water.

THE WAY TO REST.—To understand this is of more importance than to know how to work. The latter can be learned easily; the former it takes years to learn, and some people never learn the art of resting. It is simply a change of scenes and activities. Loafing may not be resting. Sitting down for days with nothing to do, is not restful. A change is needed to bring into play a different set of faculties and turn the life into a new channel. The man who works hard finds his best rest in playing hard. The man who is burdened with care finds relief in something that is active, yet free from responsibility. Above all keep good natured and don't abuse your best friend, the stomach.

MACON, Georgia, is considerably exercised about a bull that has taken possession of a vacant lot near a school house, and makes the lives of the children a burden to them. Macon has a clause in its city laws prohibiting cows from roaming the streets, but nothing is said about bulls. Hence these steers. The city fathers are gravely debating whether the bull can be abated on the ground that he is a nuisance.

UNDER the new land bill, any person authorized to take up public lands can take up 650 acres of agricultural or grazing lands, whenever surveyed, even in the railroad grant, by paying $1 25 per acre.

Small Trees.

Nurserymen usually describe trees on their catalogues as "second class," "medium," "first class," and "extra." The difference in these classes is principally, if not wholly, in the size and height of the trees; and as most farmers desire the best, they suppose that the large "extra" trees merit that description, and hence order them. The fact is, however, that a small tree will grow faster and (if a fruit tree) come into bearing condition sooner than a large one; and, as the "New England Homestead" states, in half a dozen years the tree that was small when planted will be larger and finer than the other. The larger the tree, the larger the roots which it has, and the larger the roots the less fibers there will be upon them. A tree that has plenty of fibrous roots will grow readily if proper care is used in transportation; but no amount of skill can coax a tree to live and flourish which is destitute of these little fibers. The roots of large trees are always more or less mutilated in the process of taking up, while small trees sustain little injury from this source. Dealers in trees assert that experienced men buy small, thrifty trees, while those who are just starting are anxious for the largest to be had. Those who are to set trees the coming season will do well to learn from the experience of those who, at considerable loss to themselves, have demonstrated that small trees are the ones to buy.

EX-SENATOR Tom Fowler of Visalia, has brought suit against Walter N. Hawley, in San Francisco, to compell him to render an account as trustee of plaintiff's property. Plaintiff conveyed to defendant a large amount of real and personal property, aggregating in value $1,871,600, in trust for the payment of plaintiff's debts, and other purposes. The terms of the trust have not, it appears, been carried out, hence the suit to recover the property, with damages, and for the removal of the trustee.

"JUDGE," said a Western lawyer, "isn't e-q-u-i the way to spell equinomical?" "I think so," said the Judge, "but I'll look it up in Webster's dictionary." He fumbled over the pages for five minutes, and then said in a heat: "Well, I've been a Webster man and voted for him for President, but any man that will write a dictionary and leave out such a common word as equinomical can't have my vote any more."

SHE was young and beautiful; he was old and ugly. He took her hand and squeezed it tenderly, and then she put out her tongue at him. Then he laid his hand gently on her breast. She was 18 and he 70, but still it was an affection of the heart. Oh, yes, it was. Her heart was affected, and he was a doctor, trying to see how far the mischief had gone.—[London Referee.

DIAMOND finds in South Africa are said to be increasing. Kimberly, the seat of Government in Griqualand West, and headquarters of the diamond region, had not a hut seven years ago, but now numbers 16,000 people. As the wooden shanties have given place to more substantial buildings, it has been found that Kimberly itself has been built on a rich diamond field.

ESMERALDA county, Nevada, and Mono and Inyo counties, California, embrace within their limits the most promising mineral region within the United States, and now seem destined within the next eight or ten years to have a population of from 80,000 to 100,000 people, and to add from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 annually to the wealth of the world.—[Bodie Free Press.

IN Carson Valley and Ttruckee Meadows the ranchmen are doing their work in fear and trembling. The plow is turning up myriads of grasshopper eggs. It is a discouraging outlook, and some of the farmers are seriously considering the propriety of putting in no crops this season.

THE four-horse stock will be taken off the Virginia line and two-horse stock put on instead. A buckboard will be run to carry the mails and meet the travel demands between way stations.—[Aurora Herald.

How They Manage It.

The police authorities say that it would surprise the uninitiated to know to what strange devices some of the opium smokers of this city resort to got an opportunity to "hit the pipe," without laying themselves liable to be suspected of their infatuation. In several instances the slaves of this fearful vice have purchased full suits of Chinese apparel, including wigs with a queue attached, for the purpose of disguising themselves so that they would be taken for Chinamen when entering or coming out of an opium den. Others have rented rooms for the sole purpose of practicing the vice undisturbed. Only recently a young man and woman unmarried, occupied a room in the frame building opposite the Mint, for no other purpose than to smoke opium. However, when the owner of the building ascertained to what vile uses the apartment was put, he made the occupants vacate it. The police decline to give publicity to all the information in their possession regarding the peculiar modes the opium smokers pursue to gratify their appetites unmolested and without detection. But before long a raid will be made among the persons addicted to this frightful vice, resulting in the arrest of all, male and female, and whether respectably dressed or not, no mercy will be shown to any of the smokers, under the law. It is authentically stated that there are numerous slaves of the pipe in this city, who move in excellent society, but who are not suspected.—[Carson Appeal.

IT has been discovered that grape cuttings inserted in the giant cacti of the Mohave desert make a rapid and sturdy growth, and climb up and rest upon the cactus itself, and bear fruit. Tomatoes, melons and cucumbers can also be grown in the same way. This discovery may work a geart horticultural revolution. If grapes can be grown on the desert without cultivation or irrigation, the raising of grapes can be simplified, cheapened and extended to a wonderful degree, and the desert made to blossom as the rose; and, instead of being a terror and a hint at starvation, become a very land of Beulah. Furthermore, the dry and hot sand would be admirably adapted to the curing of raisins. — [Exchange.

And the horn toads could then be utilized to keep the bugs off the vines!

MEN whose noses are kept to the grindstone keeping extravagant wives in lace will be pleased to know that a Parisian has invented an ingenious machine by which lace can be turned out by the yard and a quality which cannot be distinguished from the hand made article. A recent trial of the machine proved a gratifying success, and lace experts were unable to distinguish between lace made by the machine and lace made by hand.

A RICH strike is reported in the Big Blue mine at Kernville. The company have been working in fairly remunerative rock hitherto, but lately they have struck the old west vein which was formerly worked with such good results, but which was lost several years ago. They have sent to San Francisco for a gang of miners and will prosecute operations on a larger scale.—[Kern County Californian.

A BOMB was found in the pocket of the assassin Rousseaukoff. It was made in a zinc case containing glass tubes, two of which were filled with vitrol and two with Bartholdy srlts. It also contained India-rubber tubes with fulminating mercury, and a box holding nitro-glycerine and pyroxyline, the whole weighing 6¾ pounds.

THE army worm got so far as Boston, when a Miss with an eyeglass called it by its real name and it immediately laid down and died.

THE amount invested in New York city by D. O. Mills, in his recent purchase, is said to have been $1,400,000.

SATURDAY, MARCH 26 1881

THE area of the Russian Empire is 8,531,004 square miles. The population, including the Poles, Finns, Caucasians and Asiatics, is 85,685,945. The area of Russia proper is 1,881,216 miles, and the population 65,704,559. No other country in Europe has as large a territory or as many inhabitants. The late Czar ascended the throne March 2, 1855, after the battles of Balaklava and Inkerman, and in the midst of the siege of Sebastopol. His reign was exactly twenty-six years and eleven days in duration. His father, Nicholas, reigned thirty years (1825–1855,) and his great-uncle, Alexander I., twenty-four years (1801–1825.) There have been but three Czars in Russia in this century. Alexander III., now on the throne, was thirty-six years of age on March 11th, and will, unless he meets an untimely end, live to complete the century in four generations. The last Czar of Russia who met his death at the hands of an assassin previous to the late Emperor was Paul, the son of the famous Catharine (1796-1801.) Spite of the repeated attempts upon the lives of the rulers of Russia, the average length of reigns in that Kingdom has been greater than in most other countries of Europe.

THE Fish Commissioners of Maine have adopted the plan of marking salmon to obtain data with regard to the development and migrations of these fish. Several hundred salmon lately set free in the Penobscot river have been labeled with light metal tags, the number on each being recorded. The Commissioners ask that whoever catches a labeled salmon in any waters of the State will forward to them the fish, for which they will pay an extra price, or else forward the label and whatever they know about the fish that wore it.

POSEY COUNTY, Indiana, claims to have raised the largest cow in the world. Her name is Lady Posey; breed, mixed Durham and Big English. Her measurements are: Greatest height, 5 feet 10 inches; girth, 8 feet 9 inches; length, 10 feet 6 inches, or including tail, 17 feet. Her form is good; and, though not fat, she weighs 3,000 pounds. Her color is red and white, red predominating. Age, six years. Her present owner lives in Stark County, Illinois.

AT Iowa City, Iowa, up to March 21st, a Miss Hattie Deul had gone twenty-five days without food and three years without talking, because of a religious conviction that it is her duty. She is well known, is a sister of Dr. Aylsworth, is a maiden lady of 52 years, highly respected and her case has been examined by the best physicians. She is wasting away. The curious part of the business is that she should have gone so long without talking.

THE late Senator Carpenter, after he had been President pro tem. of the United States Senate, said of Edmunds: "You may put me in the Chair blindfolded and I can tell whether or no Senator Edmunds is in his seat by the character of the legislation that is brought up. If it is known that he will be absent for a few days every bill with a 'job' in it is brought to the front and pushed, whereas if he is present nothing is said about them."

AN examination has taken place at Brussels of the railway employés, in order to test their eyes. More than one-twentieth of them have been found defective, and consequently will be discharged as being unable to fulfill their functions with a sufficient security for travelers.

THE Chileans have proved as great in peace as in war. After the capture of Lima and Callao, instead of subjecting these cities to assault and pillage, as the Peruvians predicted, they have done everything in their power to re-establish law and order.

THE dispatches state that the Chinese treaties have been reported back to the Senate by the Committee on Foreign Relations with a recommendation that they be ratified without amendment. This may be considered equivalent to ratification.

THE newspaper law makes taking a newspaper and then refusing to pay for it a theft, and a New York journal has already commenced criminal prosecution against several persons who have tried to swindle the publishers.

GEO. S. DAVIDSON, who was Lieutenant in Latham's Confederate Battery, which fired the first gun at the battle of Bull Run, died recently at Estellville, Virginia.

SOME of the Arizona papers are exulting over the repeal of the bullion tax law by the Territorial Legislature.

SCHOOL MATTERS.

According to the report of State Superintendent Campbell for 1880-1, we learn that there are 215,978 children in this State entitled to draw school money. In this vast army of embryo citizens and citizenesses, Inyo's share numbers but 405 for this year—a falling off of 73 since 1877; this statement will be a surprise to those persons who think from the number of new babies to be seen every where through the county, especially the upper end, every year, that now we ought to have almost a thousand juveniles in this county able to draw school money.

Up to February 21st, the sum of $1,505,366 66 has been apportioned to the several counties as State school money for the present year. Of this sum, the total to this county was $2,822 85. The per capita is $6 97 per child. The Superintendent had previously estimated that there would be sufficient to allow not less than $7 25 to each child; but owing to the fact that the railroads and all other thieving corporations that had any taxable property, have refused to pay their taxes the delinquent list is unreasonably large; and it is thus made to appear that Stanford has at last got down to robbing the school children—28 cents from each and every one this very year. This is nearly as mean as raising Sunday school collections to buy afghans and warming pans for the little South Sea Islanders.

From such data as we have at hand, we figure out that, in addition to the above $6 97 from the State (which includes all proceeds from poll taxes which heretofore went into the county fund), each census child in the county has, since March of last year, received the benefit of $8 55 school money from the county. The period named includes part of two school years, but, dating from the same month in each, the amount may be taken as very nearly correct for the current school year. This, then, makes a total of $15 52 expended on the education of each census child in the county, besides $737 40 paid in special tax in two districts. Altogether, this looks like quite a liberal allowance for public school purposes, but as it has to be divided among ten schools it is barely sufficient to maintain six months' school in each. The census shows forty children and half a child to each school—quite enough for ordinary teachers to handle, saying nothing about the fraction of a child, which is just that much in excess of the abilities of the best teachers. But the actual average attendance is only about 24 to each school, though the number enrolled may average 30. Could the whole number of children who draw school money be boiled down or concentrated as it were into the 250 say who actually attend there would be just enough to employ six teachers instead of ten, and not less than eight months' terms for each instead of six. But while our population remains so scattered, this concentrating process is hardly practicable. However, the Board of Supervisors and Board of Education might each draw another day's pay in cogitating over it.

The general school law was amended by the late Legislature in several particulars, but we shall at this time only call attention to the following: Section 1593 is amended so that Trustees are to be elected in June instead of May; and Census Marshals must be appointed on or before the 1st of May instead of the 1st of June, and the time in which he may take the census is restricted to the period between the 15th and 31st of May.

THE San Francisco Call has found its natural level again. The great Denis's silly tirades to the sand-lotters are reported at length in its columns. Denis, in his usual chaste style, froths at the mouth like a run-down calf as he recites the wrongs suffered by the honest Sand Lotter here and everywhere, and soars like an over-gorged buzzard when he announces the remedy—"Hang the corporation thieves! Knife every Legislator that don't obey Sand-Lot dictates! Everlasting honor and glory to the king-killers everywhere!" That, mildly stated, is how Denis is now afflicted, and to explain which Bro. Pickering allows him to spread himself over a column or so of the Call. Some day Bro. P. is liable to enunciate one of his celebrated opinions on this very topic—assassination. He will boldly advise Denis to be moderate, and not stir up strife, nor kill Czars and potentates and magnates unless—unless it should appear that they needed killing. In that peculiar way the Call is always decisive, and we can feel quite sure Denis will never go counter to its advice and go to slaying Czars indiscriminately—which is a mighty fortunate thing for the Czars.

THE Bodie Free Press is now gliding along in its fourth volume. In the brief career of two years the Press has made astonishing as well as most deserved advances, and yet, contrary to rule, has not grown the least bit arrogant, nor particularly mean. Long may she glide, and smoothly, ever.

ABOUT BOMBS.

The Los Angeles Express argues at length to prove that the proper road to national progress and prosperity is by slaying the rulers who bar the way. If that is a good way for nations to get along, why isn't it equally as good in individual affairs? There are lots of people who don't progress a bit, but it would hardly be proper for them to go to blowing up money-lenders or other persons who, they might think, barred their progress. But, suppose the use of bombs is confined to politics only, which we are given to understand, is their legitimate sphere. From blowing up tyrannical crowned heads in Europe it is but a step, and not a long one, to serving party leaders in the same way, even in free America. Has not the immortal Denis been unceasingly advocating an identically similar method of righting the alleged unbearable wrongs of the rabbit-brained crew which yelped at his bidding? Has he not, with the invaluable aid of respectable journals as the Express, made many of that crew actually think at times that the wrongs put upon the working classes of this country by its law makers and money kings are almost if not quite as grievous to bear as are those of the ex-serfs of Russia, and the working classes elsewhere in Europe? Is it not a fact that, under such influences, at times not long since past, naught but the cowardly instincts of their leaders prevented that same crew from resorting to fire and sword, guns and bombs, right here in the streets of San Francisco in "Free America," in the desire to right wrongs having no existence in fact? All this is beyond dispute. The mansions on Nob Hill and Crocker's fence were to that crew signs of oppression as conclusive and unbearable as were the despotic acts of the Czar in the eyes of the Nihilists. It was only a difference of conditions standing in the way, and not of teachings, will, or intent that that crew did not make "dead Czars" out of Crocker's fence, those mansions, their owners, and everybody else whom they could overpower. As among that crew are to be found the men who assume to say when a ruler or party leader or other person is a tyrant, obnoxious to freedom and progress, and should be "bombed" out of the way, nothing is more certain than that system will be tried in "Free America" as freely as in Europe whenever the cutthroat doctrines of our esteemed contemporary can command a little more numerous and respectable following. Indeed, free America (quite too free in some particulars) has to-day apparently as many out-spoken assassination clubs and individual advocates as any one country in Europe. It is true most of these, outside of our own State, are looking after European subjects exclusively, or nearly so. But Schwab in New York, our own brave Denis and some others are vehemently advising the application of the system to home tyrants, such as Vanderbilt, Gould, Crocker's fence, old Bones, refractory Legislators, and many others. It is obvious to common sense that if American (or at least Los Angeles) editors and other people of standing uphold the doctrine that bombs are the proper instruments of progress in Europe, the European S(ch)wabs and all such who have escaped to this country will inevitably, at no distant day, consider it equally so in American politics, and in American business affairs. Will not such assassins at heart be their own judges as to what constitutes oppression, and a tyrant, as did he who made the 14th of April, 1865, the blackest day in American history? Are the assassins in Europe or elsewhere proper persons to "work out the inexorable law which enjoins the survival of the fittest?" Cutthroats are not trustworthy judges in matters of that sort.

Bro. Ayres has got off on the wrong foot this time, no doubt through a hurried effort to appease the devil's demands for copy. But suppose he didn't; suppose he and his co-laborer, the brave Denis, should finally succeed in getting their bomb-shell (i. e. bummer) party on deck—as they came near doing a year or two ago—after having successfully blown up numerous "oppressors" and obstructionists to human progress, what then? Answer—Every one knows Denis will permit no rival on his manure pile; pursuant to the principles necessary to human progress, he would certainly proclaim his chief rival to party control an obstructionist, and order a bomb to be exploded under him. Such, at least, would be a legitimate sequence in "human progress" when the way has to be opened by bombs, and which, we are told, is the proper way in Europe if not just yet in "Free America."

THE railroad grant in Sonora was signed on the 21st by President Gonzales. It is made to Samuel Brannan and his associates in the colony enterprise, and extends from Hidalgo City, their location on the Yaqui river, to Guaymas and the Tucson branch of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé.

MESSRS. Jessop & Sons, Brightside Steel Works, Sheffield, have recently cast the largest crucible steel casting yet produced. It is a spur ring 28 feet in diameter, machine-moulded, and cast whole. To cast it 270 pots were used, each pot holding 80 lb. weight of molten steel. When the steel had been poured into the three large ladles, the plugs were removed, and it ran into the mould, the weight when cast being about 10 tons. In its finished state the weight will be about 8½ tons. It is, without doubt, by far the largest crucible cast steel casting of its kind that has ever been produced. Messrs. Jessop & Sons anticipate that this will be the beginning of an important trade with Lancashire mill owners, as they discover how much more durable steel wheels are than the cast iron wheels at present in general use. The firm have previously cast wheels 13 feet and 14 feet in diameter, but to 28 feet was a great leap. Now, however, they are prepared to undertake castings up to 34 feet. The operation of casting occupied 8½ minutes.

THE only platinum worker in the United States is Mr. Joaquin Bishop, of Sugartown, Chester county, Pennsylvania. A short time since the Association of Mining Engineers made an excursion to the works of Mr. Bishop to see his workings of the intractable metal. Mr. Bishop, who gets most of his supply from the Ural Mountains, in Russia, has been working platinum for fifty years. In 1845 he took a premium, but at that time the demand for platinum was so small that it only occupied one day in the month, using the metal principally for rivets to fasten artificial teeth. Before the Engineers, Mr. Bishop melted a piece of platinum with the ease that a plumber melts lead. The intense heat used may be imagined when it is known that a steel file held in the blast burned like a piece of wood. The Russian Government used platinum in its coinage until 1864, when about $2,500,000 worth of platinum coins had been struck.

A CORRESPONDENT of the New York Tribune says: "One fact in the life of the murdered Czar I have not seen mentioned in the newspapers, although I suppose it must be known to many persons. It was told me a few years after our war ended by one of our Ministers, lately returned from St. Petersburg. He said during an official call on Gortschakoff, the Chancellor sent for a book, and showed him an order written by Alexander II's own hand at the very outset of the Southern rebellion. This order was the substance of the sealed instructions sent to the Admiral of the Russian fleet then lying in New York harbor—that if England or France took part favoring the South the Admiral was at once to report to President Lincoln for orders."

THERE is a determined opposition in the Senate to the confirmation of Stanley Matthews as a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. He has the reputation of being quite an able jurist, and in that respect would cast no discredit on that august body. But as he has ever been a corporation attorney, so he will probably ever remain. As corporations have made him pretty much all that he is, he would be a renegade indeed if he did not favor them in return, whether as Judge or attorney. He is not the style of man to stand between the people and the aggressions of the great corporations. It is to be strongly hoped Mr. Mathews may not be withdrawn from his attorneyship.

THE Spaniards have got to throwing bombs, all the same as the Russians. A dispatch from Madrid, March 22, says: "Petards were sprung at 10 o'clock at night, when the streets were much crowded. One explosion near Alcala street caused indescribable confusion, the people running away frantically. Arrests were made. They led to the discovery of a large petard full of powder and glycerine near the church of San Justo. Also a bomb with a fuse attached has been found in front of the Duke of Ossuna's palace. The police are investigating the matter."

THROUGH the aid of Senator Mahone of Virginia, and the casting vote of the Vice President, the Republicans succeeded in organizing the Senate in their own interest, and now the responsibilities of good or bad legislation in both houses, as well as Presidential ministrations, rests with that party, they having control in all. Senator Davis voted with the Democrats in the orginization, making the vote on the floor stand 37 to 37.

THE San Francisco Free Library has, in a few months, increased its membership from 4,500 to 8,000; and, is no doubt, one of the most useful public institutions in the city.

A JURY was obtained on the 16th for the trial of Hunt, the noted Los Angeles murderer, and the case was to begin on the following day.

Coal in Arizona.

A correspondent of the Scientific Press gives the following account of the late coal discovery in Arizona, mentioned in these columns heretofore, and which discovery, if it develops anything near to hopes, will some day cut a big figure in the advancement of our own local interests. This, of course, depends upon the time when we shall have a railroad here, and one that will bring coke and coal at low rates. The correspondent says:

I write to inform you and through you those who are interested or contemplate investments in Arizona, of the latest, and in many respects, the most important discovery yet made in this Territory—that of extensive coal deposits. The location is near Saddle Mountain, 20 miles northeast of the Gila and San Pedro rivers, and on the headwaters of Deer creek. This is 80 miles from this place in nearly a northerly direction, and a shorter distance southeast from Florence. Some two weeks ago David Anderson brought in some specimens, claiming to be of coal, some of which he had used at his mine in sharpening picks and drills. The news was quietly circulated about town but created no very deep impression. However, a party was fitted out to prospect the country about the head of Deer creek. The result of a week's search was the discovery of a much larger body of coal than David Anderson had found. This latter showed croppings, float and shale, in the easterly end of a valley about 12 miles in length, and all the ground in the vicinity with coal on the surface had been occupied when the second party reached the valley. They, however, followed down the same, occasionally finding evidences of the presence of coal, till near the southwestern end of the valley they found hundreds of acres literally covered with coal croppings. Where the waters, rushing down a wide cañon, had cut a wash-out of 20 feet in depth, they found the black walls reaching from the bottom to the top, while the floor of the wash was not still through the deposit. An examination of the location discloses what would appear at a glance to be 30 ledges, all dipping into the hill to the southeast at an angle of 20°, but which are, doubtlesss, only one or two, the surface being marked somewhat from the tall hills on that side. This party, with a few others who joined them, located 1,240 acres. In a few days the valley was full of prospectors making locations, and now nearly the entire valley between the two original discoveries is taken up and occupied.

Specimens from the southwestern discovery were brought in yesterday, and have been tested. It is a fine quality of semi-bituminous coal, generates gas well, and cokes beautifully. It is free from impurities and deleterious matter, and is pronounced by competent judges to be the best quality of coal for this country.

This coal field is not more than 25 miles from the point where the extensive copper smelters are soon to be erected by Mr. W. A. Ballinger, and will supplement the smelting industry southeast of Globe, now bidding fair to be very extensive. A competent engineer estimates the cost of constructing a railroad up Deer creek at $10,000 per mile.

Unquestionably this is a most valuable discovery, and will satisfy a need long and seriously felt in Arizona.

IT was the understanding, when the Railroad Commissioners published a schedule of fares, some four or five weeks ago, that it was to go into operation in fifteen days. The San Francisco Chronicle learns that there is to be further procrastination—that the Commissioners have changed their intention and decided not to put it into operation until they have devised a schedule of freights, when both will be served upon the companies at the same time.

THE arrival of European emigrants at New York will probably continue large for many years to come. This immigration now settles down where it can procure land and first find employment. As a rule, the immigrants have not very much means after paying their expenses from Europe, hence it is a necessity for them to obtain work as soon as possible. By and by immigration will set in toward this Coast.

THE new Czar is said to be putting his father-in-law, the King of Denmark, to a good use. He has caused the arrest of a socialist editor in Copenhagan for insulting Russia. The unfortunate journalist is to be prosecuted for forgetting that "Alexander married my daughter, Dagmar." The relations of Russia and Denmark bid fair to be of the most intimate character.

THE New York Tribune says: It is reported again that the rascal who forged the Morey letter has been hunted down, and that he and his accomplices will be dragged into the sunlight of publicity before long.

THERE are only 20 feet to connect the south lateral drift of the Sutro Tunnel and the north drift in the Yellow Jacket mine. The connection will be made by the Sutro Tunnel people, the Yellow Jacket miners having been withdrawn from work at that particular point.

A DRUNKEN printer leaned up against the Egyptian obelisk, the other night, and struck a match on the stone to light a cigar. A moment later he yelled out to a policeman: "Sling the cap case; Greeley's been writin' some heads for the telegraph column."

THE shooting match between H. L. Childs and Dr. D. H. Robertson resulted in a victory for the former by four points, Mr. Childs scoring 178 and Dr. Robertson 174 points out of a possible 200.—Bodie Free Press.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

SATURDAY, MARCH 26 1881

TRIED AND CONVICTED.—On Thursday last, in the Superior Court, his honor John A. Hannah presiding, was begun the trial of Charles Baker, charged with highway robbery, in having, on the night of the 11th of December last, stopped the stage and rifled W., F. & Co.'s express box. District Attorney Laird conducted the prosecution, and S. P. Moffat, Esq., appointed by the Court, appeared for the defense, assisted by Geo. M. Gill, Esq. Out of a venire of thirty-five a jury, consisting of the following named citizens, was obtained by noon: Benigno Aguirre, C. M. Joslyn, J. Vagt, T. W. Hill, G. A. Walters, John Shepherd, Manly Conkrite, S. D. Woodhull, John A. Lank, Fred. Albers, A. H. Johnson and W. S. Morton. After the formal opening of the case the following witnesses were examined on the part of the prosecution: L. W. Barnaby, C. H. Hollenbeck, Nate Mount, V. Shuman, K. C. Crumley, Mrs. Sarah E. Drake and Isaac Harris. For the defense, K. C. Crumley, Jasper Williams and Luther Burton were put upon the stand and examined, Geo. L. Drake being called by the prosecution in rebuttal. The evidence for the people was purely circumstantial, but was brought out in very detail and sufficed to satisfy the jury of the defendant's guilt, more especially as the defense was unable to prove an alibi. One of the questions asked the jurymen touching their qualifications to act was propounded by the prosecution thus: "Do you entertain such conscientious scruples as would preclude you from bringing in a verdict of guilty upon circumstantial evidence?" This was objected to by the defense, but allowed by the Court and exceptions were taken. This was a hard question to answer, but several were challenged off the jury on the ground that they would not convict on such evidence, the challenge being sustained by the Court and excepted to by the defendant's counsel. One juryman, upon being interrogated as to whether or not he had read an account of the robbery in THE INYO INDEPENDENT, etc., had the courage to admit that he was a subscriber thereof [and annually pays for the same in turkies], and in his inimitable way proceeded to state the matter thus: "I sometimes read the spicy editorials; don't go much on the 'bee business,' though; the rest I know by heart!" With a copy of the paper in hand, this might have afforded counsel a fine opportunity for extended cross-examination as to the juryman's power of memory; however, it was high testimony in favor of our regular advertisers, as showing that their announcements are read and understood. The evidence in the trial was not reduced to writing, hence we are unable to present even a synopsis of the facts adduced. About 9:40 o'clock last evening, after twice calling the Court for instructions as to the form of their verdict, the jury returned the following: "In the case of the People of the State of California and County of Inyo vs. Charles Baker. We, the jury, find the defendant guilty as charged on information, and we recommend him to the mercy of the Court." The prisoner was ordered to appear for judgment and sentence at 10 o'clock on Tuesday next. A motion will be made by his counsel for a new trial, on the ground of error and the discovery of new and material evidence.

BROKE DOWN.—A chandelier in the Headquarters saloon fell with a crash upon the billiard table, about 12 o'clock last night, smashing the lamps and scattering the burning coal oil promiscuously. By some lively work the flames were smothered with blankets, the damages amounting to about $50. Had the lamps fallen upon the floor we doubt not that the town would have been in sack cloth and ashes this morning, with our people generally cussing themselves for not having provided a fire engine or water pipes and hose.

MINING SUIT.—It is stated on pretty good authority that the owners of the old Santa Maria mine, mostly residents of New York, are about to bring a suit against Belshaw, Judson and others, for restitution and heavy damages. Trespass upon Santa Maria ore bodies by the Union Con. Company of Cerro Gordo will doubtless form the basis of the matter.

SALINE DISTRICT.—Supt. Crittenden passed through Big Pine yesterday on his way to the new mines in Saline District. The Company has some 16 men employed, and have already attained a depth of 60 feet on one of the principal mines. The showing is said to be splendid, the ledge increasing in strength and richness all the way down.

THE KEELER MILL.—Supt. Holt informs us that he will close down the new mill on the lake for about a week, in order to get ore ahead. In the meantime he will fit up another 5-stamp battery. The last bars of bullion were of remarkable fineness—a fact showing well for the mill and of quite important advantage to the company.

FROM BODIE.—Geo. M. Gill Esq., arrived from Bodie on Wednesday, and has been assistant counsel in the defense of Baker, whose trial is reported elsewhere in this issue. George, we understand, proposes to locate for a time at Bishop Creek, in the practice of his profession.

SMALL BALANCE.—Sheriff Smith has succeded in collecting all the delinquent taxes down to $1,733, which, save once, is the closest collection in ten years.

WHAT?—Will some one inform us what has happened to the Mammoth City Herald, that we haven't seen it for lo these many weeks?

A CHANGE.—We hear that ex-Sheriff J. J. Moore is about purchasing the merchandising business of D. P. Macarter, at Big Pine.

GOLD-MINE SOLD.—The new gold mine, situated opposite from Bishop Creek, in the foot-hills of the Inyo range, has been sold by Hypolite Galeron and partners to Bodie parties for the sum of $15,000, cash. The mine has only been opened some 25 feet in depth, but shows a strong, 5-foot ledge of rich gold ore. We regard this transaction of the greatest importance, in its bearing upon the development of the numberless mines of that section of the great range. Give us a regular Bodie excitement—a telegraph, and all that.

DEPARTED.—On Tuesday last Miss Mamie Parker departed for her home, at Knight's Ferry. The young lady has spent several weeks here visiting "Uncle" Abe Parker, her uncle, and during the time has made many warm friends who sincerely regret her departure.

BULLION.—Two bars of fine silver were shipped from the Owens Lake M. & M. Company mill, one on the 14th and the other on the 21st instant—worth about $800 each. Another of like value will be ready for shipment to-day. Messrs. Holt and Keeler are doing well.

COME ON!—Spring has come at last. And now let all the Spring poets hasten to send in their idiotical effusions in relation thereto. Something after the style of the "Beautiful Snow" (or Spring) will do, and save the trouble of overhauling the waste basket. Time!

SCHOOL.—The school in this place, Mr. Daniel Crough, teacher, begins on Monday next, and not a week from that day, as might have been inferred from our mention of the same fact last week.

TERMS of peace have been arranged between England and the Boers. The conditions are that all arms, munitions and other property captured by either side during the hostilities should be restored; that Transvaal shall be granted independence, subject to the conditions to be hereafter settled by the Royal Commission, and that the Boer Goverment shall commence after the Commission shall have made its report. Meanwhile, British garrisons are to remain in the Transvaal without in any way interfering with local affairs. The Boer forces will disperse forthwith, and Captain Elliott's murderer is to be delivered up to justice. In short, the Boers are to enjoy complete self goverment.

The Kalloch case it is presumed was given to the jury Tuesday evening last, when Marshall, of the prosecution, was to close his argument. As shown by arguments of counsel the strength of case is on the side of the prosecution. Though, through the sympathy for the young defendant, and peculiar aggravations under which he acted, a hung jury or verdict of an acquittal is not at all improbable.

THE effect of alloying certain metals with certain other metals is quite remarkable. The presence of one-twentieth of one per cent of lead in gold will render a bar an inch thick so brittle that it may be readily broken by a slight rap with a hammer.

LONDON vagrants have a keen eye for business. Their latest dodge is to make holes in the ice and get a fee for rescuing unfortunates from drowning.

A TUCSON, Arizona, dispatch of the 20th says: "The first train from California over the Southern overland passed through here this morning and arrived at Deming Junction this evening on schedule time. The train was greeted at the depot by quite a number of citizens, including Gov. Fremont and Gen. Carr and staff from Camp Hamill. There were forty through passengers on the train, and the number was increased on leaving here. The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe train from Kansas City arrived at Deming Junction six hours behind time, and will not arrive here till midnight, much to the disappointment of a large concourse of people, who gathered at the depot at 6 o'clock this evening to welcome the arrival of the first train from the East. There are thirty-three persons on the train, many of whom will stop over at points along the route between here and San Francisco."

THE New York Herald says, editorially: If the President will follow up the programme he has marked out on the threshold of his administration in reference to polygamy, he will have the support of all men, irrespective of party, whose support and good will are worth having. We have been fooling and playing with this Mormon leprosy too long. It is idle to expect that it can be destroyed by the civilizing forces of the railroad, telegraph and newspaper, which a few years ago were counted upon so strongly for its extinction. It must be taken hold of by the strong arm of the law, and the sooner it is done the better.

CARSON AND COLORADO.—The track o the Carson and Colorado Railroad is now laid about seven miles down the east side of Walker Lake. It is being advanced at about the rate of one and a quarter miles per day. When the road reaches Hawthorn track-laying will be suspended for some thirty days, to give the company time in which to erect the buildings they will require at that point.—Virginia Enterprise, March 20.

JUDGE R. L. PETERSON did not become so wealthy in the office of Justice of the Peace as to retire from business altogether, and still attends to such little matters as come in his way as Notary Public and conveyancer, at the law office of T. A. Stephens.—Bodie Free Press.

The Electric Lighting of Mines.

At one of the sessions of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, in Philadelphia, the Edison system of electric lighting, as applied to mining, was described by Mr. A. O. Moses. The method adopted is very simple. Wires run direct from the dynamo-electric machines to the different workings, supplying light to the shaft on their way. Each lamp may, if desired, be immersed in water, or may be protected from fracture by a coarse wire screen; the connections can all be made under water, and thus lamps may be put in or out of circuit without the slightest danger from the electric spark.

Far too much importance, the speaker thought, has been attached to the consequences that may arise from leading wires into mines for conveying electricity, notably by such high authority as Mr. Preece, the English telegraph engineer, but his deductions are not sustained by facts.

One of the most important advantages of the electric light in coal mines is in obviating the necessity of hermetically sealing up old or temporarily abandoned workings. Another is their prompt availability at times when light is of the most vital importance, when many lives may be in jeopardy after explosions, and dangers are multiplied on every hand, when everything depends upon immediate and vigorous action; then the weakness of all lamps that require to be fed with air asserts itself.—Scientific American.

HEAVY STAMPS.—Thos. D. Sargent, writing to the London Mining Journal, expresses the opinion that in most instances the stamps used on auriferous quartz are altogether too heavy; so heavy that much of the gold is beaten out into lamina so thin that they are floated away by the water, which is also used to excess. Wonder if it is not the weight of the 800-pound stamps of the May Lundy mill in Homer district that renders it so difficult to amalgamate all the gold and causes thin scales of the precious metal to escape.—Bodie Free Press.

THERE are only eight hoisting works on the Comstock lode that are not shut down, and some of them are only nominally open—the New York mine for instance, which works but three men on a shift.

THE jury in the case of the Los Angeles murderer, Hunt, report a verdict of murder in the first degree, with imprisonment for life.

Some Absurdities.

Every man's house is his castle, but every man can't be king of Ashantee.

"I'll take snap judgment," as the turtle remarked when a barefooted boy stepped on him.

The Elmira "Advertiser" can't help but think that if G. Washington had lied a little—just a little—he would have lived longer, and enjoyed better health.

There was a school missus in Salem,
Her troubles she'd often bewail 'em,
Because the big boys
In the school made a noise,
And she was too small for to whale 'em.

A Minnesota family was snowed in and lived for thirteen days on frozen apples and popcorn, and not one of them lost an ounce of flesh. Fact is, we are too particular about our diet. Hundreds of tons of scraps of leather are wasted in this country for want of some to show us how to eat them.

The Boston "Herald," the other day, contained an editorial on "The Great Controversy," but nothing is said whether the editor or his wife got up first and built the fire.

Butcher—"Why didn't yer put on clean collar afore yer left 'ome this mornin'?" Sweep—"'Cause yer mother 'aven't sent my dress shirts from the wash this week."

There was a man so cross-eyed that he put his hand to another man's pocket and abstracted therefrom a watch. He wanted to know the time. The Judge said it would be three years.

A LEDGE of gold-bearing quartz haa been found in the San Francisquito Canyon, near the old stage road between here and Los Angeles. It is easy of access, plenty of wood and water convenient, and is said to be one of the most promising discoveries of the kind ever made in the State. Placer mining, on a limited scale, has been carried on in this canyon from time immemorial. Prospectors have always believed that rich and extensive leads of gold-bearing quartz would be found there, but this is the first great find ever discovered to warrant their faith. It is a matter of history that the first gold ever discovered in California was found in this canyon in 1841. If surface indications are worth anything, the debris that covers the bedrock there—the wash and accumulations of ages—covers the best gold lead on this coast.—[Bakersfield Californian.

A BRIDGE has recently been built over the Volga, in Russia, at a point where it is a mile in width. So great are the Spring floods at that point that the bridge has been built 100 feet above the lowest level of the water; the depth of the water is more than 50 feet. The girders are 364 feet long and 20 feet wide, and were riveted together on the bank of the river.

IT is the Republican Boston "Transcript" that says: "General Hancock's bearing at the inauguration at Washington elicits praise from all quarters. His courtesy and cordiality in connection with the new President will increase the public respect for the distinguished officer as an honorable, frank and high-minded gentleman."

IT is not unlikely that New Mexico will ere long demand admission into the Union as a State. The Territory has of late increased very rapidly in American population, and the extension of the great railroad systems is opening up for industrious work large tracts hitherto inaccessible or exceedingly difficult to reach.

THE cowboys of Arizona are increasing in numbers and robbing farmers of their stock. They are denounced as being worse than the Apaches, and the military authorities are blamed for not suppressing them.

THE habit of American girls marrying Italian Counts has fallen off of late. A life of following around a hand organ and passing the tamborine for pennies is not, as attractive as formerly.

THE life of a Louisville woman was saved by her corsets, which turned the course of a deadly bullet. Let the ladies and Senator Conklin continue to wear corsets, by all means.

IT was very hard on a celebrated physician to say that when he went hunting, during his holiday, it was the only time in the year when he didn't kill something.

STRANGE FATALITY.—Over fifty years ago James L. Gillis, now Judge Gillis of Iowa, was one of the men tried for the abduction of William Morgan, the betrayer of the secrets of Masonry. Nearly all arraigned in the trial of his alleged abductors came to some sudden end, and Judge Gillis long since survived all those who were associated with him. A few years ago one of his sons was called to the door of his Iowa residence and shot down. Recently another son was shot in the same way; and the Judge and his friends firmly believe the tragedies trace back to the Morgan affair. The case reminds one of Bristed's story of "The Dead Shot."

THE annual consumption of beer in Great Britain is thirty-four gallons for each person, while in Germany it is only twenty-two, and the British beer is the stronger. John Bull is the champion beer drinker.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

THIS HONEY WAS REMOVED FROM THE comb by centrifugal force, with a machine made for the purpose. It is therefore virtually the same as honey in the comb, only you don't have to eat the bees wax, which is indigestible and therefore disagrees with many persons. When first extracted the honey is liquid, but nearly all pure honey will candy or granulate in course of time, especially if exposed to the cold. Putting the cans in hot water for a short time will bring the honey to its fluid state without injury.

This Honey is put up in 10 pound cans, with patented screw tops, which renders it convenient for family use, and especially for the mines, to which it may be packed, even upside down without leakage. A neat label on each can gives full directions.

Price, $1 50 per can, or 12½ cents per lb at the Apiary, if customers furnish their own receptacle. For sale at Harris & Rhine's, Independence, and at the Apiary, at Jacob Vagt's place, Camp Independence.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Allgemeine Deutsche Unterstuetzungs Gesellschaft.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 28, 1880.

Messrs. Harris & Rhine, Independence, Cal.:

DEAR SIRS—The undersigned, President of the German Benevolent Society, begs leave to call your attention to this truly benevolent institution, founded in the early days of California, and being now in the 27th year of its existence. The Society was formed to carry out three objects, viz: to assist poor and worthy or deserving people by support, to find employment for those out of work, and to cure those who are stricken down with sickness. For the latter purpose the Society owns a magnificent Hospital, surrounded by extensive grounds, where all patients are under the charge of excellent physicians and a consulting board of the most eminent medical talent of this city. The Society has expended for hospital and grounds the sum of $188,895.

The object of this communication is to propose to you to act as agent for this Society, either personally or through one of your employees, suited for such position, for the purpose of enlisting new members.

The monthly fee is only one dollar and the initiation fee on becoming a member two dollars. Only healthy persons can become members, and only Germans or those who speak that language, as their wives and children. Any member who may be sick with sickness is treated in the hospital without any expense to him until he has been restored to health. All persons who are not members, or can not become such, but speaking the German language, are admitted for medical treatment in the hospital at as low terms as it is possible to make them.

In this city we have about 3,000 members, but throughout the interior only about 300. It is our aim to increase the number of members throughout the State to make the hospital as much as possible self-sustaining, to enable us to extend the charitable department of this benevolent institution. For the trifling sum of one dollar per month members have the best aid and care in the German Hospital.

Frequently sick people in the country are crippled for life by false treatment from incompetent doctors, or even brought to a premature death. Only too late do they find out that if they had become members they would have been restored to health, and their earnings of years would not have gone into the pockets of inexperienced doctors, as the hospital employs only the best physicians. If there are no earnings, the employers and the friends of the sick are generally called upon to pay for his support. All this can be avoided, if the employers would vigorously enforce the rule, now introduced in most of San Francisco's establishments, that every man employed should belong to a relief society in order that in case of sickness he might be well cared for and not be reduced to the another humiliating necessity of asking aid from the purse of his employer and his friends.

Persons of all nations of the age of 50 years or over are admitted as pensioners for life by paying a certain sum to be agreed upon to the Society. They receive a home at the hospital, first-class board, washing and attendance in in case of sickness, free of any expense.

To enable Germans and others who do not know of the existence of this institution, neither of the hospital nor its great advantages, to become members I have addressed you the above, and hope that you will cheerfully accept the agency and do all in your power to further the interests of this society by enlisting new members, and recommending our hospital to those who may be compelled to seek medical aid.

Your Obedient Servant,
JULIUS BANDMANN,
President G. G. B. S.

A Few Suggestions.

It is suggested that Wells, Fargo & Co mount the messengers or guards who accompany treasure boxes. The advantages of this course, it seems to us, would be manifest. The only advantages of having a messenger on a coach carrying treasure is of course to make a fight in case the coach is stopped, else there might as well be no messenger at all. In case of a fight not only the messenger's life is in jeopardy, but the lives of the passengers as well, as witness the late murder near Contention. A messenger on horseback is in no more danger of being killed than one on the box-seat. He would have more freedom of action, and by preceding the stage a short distance would be more likely to discover danger ahead. As this system is general in European countries, it must have been considered by Wells, Fargo & Co., as that company could by no possibility be ignorant of it. The additional expense is a considerable item, it is true, but we do not believe that a consideration with a company managed with so much ability. We are therefore anxious to learn what reasons have induced Wells, Fargo & Co. to continue their present system.

While upon the subject it is well to call attention to the statements which are current to the effect that a number of people in this city are aware of many circumstances which would be of great aid to the officers in ferreting out the perpetrators of the recent crime. These parties are alleged to be afraid to divulge what they know lest summary vengeance be taken on them by friends of the criminals. It is almost impossible that there can be any real danger to a community like this, and there are so many ways of communicating with the officers of the law in secret, that there is really no valid excuse for the suppression of facts. The man who willingly keeps back any information which will lead to the arrest and conviction of the criminals, in no matter how small degree, is also a criminal, and is directly responsible for any further crimes which may be committed in the future by the men who killed "Budd" Philpot.—[Tombstone Epitaph.

ON the principle of "charging what the traffic will bear" the first-class fare by the Southern Pacific via. Los Angeles from San Francisco to New York is twenty cents less than from Los Angeles to New York. The charge from San Francisco to New York via. Los Angeles is $138 30; from Los Angeles to New York $138 50. Thus the great science of railroading consists in carrying a man 482 miles in a first-class carriage on his way east, and charging him twenty cents less than the man who commences the journey when one-seventh of the original distance of that 482 miles has been accomplished. One fare should, if cost of service had anything to do with railroading, be $23 more than the other.—[S. F. Merchant.

Something Regarding Twain.

The Stockton "Mail" has the following regarding Mark Twain:

Burdette, of the Burlington "Hawkeye" is much charmed with Mark Twain, whom he has been visiting. He says the author of "Innocents Abroad" has "a heart as big as his body," and that he believes "there does not live a man more thoroughly unselfish and self-forgetful." At the same time we read in an exchange that Mr. Twain is disappointed in the proceeds of his literary work and thinks he ought to have made a good deal more. This, if not selfishness, is something very much like it. So far as the bigness of his heart is concerned the humorist of the "Hawkeye" must have been joking. There are hundreds of men on this coast who will testify to the littleness of that organ in the author of "Innocents Abroad" The meanest thing he ever did was when Dan De Quille, an old-time friend, companion and fellow-journalist, went East to write a book. Twain invited Dan to his house in Hartford as a good place to carry out his undertaking. They were both familiar with the material out of which the book was to be constructed, and Dan naturally expected that Mark would give him the benefit of his experience in book-making. In fact that was what took him East. Mark, however, threw off on him, neglected his proof sheets and allowed his book to remain in the hands of the publishers so long before it was put on the market that the sale was greatly injured. The book itself was full of errors. Instead of assisting his old friend, Mark was a positive injury to him. Dan De Quille was a brighter humorist in his day than Mark Twain, but he lacked the push and self-assertion that have carried the latter through so well. Many of the things that Twain sold and made money on originated with the modest Dan when they were both newspaper reporters working together on the same paper. It is not often that a genius is selfish or small hearted, but Mark Twain presents a conspicuous exception to the rule."

The above statement is incorrect in one material particular. Twain did not invite Dan to his house in Hartford, but allowed him to stay at a hotel not far distant. Twain's house cost $200,000 and had about twenty spare rooms in it. The failure of De Quille's book was directly due to the double dealing of Twain, whose abominable meanness in all the walks of life is proverbial with all who know him.—[Carson Appeal.

AN INTELLIGENT INDIAN.—Captain Joe, chief of the Washoe tribe in this vicinity, is a very sensible Indian, who through some means, has awakened to the realization of the advantages that are to be derived from an education, however humble. He informed an "Appeal" reporter yesterday that he is earnestly advising his people to send their boys to the public schools; provided they can be admitted. For a year he has persistently tried to impress his tribe with the importance of this matter, without much success, until very recently. But he has won a number of the leading bucks over to his theory, and now he believes that, before long, an effort will be made to introduce a half dozen of their brightest lads into the schools. In the event that the experiment proves satisfactory to the Indians, it is their purpose to induce all their boys to avail themselves of the benefits of a public school system. This is the first instance in the history of the Pacific Coast Indians, where the chief of a tribe has manifested the least interest in the intellectual progress of his people.—[Carson Appeal.

THE first through train, east, over the new southern railroad route has made a remarkable record. It left San Francisco on time, arrived at Kansas City on time, and was on time at every station along the entire route of 2200 miles.

A MAN'S leg has been amputated in a Toronto hospital by means of a platinum wire heated to a white heat by electricity. The smaller arteries were seared by the intense heat, and required no tying. The operation was in all respects a success.

NO ONE has the least idea how many military officers there are in this country until he travels around. Not long ago an observing man, while on a trip through Georgia, was invited to a fashionable dinner party, and while there was introduced to sixteen Majors, ten Colonels and eight Judges. He was nothing but a plain mister, and, as he gazed at the notables seated around him, he felt like a mere fly-speck in this world. Life suddenly grew gloomy and dull and the more he thought of his humble position the more melancholy he became. He wanted to seek some dark, secluded spot, and bay the moon until some one mistook him for a dog and shot him with a gun. Sad and listless he roamed about, and when his heart was sinking with despair he was presented to a Mr. Brown. "Are you plain Mr. Brown?" he inquired, as the tears welled up in his eyes. "Yes, sir, and I am glad to meet you." "Friend, brother," was all he could say; as he fell on Brown's neck and wept. Brown was veritably an oasis in a desert of dignities, and life was brighter once more.

THE BEWITCHED DRILL.—At one time in this camp the miners got into the habit of tamping giant powder cartridges with a long drill instead of a tamping bar. A small portion of giant would stick to the head of the drill. At the first blow of the hammer it would pop like a pistol, though doing no other damage, but well calculated to disconcert the boys, put them to thinking and cause them to proceed cautiously. That there were gnomes tampering with that drill there was but little room for doubt. It was always the first blow that caused the disturbance; after that it was all right. This put them to thinking, and it was not long before it was discovered that the giant adhering to the head of the drill, exploding by concussion, was the cause of all their troubles. It is safe to say that drills have not since been used as tamping bars.—[Ward Reflex.

RABBITS are making their way again in Victoria, Australia. One district is reported to be completely overrun, and the farmers who are open to their depredations have to make common cause to keep them down. This they do, unfortunately, with very little success, for the rabbits breed conveniently in the low, impassable scrub, and then come out to feed on the farmer's crops in the neighborhood. The scrub, however, belongs to the government, which is now called upon to put down the nuisance. Enthusiasts in acclimatization—like a gentleman in Devonshire who took a fancy to a Colorado potato bug and took some over—ought to be careful what tricks they play in the matter of transportation. That philosopher who originally brought the rabbit into Australia will need no monument.

MARRIOTT, of the San Francisco "News Letter," is still working at his air ship, and not only believes that it will be a success, but has impressed others with the same belief, as articles of incorporation of "Marriott's Aeroplane Company" have been filed in the office of the Secretary of State. The objects of the company are to "construct, equip, sell, own and work Marriott's Aeroplane for navigating the air; to establish and maintain lines or regular services of aero-planes between any desired points, and to enter into contracts for the carriage, by said aero-planes, of mails, passengers, and goods." The Directors of the company are: Frederick Marriott, James Gibb, Joseph Tilden, Charles Kohler, and Edward Curtis; capital stock, $10,000,000.

LOCKJAW.—Let anyone who has had an attack of the lockjaw take a small quantity of turpentine, warm it and pour it on the wound, no matter where the wound is, and relief will follow in less than a minute. Nothing better can be applied to a severe cut or bruise than cold turpentine; it will give certain relief almost instantly. Turpentine is also a sovereign remedy for croup. Saturate a piece of flannel with it and place the flannel on the throat and chest, and in every case three or four drops on a lump of sugar may be taken inwardly.—[Scientific American.

THE CARSON & COLORADO RAILROAD.

The Carson Appeal publishes a fine map of the route of the above named railroad, and a broad strip of the country adjacent, from Reno to a short distance south of Gold Mountain, nearly due east from this place. The map was drawn by Chris. Batterman, whomsoever he may be, and, so far as our knowledge of the country extends, is quite correct. The road will be in running order to Hawthorne, at the south end of Walker Lake, sometime next week. Hawthorne is where the Bodie wagon road connects with the railroad. We are not informed as to when the rails will be laid further in this direction, but the chances are that it will be some months first. Candelaria, its original objective point, has lately flattened out too much to offer much inducement of itself to rush the work. The route contemplated, however, is easterly from Hawthorne to Bellville, thence south to Candelaria, Columbus and Silver Peak, whence a branch road is marked southwesterly to Lida Valley, while the main line makes a detour eastward rounding Gold Mountain on its eastern end, then skirting along the south side westerly—all of which strikes us as a wrong plan in this: that a high mountain range intervenes between Silver Peak and Lida Valley, making the branch road to connect the two places quite impracticable; whereas, there is an open valley (a branch of Death Valley), and no vestige of a mountain, between Lida Valley and Gold Mountain; through this the main line can be run on nearly a dead level and scarce a curve, first in about two miles of the first named locality then, in a dozen miles more on a direct course, within a mile of the State Line mine and mill at Gold Mountain; thence, if we are not misinformed, it is a level route into Death Valley proper and on to the Colorado river. We have said above that this map was quite correct; on further scrutiny we see that its locations of mountains in the region just alluded to are quite incorrect in almost every instance. From these errors we conclude no actual survey for the road has ever been made south of Silver Peak if south of Columbus.

The shortest and most feasible route from Columbus to Lida Valley, Gold Mountain, etc., is through Fish Lake Valley, along the foot of the White Mountains and Inyo range. This would be the preferable route for several important reasons. Topographically, it is altogether the easiest and shortest unless the Lida Valley spur should prove a far more serious obstacle than is supposed; the proposed branch road into this Owens River Valley would be shortened full forty miles; an abundance of fuel and pure water would be at hand at every required point; lastly and most important, the cars would, so to speak, be brought directly under the dumps of perhaps a full dozen of metal bearing ledges in almost every linear mile of the White Mountain and Inyo ranges, the two being but one range in fact. We do not consider it at all an extravagant thing to say that taking both slopes into the count a railroad as proposed would set men to work on at least a dozen ledges on the average for every mile of track along the entire range. It is not assumed that anything like this number would develop bonanzas in fact, but all would contribute to the business of the railroad, and which business would as certainly as the world moves aggregate an amount that would well nigh equal the capacity of any single track railroad run on half-way liberal principles.

It is said that one reason why this road sheers off so far to the eastward is because of the determination of its projectors never to build a mile of road inside the jurisdiction of the California Sand Lot Constitution. And it is furthermore asserted by some in position to know something of the facts that so long as the same imbecile instrument maintains sway that capital will not invest another dollar in new railroads or permanent enterprises of any kind in this State, not even in mines except under unusually favorable circumstances. There may be some exaggeration in these statements, but it may be accepted as a settled thing that they are based on literal fact.

CHICAGO has developed a faster in the person of Wm Cooney, of 95 North Clark street, who came there from Sturgeon Bay, Wisconsin. He claims to be the Holy Ghost, the successor of Christ, and is a remarkably intelligent lunatic. He has fasted twenty-five days, only drinking water during that time, and says he will live on faith and water until Easter (April 17th). Before that time that man will find out that the moralists are correct—that a "fast" life is sure to be a short one.

"NOT GUILTY!"—OF COURSE.

The screenings of some seven hundred persons examined as to their qualifications to sit as jurors in the Kalloch case finally, after forty-eight days' consideration, decided that Kalloch committed no crime when he deliberately took Charles De Young's life. Except perhaps two or three members, that jury was just as ready to render a verdict of not guilty the first hour of the trial as they were the last. Far better for their own good name, if they ever possessed such, and certainly for the cause of Justice, if they had been permitted to have then so decided the case. They then would not have brought law absolutely beneath contempt by their indorsement of more perjured scoundrels than ever gave clumsy testimony in a court room since the days of Mexican grant litigations; neither would they have foresworn themselves quite so completely. If perchance they were honest men at heart, which we do not believe, they may have stood in dread of the pack of hyenas who at all times stood at the assassin's back, also cheek by jowl with the gang of perjurers graduated from old Baggs' academy for liars, also of the same lot who glorified assassination and purchased testimony, by harnessing themselves as horses to the carriage of the discharged murderer. That is our estimate of this case and those people, after reading all the testimony and arguments of counsel on both sides.

Briefly reviewed, the case is this Young Kalloch lies in wait some four hours to get a chance to shoot De Young; that fact is reasonably established in the general testimony; finally he bursts into De Young's own office, and as shown by his own testimony as well as that of all present, presents his pistol within a foot and a half of his intended victim's face, and firing then inflicts a mortal wound; this is rapidly followed up by four other shots, each directly at the head of the retreating and death-stricken man, the assassin apparently bearing in mind the presumed fact that a coat of mail would render his shots abortive if aimed at the body. So far, it was a rush and a murder beyond dispute or mitigation. But young Kalloch says, and in the face of all reason and common sense, that he went there in that manner on a peaceful mission but was met by a savage look and a drawn pistol and had to fire to save his own life. He does not say a pistol was fired at himself at any stage; but a number of able bodied liars are hired to swear that for him, and on that transparent lie the "six-shot theory" is set up as a basis of self-defense. It is incomprehensible to common intelligence to understand how Kalloch's act would have been any the less murder had such a shot been actually fired at him, bearing in mind the undisputed fact that he was rushing unannounced into the house and right into the face of a man who, he well knew, regarded him as a mortal enemy. But reasonable probabilities, the testimony of unimpeachable witnesses and still more unimpeachable physical facts prove beyond shadow of doubt that De Young did not fire a shot. And we do not believe that any man of that jury or any person in the world knowing the circumstances as they knew them, thinks that he did, or believes for one moment that young Kalloch went into that office for any other purpose than the one he accomplished—predetermined murder.

Other murderers like young Haskell and young Kalloch have escaped the gallows through perjury and money influences, and others will hereafter while the present jury system lasts. But this case presents peculiarities to render it notorious and a subject for comment far beyond ordinary. Aside from the fact that a perjured verdict is based on a round of perjured testimony which, if true, was no defense where law and justice has a shadow of a chance, we have the discouraging proofs that our principal city is controlled by ghouls only too glad to see Justice foully murdered as was the man whom their kind feared above all others. Following the demonstrations of the ghouls comes a convocation of jackals to yelp their satisfaction that the lion was dead—nominally, to serenade his slayer and to render their tribute of praise to the abilities of his legal defenders—abilities shown only by ringing in more false testimony than ever before was so clumsily risked in a California criminal case. Such unseemly, unprecedented exhibitions as this jackal convocation is a principal reason why this case gives grounds for extended comment.

Up to the hour of this assassination, and since for the matter of that, young Kalloch seems to have been a hundred times a better man than the old hypocritical adventurer and murderer of innocence to save whose reputation he did this murder. To take that celebrated pamphlet, the immediate cause of the murder, as our authority, De Young never published an allegation of old Kalloch's rascalities that was not susceptible of proof; and it was on the mere suspicion that more proven facts of the father's disreputable career were about to be made public by De Young that the son murdered him—did murder to suppress the public record of a man ever determined to make himself a public leader.

TALK FROM OUR REPRESENTATIVE.

Legislative Matters—The New Railroad.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 27.

MESSRS. EDITORS—About the only satisfaction the undersigned has had out of the recent 60-day session is telling in print a little of what he knows and thinks about. As expected, the Governor has called the animals together again, and before this letter sees daylight (if at all) and gets back here, the political circus and menagerie, performing at the expense of the State, will have opened at Sacramento a third time inside of sixteen months, to a day. To have been a member of the California Legislature, under a new Constitution, that is neither fish, flesh nor fowl, for three sessions in succession, in so short time, should be glory and honor enough to last one a life time.

The Governor has subjected himself to deservedly sharp criticism for having assumed to name "twenty days" as the length of this next legislative entertainment. Should the two houses get into a quarrel over the question of adjournment alone, then only can the Executive interfere and come the English over them—that is, prorogue them, or declare them adjourned, and call out the military to enforce it, if necessary. The general expression, also, is that he has missed a good opportunity in not mentioning several constitutional amendments. However, there is another point not to be overlooked in that connection. The whole question of an extra session turns upon the term "extraordinary" occasion, employed in the organic act. He has included the subject of "roads and highways" in his call. Suppose the Legislature should work up a law distasteful to some interest or individuals, and they should carry it up to the Supreme Court and that body should decide that the subject was not an "extraordinary" one, any more than county or municipal government, which he did not include? He includes a "tax levy," yet suppose the debris repealers attempt certain possible tricks in that connection—where will the "twenty days" business end? Should the influence and interests of cities and towns conclude to force streets, avenues and alleys into the roads and highways programme, where will the twenty days land us? And are not streets, etc., also roads, etc.? It took the Senate sixty days in full, after one hundred days experience the year before, to get a roads and highways bill as far as the Assembly. I was a member of the Assembly Committee on Roads, etc., and I realize what would have become of the Senate bill, had it ever come fairly before the eighty individuals occupying the north end of the State pavilion. Our committee never got their own bill on to the file till the last day, when I suggested to the chairman to report it from his seat on the floor, as coming from the entire committee. Three members of our committee insisted that they were entirely satisfied with the road law as it existed, and were utterly indisposed to change, or favor any other portions of the State, however much they were suffering. Now, what can be done in a case of that kind? And where in God's name, are the accursed entanglements and stumbling-blocks involved in the Constitution going to lead us, or cease? That instrument says the Legislature "shall" immediately after each U. S. census, "apportion" the State into Senate, Assembly, and Congressional districts. This appears so mandatory that the Governor could hardly dare refuse to name it in his call, however much he and certain elements in the Republican party desired to. On this point, the Republicans have rather the advantage of the Democratic members, who attempted to make political capital out of the bill to appropriate money to to carry on the Government. When the Republicans tried to take the appropriation bill up out of order the Democrats refused to lend the two-thirds vote. When the latter attempted to get the bill up the former in return refused, except the apportionment bill was included. That was the dead-lock of the session, if any existed. Now a word as to re-districting the State for political purposes. In caucus and committee, and out of both, one could see such elements of selfishness and jealousy existing among members of the Republican side of the house that it looks as though twenty weeks, instead of twenty days, would be consumed in framing a bill to suit all sections. It is fair to presume the same elements exist among the other side of the house, to say nothing of the general party opposition on both sides, and so it looks blue enough for getting away from Sacramento for six months to come. However, let us watch and pray. It is painfully apparent that neither side of the house possesses any recognized leadership. There is a good average ability, but nobody to control or direct it. In fact, this is the political condition of the State. It is, so to speak, at sea in an open boat, without rudder or compass, and the whole struggle is over the question of grub or spoils.

This city is a cesspool of corruption in office, all through the struggle to get office, and one party is as deep in the mud as the other is in the mire. Murder and perjury have been reduced to a fine art—and open and above board. In this we have outdone the system of secrecy employed by the Borgias of Italy several centuries ago. The livery of heaven serves as a door-mat for the Kallochs to wipe their feet on. The press, "the palladium of our liberties," so called, is but a machine used by greedy and ambitious individuals for printing "black lists" and levying black-mail. Family and fortune have constituted the chief objects of attack for over a quarter of a century. Society has retrograded. In the early days pistols and coffee was the style. Assassination is the order of the day now, and all in the name of Christ or coin, as circumstances suggest. The Bulletin devoting a page to denunciation of the public spirited Ralston, on the day of his funeral, has never been equaled by the Chronicle in its best or worst days. The Call is consistent in openly glorifying the recent verdict, and it is now in order to re-elect Kalloch chief magistrate of the city, and charter Moody and Sankey to praise God in the highest, on the strength of the occasion. Verily, I say unto you, if we do not all become happy yet, the devil is in it.

RAILROAD MATTERS.

Changing the subject, you will remember that last July I wrote you for publication something about railroad projects. It was proposed by men who could then, as well as now, build a road across the Sierras from a point in the San Joaquin valley, but said parties have divided off into other enterprises. Lately you have seen an incorporation for that purpose, but I cannot see any name or names connected therewith strong enough to carry out the project, while one name revives the attempt to to build a road south from Wadsworth, another north from Reno, etc. etc., all of which are apparently dead.

About last May, when the Carson-Colorado project was decided upon, I went to Yerrington and laid before him, as best I could, the importance of swinging the road over into Inyo County, by way of Benton, Bishop Creek and Owens Valley. Of course, he was chiefly agent in the matter for those who furnished the money. I tried to see Sharon, but he was out of town, and I was as loth to come in contact with D. O. Mills, as an ice-berg. Yet Mills may not be an ice-berg. He may only be a loose snow-bank, suffering for a close corporation with a dog-day sun. As the late Lord Dundreary might say, "you never know some folks you know, you know."

At all events, the railroad in question is not destined for Owens Valley, the only natural route with great natural resources, east of the Sierras and south of the Central Pacific. Neither is the road from Bodie to the wood ranch south of Mono Lake.

I met Mr. Yerrington here the other day and again urged upon him the importance of reconnoitering Owens Valley with his own men, if he didn't want to take my word for it. His answer was quite characteristic and typical of enterprise and progress on the Pacific Coast, first and last. He said that in either case, it was a question of "immediate results." Had he studied a week, his answer could not have been more significant. In every calling almost, in California, it is a question of "immediate results." Leland Stanford is the only man I have met whose aims are broad as the Continent, and who is the only man in the State who is disposed to keep the ball rolling on that basis and has the means to do it. He expresses himself as disappointed, if not disgusted, with the Colorado-Carson company for not adopting the regulation gauge, so that it might in time serve as a link in the road he proposes to connect the wheat fields of Oregon more directly with tide-water at Galveston, than through California. I doubt whether the Carson-Colorado will be extended south of Hawthorn this year, and it might be well for the people of Inyo, who desire a railroad and telegraph, to combine and lay the matter before Yerrington & Co. in a more systematic manner than has yet been done. It is not too late, and yet it cannot be done too soon.

Stanford & Co. are not ready to take hold of these smaller enterprises. They are playing for big stakes first. It would seem self-evident that a railroad and telegraph down through your country would enhance the value of all sorts of property four-fold at once, and open up every interest anew, imparting new life where all is dead or deserted. It is now easier to go to Mexico by land than to Independence, and it will soon be easier and more interesting to reach the City of Mexico than Independence. You know this yourself, however.

I have live matters enough to fill your paper with, but having imposed upon your time and space, I will close by requesting that if you or any of your readers have any suggestions to make concerning the subjects of roads and highways, and apportionment, tax-levy deficiency, you cannot send them to Sacramento too soon, and oblige,

Yours, truly, J. W.

THOUGH the presence of gold in pyrites has long been known, says the Pall Mall Gazette, the cost of extracting the precious metal has until lately rendered the operation unprofitable. It is stated that an important discovery has been made which at last solves the difficulty. The process, which is of French origin, has yet to be tried on a large scale; but up to this time the experiments that have been made are said to show a return of between one-half and three-quarters of an ounce of gold from each ton of pyrites treated. The discovery is exciting very great interest in the pyrites trade. One well-known concern has secured the right to the patent, and is now erecting the apparatus necessary for working the process.

A KANSAS paper says: Passengers who arrived here to-day from Deming, the intersection of the Topeka and Santa Fé and Southern Pacific Rail road, say that although that town is only a week old, it has fully 5,000 inhabitants, and building is going on at a lively rate. It bids fair to become a large and enterprising place. Some trouble has occurred between the settlers and the Santa Fé road in consequence of the latter having fenced off a strip of land along the railroad track. The settlers declared that this was not according to the custom of frontier life, tore down the fences and squatted on the property.

THE President has nominated ex-Mayor F. W. Spaulding, of Oakland, to be United States Assistant Treasurer at San Francisco, vice William Sherman, who has held the office for eight years.

AND now they have taken to the manufacture of bull cheese in the East.

THE EXTRA SESSION.

The measures designated to be voted on by the Governor in his proclamation for an extra session of the Legislature are as follows:

First—To enact a General Appropriation bill, which shall contain no item or items of appropriation other than such as are required to pay the salaries of the State officers, the expenses of the Government and of the institutions under the exclusive control and management of the State, for the thirty-third and thirty-fourth fiscal years.

Second—To levy the rates of taxation, or, in the discretion of the Legislature, to provide that the State Board of Equalization shall fix such an advalorem rate of taxation upon each $100 of taxable property of this State, which, after allowing the per cent. required by law to be allowed for delinquencies in and costs of collecting of taxes, shall be sufficent to raise the specific amount of revenue determined upon and directed to be raised by the Legislature for the thirty-third and thirty-fourth fiscal years.

Third—To appropriate money to pay deficiencies in appropriation for the support of the Civil Government of this State for the thirty-first and thirty-second fiscal years.

Fourth—To divide the State into Senatorial, Assembly and Congressional Districts.

Fifth—To enact a general road law.

Sixth—To send appointments to the Senate for their confirmation.

IN GENERAL.

The Recorder of Merced county is charged with dereliction of duty, and has been cited to appear before the Superior Court in answer to the complaint.

United States Marshal Poole has arrived at Hanford, Tulare county, for the purpose of ejecting settlers from railroad lands.

The death of Count Pecci, brother of the Pope, is announced from Rome.

An attempt has been made to assassinate the Governor of Baku, Trans-Caucasia.

Near Arlington, Texas, last week, a man named Wilkins killed his brother-in-law for inteferring in his family affairs.

The Greenbackers and Prohibitionists in Rhode Island have nominated State tickets.

An organized movement has been made in New York by the sanitary authorities against typhus fever.

Another serious washout occurred on the Union Pacific Railroad, March 25, at North Bend, Neb., a mile and a half of track being carried away.

Workmen on the Mexican Central have discovered a buried town plainly showing an advanced civilization.

The traffic in spurious relics at Rome is being suppressed by the Pope.

The custom of making human sacrifices in Dahomey continues.

Alonzo Babb was fatally stabbed at Ainsworth, W. T., Saturday of last week, by Dick Osborne, and the latter was subsequently hanged by a party of masked men.

The distance from New York to San Francisco by the new Southern route is more than 300 miles greater than by the Northern route.

An underground railroad is to be built in New York from the City Hall to the Grand Central Depot.

Jack Roberts, a murderer, was lynched at Durango, Col., Friday night of last week.

High water is creating frightful havoc with property in Nebraska, and some loss of life is reported.

The father of Roussakoff, the bomb-thrower, has shot himself at Moscow.

The Pacific Mail steamship City of New York is five days overdue at San Francisco from Australia, and great anxiety is felt in consequence.

The Pope was warned by a lady March 27th, that the day and hour had been fixed for the murder of himself and Cardinal Pecci.

CONKLING is in a peck of trouble. The President has nominated Judge Robertson, an anti-Conkling man, for the New York Collectorship. If the nomination is confirmed Roscoe will hereafter have to play second fiddle in New York politics. Roscoe would rather die than play second fiddle. Besides this aggravation, now comes ex-Gov. Sprague with his divorce suit, which is likely to pester Roscoe greatly.

A DISPATCH from Bristol, Tennessee, March 25, says that Major Kirby and a posse of twenty citizens had a battle with Middleton Brothers, moonshiners, and their employés at an illicit still on the borders of Virginia and Kentucky. Joe, Bill, and Tom Middleton were killed and five of their men were injured. The revenue officers will resume the fight.

AUNT BETSY GIBENS, probably the oldest woman in Louisville, and certainly the first girl child born in that city, died, March 28. She was born in 1778.

AN Englishman, just from the old country, was talking with a fashionable young Galvestonian, and during the conversation the latter remarked that his uncle was very low with the pneumonia, and he guessed the old boy would have to kick the bucket. "Kick the bucket! and will that do the poor man any good?" exclaimed the son of Albion, his eyes assuming the shape and dimensions of saucers. "We have pneumonia in Hengland, ye know, but we halways call in a medical man."

Sunday School Report.

Mrs. Emma M. Willis, the Superintendent of our Independence Sunday School, submits the following report and suggestions in relation to the same:

The attendance for the ten weeks ending March 27, 1881, averaged 23 per Sabbath. We expect a large increase over this average during the Summer months, the increase really having already commenced, the attendance amounting to 43 last Sunday. We ask all to come—not to entertain the idea that the school belongs to a few individuals; it is a public institution of this place, and as free to all as the pub-school; more so, since age excludes no one.

It is the intention of the school to give an entertainment, on or about the 3d of May, consisting of recitations, dialogues, select readings, music and, perhaps, refreshments, the proceeds to be devoted to Sunday School and church expenses. We will expect the young people of the neigborhood to assist us, and hope they will soon begin to select such recitations, dialogues, etc., as suit their tastes, subject to the approval of your humble servant,

MRS. EMMA M. WILLIS.

IN THE CAÑON.—We took a ride up Mazouaka Cañon the other day as far as Woodhull Springs, directly opposite and some nine miles by the wagon road from here. Mr. Woodhull has had men at work for some time past opening up these springs to obtain a supply of water for the contemplated smelting furnace at that point. The work so far done has concentrated very nearly if not quite a "weir" inch of good running water—quite enough for the desired purpose, we should think, though more might be useful. We do not entertain any doubt but what the supply can always be depended upon, nor is there any question but further openings will largely increase it. The locality is a most excellent one for a furnace. The country on every side and almost every where shows galena deposits and ledges, some of the latter easily traceable for thousands of feet. A good deal of "cayoting" has been done all over those hills, and at almost every opening is to be seen a pile of ore, proportionate in size and amount generally to the depth of shaft or tunnel from which it was taken. Under existing conditions there is not, or rather, has not been, but little inducement for owners to do any more than assessment work on their claims. But a furnace in operation, as contemplated, would change all these conditions wonderfully; with a market for ore right at hand, the mine owners, however poor, could and would open their claims, and the aggregate of the ores thus produced would unquestionably be amply sufficient to keep any single stack furnace running right along; we do not think there is any doubt on that point, nor but what such a furnace would pay well, very well, there being scores if not hundreds of good silver, gold and silver-lead prospects, more or less developed, easily accessible on every side.

PERSONAL.—Dr. H. W. Gould, one of Cerro Gordo's oldest old-timers, was in town for two or three days during the week... John R. Hughes, another patriarch of the smoke-begrimed regions, is at Lone Pine, in ill health ...; Supt. J. H. Holt, of the Keeler mill, was up looking after Rex Montis matters and possibilities.... Wm. T. Grant, too well known to need any introduction in this country, has re-appeared hereabouts, recently from a prospecting trip to Saline District. He is accompanied by Mr. N. D. Smith, formerly of Mammoth, and both are enthusiastic over the mineral outlook of that region... Mr. J. T. Thompson returned the other day from the same point, via. Cerro Gordo, well pleased with his property in the new El Dorado, but somewhat reticent about having been lost while on the trip, without water, for about thirty hours. He has partly contracted to favor our readers with a description of the mines of that country....County Surveyor Seeley now has the office management of the Blaney House in hand. ....Mr. Alex. Clark, who has been manipulating the types and presses of this office for these several or more months past, goes to-morrow to Keeler City, there to manipulate ores and machinery.

ONCE MORE.—We are requested to once more warn those brutes who furnish, as well as those who peddle, the vile compound of benzine, tobacco juice and whisky to the Indians in this place and vicinity that they will come to grief if that business is not stopped. No one expects anything of statute law in cases of this kind, nor will there be any demand made upon statute law or its officers to stop this nefarious traffic. The principals, several of whom are perfectly well known, and not their despicable go-betweens alone, will be called upon to answer for the worse than brutish scenes enacted on our streets and highways as often as every Sunday night by multitudes of benzine-crazed Piutes of both sexes. An old county pauper is said to carry on the peddling branch of the trade almost openly, and through him, Camp Independence has become notorious for the numbers of drunken, quarreling, fighting and really dangerous Indians to be seen around almost any day or night.

A REWARD.—This office will award a premium chromo to any person able to dig up any local items of solid import, at the present time. We have no chromos on hand, but can make the proposition in perfect safety all the same.

MEETING.—The stated meeting for April of Inyo Lodge No. 221, F. & M., will be held at the hall next Saturday evening.

SAN FRANCISCO HASH.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 27.

MESSRS. EDITORS—About two weeks ago made up my mind to bid good bye to Santa Clara and direct my footsteps toward Inyo's genial clime, feeling sufficiently recovered to imagine that I could withstand its altitude and again renew with others the good fight of helping to bring her out of her long state of lethargy.

BUSINESS

Generally here is improving, especially in the grocery and dry goods lines, and merchants anticipate when the roads in the interior become passable that an immense trade is in store for them. Crops bid fair to be enormous this year, and there yet remains on hand a very large proportion of last year's grain. Grain vessels are scarce, and freights upon them to Europe are higher than for many years. A great deal of barley is constantly being shipped to Chicago and Milwaukee, especially grades suitable for brewing. California produces a number one article for that purpose, and one firm in the city, M. Waterman & Co., are extensively engaged in shipping good brewing barley. We send them the barley, and when they make it into beer we buy it back.

That part of the city bounded by Pine, Montgomery and California streets, known as the

STOCK JOBBING

Center, where Tom, Dick and Harry, and possibly I, in early days used to put money into brokers' hands to buy those nicely printed certificates of stock in real and imaginary mines, presents a very quiet and unbusiness-like appearance just now. Moody and Sankey have the call on the brokers, and are ten to one more patronized. They pretend to let go free gratis stock in the Great Jehovah claim, located on the other side of Jordan's stormy banks, where he never fails to make your investments pay big dividends; that the great beauty of one's investing in it is the fact of its being an eternally paying and saving property, while the Pine and California street brokers can at best feed you upon slim hopes and probabilities. The stock exchanges are now poorly patronized, and were it not for free lunches in the principal saloons half the brokers would have to shut up shop, as their business is anything but remunerative. The old corps of hangers-on, who stand themselves up on Pine street daily as monuments of the effects of dealing in stocks as a business, are becoming terribly reduced. It is an interesting study to witness some of the dried-up, gray, haggard, tottering old fossils wandering around the haunts where they lost their money, wondering no doubt who they can strike each day for a piece for a lunch and bed. Stocks are low, and will be until the companies get them in at bed-rock prices; then they will start in with occasional spurts, run them up a little and then let the greedy crowd have them again.

MOODY AND SANKEY

Have had what the Christians would call a rather successful fight with Satan during their stay in the city. They have gathered in a few converts, but Satan when he comes to count over his men would hardly know who had been captured. Moody is not a handsome man—resembles somewhat John Morrissey in appearance of body and head, and I believe if he had been taken under physical training at the right time he would have made the equal of John, if not his superior. He is not an orator nor a flowery speaker, but gets up before his vast audiences and talks texts, and gives them square sledge-hammer expressions and views, which he drives right home. He is unquestionably doing good, and no church in which he has preached ever failed to have its seats and aisles filled. Sankey's popularity rests in the fact of his being a fine singer. He is far ahead of anyone I ever heard interpret sacred music and church hymns. By his singing he takes you as near out of this world as one can go and come back again, and half the people who attend the meetings go as much to hear him sing as Moody to preach. If the world is made no better, it will never be any the worse for having Moody and Sankey.

AMUSEMENTS.

The city is full of amusements, although Lent season is upon us, and the attractions are generally good. The Soldene Comic Opera Company hold forth at the California Theater. They are doing a fine business and give excellent entertainments, although Miss S. has got a tremendous mouth, and sometimes opens it so wide and twists it into so many horrible shapes that you often think her face will cave in and that you will be able to look down her throat and see the notes coming out of her lungs, which is no uncommon thing when she gets down to work in dead earnest. The Bush Street Minstrel Troupe is the finest I ever saw, and can make you laugh 100 times in 60 minutes. The most popular place of resort in the city is the Tivoli Gardens, where you can hear all the popular operas for only 25 cents admission. Seated around your little table you can call for anything in the known world to drink and eat, to help pass the time away. This place is patronized by the best families in the city, and is a resort where pleasures are concentrated at low prices. It is gradually undermining the regular theaters.

The procession on St. Patrick's day was nothing grand, but the literary entertainment at the Grand Opera House, for the benefit of the Irish Fund, was. The orator of the day handled England without mercy, and presented Ireland's wrongs in a masterly manner. On the following Sunday evening Rev. Mayor I. S. Kalloch lectured on Ireland, to an immense audience. The Metropolitan Temple is built on the plan of a theater, and has iron chairs placed in circles the same, both in dress circle and gallery, and will seat, I would judge, 2,000 people or more. The stage or platform is ten or twelve feet wide and about thirty long, at the back of which is a beautiful organ extending from the stage to the roof. Mr. Kalloch gave a fine address upon the history of Ireland and the Irish, culling considerable of it from Father Burke's lectures in New York, for which he failed to give the reverend father any credit. His faithful colored man sells you tickets as you enter the Temple, at ten cents a piece, a plan adopted regularly, instead of taking up collections. The greatest liberty is allowed the audience to express its feelings and opinions of sentiments advanced, by the clapping of hands and stamping of feet. In his manner on the stand, Kalloch is inclined to be a little haughty, and one cannot rid himself of the idea that he feels himself to be a miniature God for his followers to worship.

POLITICAL MATTERS

Are somewhat quiet just now. The great mass of the people of California feel that getting justice done them by either party is becoming quite questionable. The action of the last Legislature upon the debris question, in failing to repeal the law, when nineteenths of the people asked them to do so, has questioned their faith in the men they elect. They go to Sacramento intending to be good and stand up for their constituency, but somehow or other that atmosphere makes them think that what was wrong before election is right afterwards, and they go up and do just the reverse of what we sent them for. They "slop over," or "fall down," and say that it is right for the whole people of the State to be taxed $400,000 a year to pay for brush dams across rivers to keep back debris, and also to pay damages done to lands done by debris that the —— poor dams won't keep back. The dams that have been made are mere excuses to enable the swindling, thieving ring to gobble up pro rata the biggest portion of the yearly outlay and put it in their own pockets. I say if one man's business causes damage to that of his fellow let him be held responsible for such damages, and not the whole tax-payers of the State. If the tax-payer shared equally in the profits of hydraulic mining, it would be some sense to ask all to pay the damage.

C. F. O'BRION.

SENTENCED.—In the Superior Court, on Tuesday last, upon Charles Baker, found guilty of stage robbery, appearing for sentence, S. P. Moffat, Esq., made a motion and an exhaustive argument for a new trial. He dwelt mainly upon the point of the discovery of new and material evidence, tending to show that the prisoner could not have been present at the time of the robbery. His honor denied the motion and proceeded to sentence Baker to the State Prison for the period of ten years. This morning, in charge of Deputy Sheriff Stevens, Baker (or whatever his name may be) set out for his long home.

FOR STOCKTON.—Crawford, the old insane patient who has caused so much trouble at the county hospital for so long a time, was this morning started to the asylum at Stockton, having recently been found insane by an inquiry made by Judge Hannah and Drs. Bicknell and George. He is in charge of Mr. V. G. Thompson, who goes below on business matters.

PREACHING.—Rev. F. M. Willis will hold the usual services at the school house to-morrow evening.

The Country for Prospectors.

No less than three very important mineral discoveries, in new and hitherto unprospected districts in this part of the country, have been reported since the snow began to disappear. One of these is about forty, another thirty, and the third but little more than twelve miles from Bodie. One of these discoveries consists of a quartz ledge six feet wide and cropping out boldly for a distance of one mile, and giving assays from the croppings of about $60 in gold and $180 in silver to the ton. It is apparently free milling ore, and the rock bears a striking resemblance to the rich croppings of the old Imperial and Empire mines in Gold Hill, Nev. No prospecting has been done in the vicinity, save upon the one ledge, and that has been visited by but two men. Another prospect, said to be the finest ever discovered in this section, is situated about twelve miles from Bodie; but of this more anon. The third is the Charley Willard discovery on Sweetwater, of which we will have particulars in a day or two. But there are miles and miles of just such mineral country unprospected, within the range of vision from Bodie Bluff. —Bodie Free Press.

SMALL FARMS.—Large farms, poorly tilled, with a yearly repetition of similar grain crops, or else not tilled at all, but kept solely for cattle pasture, have been a serious drawback to California. Here our farmers seem to ignore the thrifty examples and economic practices of those who cultivate the soil in the old States, by a rotation and variety of crops, and by themselves producing almost everything needed for home consumption. Too many of our farming people copy the careless, unthrifty habits of the old Mexican inhabitants of California. There are large numbers of people in the agricultural counties, who own plenty of land, and yet have not the industry or foresight to cultivate a kitchen garden. No, many of them buy their vegetables of others; aye, even their potatoes, butter, bacon, eggs, etc. Now, California will never be really prosperous while this is the case. A friend remarked, that if a few scores of families, who live in Alsace and Lorraine, were settled on small farms in this county, they would soon make it blossom and bloom all over like a rose. We have no doubt of it. There is a splendid field here to such settlers, who will make every acre of soil productive, and not only yield them profitable returns for their toil, but an abundance of everything needful for home use.—[Ventura Free Press.

A DISCOVERY of much archaeological interest has recently been made in the Algerian Sahara M. Tarry, who has been carrying on work in connection with the proposed Trans-Sahara Railway, having noticed a mound of sand in the neighborhood of Wargla, had the sand dug up, and discovered the top of a spherical dome. This naturally aroused his interest, and getting his Arabs to dig still deeper, he found underneath the dome a square tower, then a platform of masonry, and finally a complete mosque. Continuing the excavations, Mr. Tarry soon unearthed seven houses in perfect preservation, and came upon a subterranean watercourse. At the last news, nine houses had been disinterred, and M. Tarry was getting additional assistance to clear out the precious watercourse, which he described as sufficient to irrigate a small forest of palms. It is well known that the Sahara was at one time much more populated than it is now, and its trade much more extensive; but no one seems to have supposed that cities had been buried under its sands so recently as since the introduction of Mohammedanism.

MINNIE PALMER is the star of a dramatic company now traveling in the West. Sadie Bigelow was until lately a member of the same organization. Both are pretty, talented and popular. The cause of Miss Biglow's withdrawal is given by her as follows: One night we were playing poker, Miss Palmer and myself, when I bet five cents, and she wanted to 'see' my hand. She said she had only a penny left, and I told her that if she wanted to call me she must borrow four more. Thereupon she said I was a real mean thing, and we had a few words. Once after that she came into the room where I was playing, and said she would not join in the game if I continued in it. This I regarded as an insult, and I threw up my hand at once." Efforts at reconciliation were so far successful that the actresses kissed each other, but the quarrel broke out afresh, and Miss Bigelow, collecting her salary by the help of a Sheriff, resigned.

DAVID DAVIS is an Independent Senator. He feels obliged to make an explanatory speech whenever he votes. Once he has voted on the Democratic side—with a speech. Once he has voted on the Republican side—with a speech. Now that he is fairly launched on his sea of troubles, he should go on voting on either side, on both sides, with the wild recklessness which is peculiarly his own. Independent Senator Davis will lose his dignity if he continually poses in his Roman toga, crying "Look at me, and see the incarnation of virtue."—[N. Y. Times.

A BLIND man was taken all through a Grass Valley mine, and when he got above ground knew really as much regarding the property as an expert on visiting day.

THE largest "grouper" ever caught on the coast of South Carolina is on exhibition in Charleston. It is about 6 feet long and weighs 150 pounds.

COLORADO is always enjoying some new excitement. This time it is not a mine of fabulous value, but the discovery of three skeletons at North Denver, which were found below the surface of what looked like an ancient drain. The skeletons were almost perfect when the drain was opened, but upon exposure to the air they crumbled into dust, leaving only one shinbone and two jaws in decent preservation. A little examination showed that these relics were of enormous size, and the scienists of North Denver at once proceeded to reconstruct a preadamite man about twelve feet tall, amid the wonder and applause of citizens and the press. Thus far no one has suggested that the explorers have been "tresspassing on Jones' family fault," and that the shinbone and jaws probably belong to a lost mule.

THE prophecy falsely imputed to Mother Shipton, that the world will come to an end this year, was firmly believed in by Emma Vandersmucker of Bucles, O., and it made her insane. She went to religious meetings and eloquently exhorted the people to prepare for the great event. She moved her hearers greatly, and in one night twenty of them became converts to Christianity. Pastor Hadden says that, knowing the girl's lunacy, he was in doubt what to do, but concluded to let her go on and a tremendous revival is the consequence.

ONE of the oldest churches on the American continent is the Tumocanco church near Tubac, Arizona. It was built by the Franciscans in 1554, and has consequently reached the age of 327 years. Fifty-six years ago the Indians murdered seven priests within its walls, and twenty-five years ago priests came from Rome and dug from a sepulcher on the right side of the alter $80,000 in coin and jewels.

WISDOM FROM A BABE.—Here it is: It is related that a little girl, whose parents belong to the official circles in Washington, was watching the inauguration ceremonies, and when her mother pointed out General Garfield as the new President, exclaimed in dismay: "What, isn't Mrs. Hayes going to be President any more?"

How almost irresistible it is, when we admit that the present Winter has been unusually sickly, to add, in the language of the Green Isle, that a great many persons died this year who never died before.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

THIS HONEY WAS REMOVED FROM THE comb by centrifugal force, with a machine made for the purpose. It is therefore virtually the same as honey in the comb, only you don't have to eat the bees wax, which is indigestible and therefore disagrees with many persons. When first extracted the honey is liquid, but nearly all pure honey will candy or granulate in course of time, especially if exposed to the cold. Putting the cans in hot water for a short time will bring the honey to its fluid state without injury.

This Honey is put up in 10 pound cans, with patented screw tops, which renders it convenient for family use, and especially for the mines, to which it may be packed, even upside down, without leakage. A neat label on each can gives full directions.

Price, $1 50 per can, or 12½ cents per ℔ at the Apiary, if customers furnish their own receptacle. For sale at Harris & Rodney's, Independence, and at the Apiary, at Jacob Vagt's place, Camp Independence.

Special attention is given to reliable mining news from all parts of the country, which is got ready by an efficient corps of correspondents in every section, and from an extended exchange list. The metal and ore markets and gold, silver and miscellaneous stocks are reported and commented upon weekly by experienced financiers, who are unbiased by private interests, and upon these matters it is accepted as a reliable guide and unfailing instructor. Aurora Items

We take the following from the Esmeralda "Herald," of the 2d instant:

Albert Mack came up from San Francisco on Tuesday, on his way to his home in Benton.

I. M. Taylor, the efficient Superintendent of the State Line mine, has returned from the East and gone to his post of duty. This goes to refute the rumor that cantankerous, riotous George Daly will take charge of that property.

All of the horses, or most all, are having the epizootic in rather a bad form. The U. S. Company's teams, also those of the S. T. Company, are almost unfit for use. Men who drive these teams are afflicted in the same way, only the disorder is not so violent with them.

It is said that as soon as passenger trains are regularly run over the Carson and Colorado railroad, an opposition stage line will be put on between Bodie and Hawthorne, the town which will for some time be the terminus of the road, and which will be the point of departure for Aurora and Bodie.

Last Fall articles of incorporation of the White Mountain Water Company were filed with the Secretary of State, the object being to conduct water from the White Mountains to the town of Candelaria. We learn that all the necessary arrangements have been completed to carry out the intended scheme, and that in a short time work will be commenced. It is reported that the pipe has been purchased in New York and is now on the way to Candelaria.

Last Tuesday the Del Monte shut down, and put Wm. Coffey in charge of the works as watchman. Over a month ago Superintendent Tyrell informed the company that it was simply throwing away the money it cost them to run the works, as with the facilities at hand it was utterly impossible to successfully combat the increasing flow of water at every stroke of the pick in the mine. [Heavier pumping machinery is to be put in.]

If indications amount to anything, there will be more mining property change hands in this district the coming Spring and Summer than for the past ten years. Ask reasonable prices for your prospects, and you will find ready purchasers. The completion of the C. and C. R. R. to Hawthorne will witness a regular swarm of people to this section in search of mining ground. But take advice and don't ask more for your mines than they really show themselves to be worth—if you want to sell.

An Amador paper reported that Wm. Westfall had been hanged. Wm. Westfall writes to the paper that he hasn't been hanged, but expected to be married shortly. The question arises: Is Westfall to be commiserated or congratulated?

THE Chinaman is coming into vogue as a lackey in some of the monster stores in Paris.

How It Worked.

Editors are terribly pestered by bores, and generally calculate to be out when they call. And Mr. Durnsharp, a country editor, invented a neat contrivance to get rid of them. It was a bouncing chair. The door of his private office is just at the head of a flight of stairs. Just inside the door is located the chair. The pressure of a man sitting in the chair works springs in the floor. After three minutes' pressure the door opens, a thing like a man's arm, with a fearful claw on it, reaches in, grabs the occupant of the chair, yanks him up and hurls him down stairs. Soon after making his invention Durnsharp took a partner, Mr. Snakes, and neglected to explain to him the chair. Mr. Snakes came to the office with some friends one day, and giving them seats, took that chair himself. They had just got comfortably to talking, when, whew, the door flew open, and Mr. Snakes disappeared like a shot. The guests were amazed. But in a minute he returned bruised and very mad, and explained that somebody threw him down stairs. Search failed to reveal the thrower, so they sat down again. Very soon Mr. Snakes made another involuntary expedition down stairs. He returned that time with his clothes torn and his shins scraped. He was almost wild. Still they could find no assailant. He asked one of his friends to take the seat and let him watch the door, but the friend guessed he would'nt; so, after posting a friend outside to watch, Snakes sat down. The way he turned handsprings and summersaults down stairs, that time, wrenched every bone in his body, and he lost a couple of teeth; and the friend swore nobody approached the door. Then they began to get scared. Some thought it was spirits, but Snakes swore he didn't believe in such things, and would solve the mystery or die. With two watchers outside he once more sat down. It didn't take long for the machine to work. It grabbed him so as to tear his clothes badly, and gave him a header down stairs. He met his partner coming up, and they both returned to the foot of the flight together. They had to be picked up, and after Mr. Durnsharp got over his surprise, he explained. "Good Lord, why didn't you tell me of it before?" exclaimed Snakes. "I forgot it," explained Durnsharp. Snakes was badly used up, but he summoned strength to violently assault his partner, who will remain in bed for a week yet. Then they'll dissolve partnership, and bother the Courts and support a couple of lawyers for a year or so.—[Boston Post.

The Discoverer Of Tombstone

The Prescott Miner says that Ed. Schieffelin, the discoverer of the mines which created Tombstone, and the same man who gave it its gravelike name, made us a call to-day. In years past Ed. was a mule-puncher for the editor of the Miner, and a good, industrious man he was. He informs us that he had spent fourteen years in prospecting before he struck the famous Tombstone mines, one-fourth of which he sold for $400,000. Before the discovery of the mines which have proved so wonderful, he made Camp Huachuca his headquarters, and often remarked that he would yet make his fortune, to which he generally received the consoling answer of "Oh, yes, you will find a tombstone." So often was this answer given him that it became impressed on his memory to such a degree that the first thing that came to his mind after discovering the Contention, Tough Nut, etc., was "tombstone;" hence the derivation of the name to the town that has become famous for its mines of marvelous richness.

Ed. has settled upon his father and mother $100,000, has invested in United States bonds $250,000, and kept $50,000 as a reserve to carry him through his prospecting career, which he follows with great avidity. He is now en route to New Mexico for the purpose of exploring that country, rich in mines of every description.

THE fact that mining does pay, and pays handsomely, too, proves that the mines of this continent are wonderfully rich. No mines in Europe could stand the waste, expenditure and ignorance that the mines of America have stood.

Homestead and Pre-Emption Acts.

The following conditions under which entry on land may be made will be interesting to those wishing to find homes for themselves and families:

Actual and continuous residence on the land from date of settlement to the time of perfecting title is required by each law: therefore a man can have but one right at a time.

Settlers are required to file their declaratory statements within three months from the date of settlement when settlement is made upon surveyed land. If the land be unsurveyed at the date of settlement, the filing must be made within three months from the date of the filing of the township plats in the United States Land office, in order to be protected by virtue of prior settlement.

Proof and payment must be made within thirty-three months from the date of settlement on surveyed land, or thirty months from the date of filing of declaratory statement.

If settlement is made upon unsurveyed land, proof and payment must be made within thirty-three months from the date of the filing of township plats in the United States Land office.

If proof and payment is not made in accordance with the above, the party will forfeit the right to do so in case of a valid adverse claim.

The instructions on this point are as follows:

"After a filing has expired by limitation, you are to treat the land described by it as if no filing had ever been made for it, save in the single instance of the party making it offering proof and payment prior to the initiation of a valid adverse claim. If parties, therefore, allow the legal limit to expire, they do so at their own peril, and cannot be protected after such laches against an adverse interest legally acquired."

As to the proof required in pre-emption cases one credible witness who knows all the facts besides the claimant is sufficient. In addition to the claimant's pre-emption affidavit, in which he swears in substance that he is not the owner of 320 acres of land in any State or Territory; that he did not move off from land of his own to the government land; that he settled upon and improved the land not to sell the same on speculation, but in good faith to appropriate the same to his own exclusive use and benefit; that he has not directly or indirectly made any agreement or contract with any person or persons except himself, and that he never has had the benefit of either of the pre-emption laws of the United States.

The proof must show at least six months of actual continuous residence upon the land, and that the claimant is living upon the land at the time the proof is offered. That he has a comfortable house, some land fenced and under cultivation.

In case a claimant is naturalized, er has declared his intention to become a citizen, his papers must be oxhibited.

Parties wishing to commute homestead entries must have two reliable witnesses and prove at least six months' residence, improvements and cultivation, as in pre-emption cases.

By a careful perusal and strict compliance with the above much trouble and expense may be saved to pre-emption and homestead claimants.

ALAXANDER III. has expressed a wish which will be regarded with some surprise in asking that a memorial church be erected on the spot where his father was assassinated. The authorities of St-Petersburg have decided to comply with the request, of course, and work upon the structure will almost be begun before the slain monarch is entombed. The spot has now been enclosed and a cypress tree has been planted at each corner of the enclosure. It is natural that the dead Czar's children should feel an irresistable desire to visit the place of the tragedy. The people were greatly affected at seeing the Duchess of Edinburgh kneeling in the snow where her father so lately received the missile of death, but it would seem that some other spot would be more appropriate for the erection of a memorial.

SATURDAY, APRIL 9 1881

The vitriol-thrower is succeeded by the vitriol-rubber. A peculiar ingenious brute employed as a laborer in Huntington, Long Island, punished one poor woman by taking her by the throat, pouring vitriol upon her face and rubbing it in with his buckskin glove. The use of vitriol is assuming importance among scientific crimes, and needs proper recognition from the lawmakers. No penalty which can be imposed under existing laws for this horribly deliberate and fiendish outrage can be at all adequate. If sentences were ever inflicted in proportion to the crime and to other crimes—which they seldom are—such an act as this would be rewarded with something like a twenty years' imprisonment at the very least. In malice and cool premeditation it surpasses many a murder for which hanging has been done.

THERE are fifty-five cases pending in the United States Circuit Court, in San Francisco, brought by the railroad monopoly to restrain tax collectors from collecting the taxes due by them the State. The trial has been set for the 25th inst. The attorneys in the case, so far as developed, are: For plaintiff, McAllister & Bergen; For defendants, the Attorney-General of the State, the District Attorneys of the several counties affected, and J. P. Hoge and Barstop and Rhodes, speical counsel.

THE tanners and hide-dealers held a convention in San Francisco on the 20th ultimo. The objects were to take measures to prevent fraudulent weight from the dishonest practice of watering and sanding hides, to teach butchers the art of taking off hides and skins with proper care, stockmen how to brand without injuring the best part of the hide, and to guard against dishonest practice in the piling and measurement of tan bark.

A GREAT want of the South has been a cotton-picking machine. The Atlanta Constitution says a machine has been invented which will clip the limbs from the cotton stalk, separate the locks from the balls, clean the lint thoroughly, and bring it out ready for the cards of the spinning machine. If this machine is found to work well, it will be of great value to the Southern cotton-growers.

"THE dollar of our daddies" is accumulating at a rapid rate in San Francisco, there being at last report 12,500,000 of them in the vaults of the Branch Mint at that place and 11,962,000 in the Sub Treasury vaults; total, 24,462,000. Any person may draw as many of these dollars as he desirer—by merely depositing in their stead an equivalent sum in gold or greenbacks.

GENERAL JOSEPH LANE, who was a distinguished volunteer officer in the Mexican war, candidate for Vice President on the Breckinridge ticket in 1860, and who had worthily filled many important civic positions, died recently in Oregon, aged somewhere between eighty and ninety years

THE State Legislature met in extra session on Monday, and from the way it started in, it looks like it would take it the whole twenty days to which the Governor's proclamation limits the session to organize.

SIXTEEN more Mussel Slough Settlers have been served with notice to quit their homes by the U. S. Marshal. They will be evicted unless they make terms with the Railroad Company.

J. ARMSTRONG, Acting Commissioner, has decided that "the fact that if the locator of a mining claim be under the age of 21 years does not render the location invalid."

AT the municipal election in Cincinnati on the 4th the Democrats elected their Mayor, as they also did in Cleveland. Elsewhere the Republicans claim victories.

LUCY STONE isn't satisfied with Garfield's kissing his mother while twenty millions of women are deprived of their rights. Would Lucy have the dear man kiss the whole twenty millions?

A DAILY mail from Mexico is one of the novelties introduced by the extension of the Southern Pacific along the northern boundary of that Republic.

All the Democratic Senators will support Robertson, believing they are sustaining Blaine, whom they like.

THE amount of butter annually exported from America to England is over 50,000,000 pounds.

A CORNER IN WOMEN.

Contrary to exectation and precedent the new census shows that in this country the ruder sex outnumber the gentle to the extent of nearly a million. It is to be sincerely hoped that nobody will say, "What are you going to do about it?" for this is manifestly one ot the cases in which there really can be nothing done, except to feel uncomfortable, for the condition is not merely accidental and temporary; it promises to be permanent, for the discouraging misproportion is not simply between adults of the two sexes, but includes the entire population all the way from extreme age down to the cradle, and this in spite of all that Mormons and other agencies for the importation of domestic servants have done to make the balance even. It therefore stands to reason that not only is the genus old maid doomed to speedy extinction, but that nearly a million of the young men of America will have to go wifeless unless each one can raise the price of a ticket to Europe and two tickets back. It also becomes quite evident that the local valuation of women will increase; any market in which nearly a million competitors are sure to "get left" in the struggle for something not only desirable but absolutely necessary is threatened with a "corner" that must be simply gigantic in its proportions. The ladies are to be congratulated on the prospect; they always were worth more than they brought. Even in the days when they outnumbered the men it was agreed that it was impossible to have too much of a good thing. Now, however, they can exact their own terms. Instead of meekly submitting to all sorts of inconveniences and privation for the sake of being married and having a home they now can make their own terms; they need not even endure husbands that drink, smoke, or spend severrl evenings a week at the lodge, for rather than go wifeless the tyrant man will abate his pretentions and woman will become an autocrat.

The whole section of country around Rio Arabia, New Mexico, is in a state of nervous excitement. The cause of terror is Ike Stockton and his gang, who, with his brother Port., have for years been drepredating through New Mexico and Texas, murdering, etc. Less than a month ago Port. Stockton, whose headquarters were near Farmington, entered a saloon in that town where a number of ranchmen were drinking, and as customary ordered everybody to take a drink, under penalty of being shot on refusal. The ranchmen not complying, he drew his revolver, but was immediately shot and killed. Ike Stockton, hearing of this, called a gang of six or seven desperadoes and started for Farmington with the avowed purpose of killing every man who was present when Port. was killed. Since then they have been murdering ranchmen and cowboys, killing and stealing stock and defying the authorities. A vigilance committee has been organized, but is powerless, the desperadoes being thoroughly acquainted with the country, well mounted and having divided into three or four squads in order to evade them. Governor Wallace has called out the militia, and the county will be scoured until the desperadoes are run down.

MEXICAN POLICE.—The City of Mexico is well guarded by police— four to every block—that is to say, one on every corner. They are dressed in blue. with caps covered with white covering, which comes down over the shoulders. In addition to their baton they are armed with a revolver, and at night they carry a lantern, which they set down in the middle of the streets to show that they are on their posts. At night, looking up the street, with the houses glistening in the moonlight, the long line of lanterns in the center presents the appearance of the footlights of the stage of some immense theatre.

The flow of immigration promises an addition of half a million to our population this year. It is good to know that s large majority of these strangers are provided with means to start fairly in the New World.

JUDGE SULLIVAN, of the Superior Court of San Francisco, has decided one of the suits of Burke against Flood et als., in favor of Burke. There are millions in it, and of course it goes up to the Supreme Court.

WASSON'S VIEWS.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 2.

MESSRS. EDITORS—There is but little of interest to write about. If the Sacramento Congress had carried on one-half as bad as that at Washington these days, the papers would be full of it; but as the latter is so much farther away and ostensibly not felt by the people there is a vast distinction without any difference, except in favor of our home affairs. Next week there will not only be an extra session at Sacramento, but a dog (called a "bench") show in San Francisco. I am sorry I can't be at both places at once, for "the more I see of politics and men, the better I like dogs"—to quote the saying of a French philospher.

There is nothing new here in the mining way, although there are rumors and ripples of excitement respecting the Comstock, and discoveries in Alaska under twelve feet of snow. In my last letter I had something to say about

THE CARSON COLORADO RAILROAD,

And its further extension south. It is doubtful if it will be extended south of Hawthorne this year, but unless influence is used, it will surely go near Candelaria and beyond, leaving Owens Valley to the west. There is one overruling element pointing that way; it is the market for wood, lumber and mining timbers, of which supplies the V. & T., and C. & C. people have an abundance for years to come. And as the Comstock market declines, it is all the more important that an outlet be sought, and where there is the least opposition on the part of nature. The V. & T. R. R. has a costly system of flumes, side tracks, and a big reserve in the Sierras. By swinging the new road well out from the main range they head off proposed opposition from Wadsworth, Battle Mountain, etc., besides finding a better market for their main supplies. And should the Gold Mountain discoveries and other points loom up on the desert side of the White and Inyo mountains, there would be all the more inducement for continuing the road accordingly. They might even control the future of Deep Spring, Cerro Gordo, Beveridge, and Darwin from that side. I do not know the wishes of the people of Bishop Creek and elsewhere throughout the Valley on this subject, but I cannot help but think they would not only feel better, but be much better off, were the railroad and telegraph built that way. I have always understood that there is a good railroad pass for a road through a few miles east of Aurora toward Benton, where there are rich mines, and which would be the first point of connection. Thence to

BISHOP CREEK, INDEPENDENCE,

And clear on to the Southern Pacific, the grade is already as good as made. It is only a question of time when such a road will be built, but it might be very materially shortened were an earnest, united effort made toward getting it now. A sensational mining development at the right place would alone effect it, but there is but little hope of that at present. The system of

"UNDERMINING"

So long practiced at Cerro Gordo, makes the question of time more like one of eternity. Possibly if a thorough statistical showing of the resources of the line of country in question, well made, and presented to the railroad people, they would be induced to take hold all the sooner. Were it once given out that a road would be built on that line, general attention would at once be turned that way; travel and freight would increase, and prospecting revive on a more solid scale, and agricultural and grazing lands attract new comers, and advance in value manifold. The Southern Pacific company have decided to construct a road south to Tombstone, and from there fork roads to the southeast and southwest. I dare say the inducements are not greater than those held out for the C. & C. company, respecting extensions north from the new town of Hawthorne, south of Walker Lake. The Central Pacific company are surveying a route to tap the Wood River country in Idaho, about which there is more or less excitement, minus very definite information.

Everywhere there is activity and immediate prospective prosperity, except in Inyo county, California, which is a terra incog.—an unknown world, except to a very few, and those few unable to help themselves. I have yet to meet any one, whose opinion I consider worth anything, who does not believe Cerro Gordo, for instance, if it were located most anywhere else, would not create a sensation, and if some of the copper interests of Inyo were located in Arizona, they would attract any amount of capital forth-with. It is disgusting to dwell upon these matters, and so I will modify the subject.

I hinted in my last letter that the Governor lost his opportunity in not naming several

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

In his call. New Constitution men everywhere are as anxious for it as those who opposed the adoption of that instrument. Here was a chance to cut the Gordian knot, once for all, but as it is, this much boasted commonwealth—made up of old sores, old scores and old hogs versus young pride and poverty—will be bandied about by demagogic writers and speakers for years to come. I hope I am mistaken, but I go to Sacramento to-morrow with a feeling that little or no good will result to any one concerned, and but for a hope of strenthening the State Mining Bureau I would not go at all. That institution is an established fact of great importance as it is, in its infancy, but there is much to do yet. I succeeded in getting a joint resolution through, during the late session, transfering the

CABINET OF MINERALS, "HID AWAY,"

As the Governor well said, in the cockloft of the State Library at Sacramento to the care of the State Mineralogist in this city. Said cabinet cost the State about $13,000, besides $5,000 for cases. It might as well be in the moon as where it is. But by that resolution the Sacramento delegation in the Legislature would not have known of the existence of said property. The visitors to the State Museum of the Mining Bureau often numbered as high as fifty strangers a day, and is increasing rapidly. Prospectors, of which the city is all the time overrun, find it is an excellent study room for comparing notes as to rocks, ores, fossils, and curious things. The library and map feature is increasing rapidly, while the labratory is doing an important work through analyses of all sorts of minerals, mineral waters, soils, etc. Probably the most important feature is the correspondence in connection with discoveries, and the determination of characters of mineral substances, their commercial value, and so forth. In a few years the records of the institution in this respect will alone be of great interest and value to the State, which is but in its infancy as to deep mining, and especially so for everything except gold, silver, and quicksilver. The aim of the Bureau is to make every item of information plain and simple to every day people. It was my suggestion that as the work of classification and arranging goes on all labels shall be self-explanatory, so that one need not to hunt through the books to find out the meaning, etc., of the scientific terms and names. Speaking of books, Mr. Hanks is, at leisure, preparing a work on

MINES AND MINING,

That will be an improvement on anything heretofore attempted, and if he acts upon a suggestion of yours truly, it will confer a blessing upon all mankind interestrd in the subject. That is, to, as far as practicable, simplify the definitions and causes of metamorphic or rock changes. For instance, how did sandstone originate, and what created loam or clay? What were the original forms of these substances? By taking the mica out of granite, then what? By taking a certain ingredient out of a piece of silver, what will be the name of the new type of ore thus created? And so on through the list. It would be impossible almost to compile a work comprehending the interminable changes nature has rung in on her geology and mineralogy, but all the leading and useful types of

ROCKS, ORES, AND SOILS

Could thus be utilized in book form, to the great relief of the million. Fully ninety-nine per cent. of the publications on these subjects are mere technical rubbish—a fraud and nuisance. With all his enthusiasm, Hanks is very cautious. He is only too anxious to get out in the field, and but for the accident and injury received at the mud volcanoes on the Colorado desert last Winter, he would have been over your way ere this. He was led to believe that the volcanoes contained certain substances which might be of material value to the State, and went there to finally determine the matter. His next regular report to the Governor will contain a pretty thorough exposé of the mineral resources of Mono and Inyo counties, providing his health is spared. This is something I had a right to demand from the first, and he will carry it out as soon as possible. It is provoking enough to have to fight every inch of the way at Sacramento and humiliate myself in a hundred ways, to accomplish anything, however good. There is no doubt a better feeling extoward the mining interests than had to be met one year ago, when ignorance and malice were so paramount that had I introduced the Sermon on the Mount, it would have been bounced as another new mining swindle; and when the red-hot reformers would not have been satisfied with a hot stove, but would have jayhawked the Crown of Thorns and peddled it out for toothpicks at a cent apiece.

During the extra session you may hear from me again. It is my safety-valve. J. W.

The New York Tribune says: "Dynamite in large quantities is ordered from Fiume, and the Austrian authorities received minute instructions in regard to its delivery upon the frontier. The Nihilists, masquerading as Government police, contrive to intercept it and to remove it to a safe hiding place before the deliberate officials are on the ground. Such an incident as this proves that there are Nihilist informers high in official life. There may well be uneasiness throughout Europe as the royal pilgrims are hastening to St. Petersburg."

The contractors and other people in Cape Colony who expected to make money out of the Boer war are gnashing their teeth over the peace, which, they say, has been purchased at the price of British military prestige; and they express s desire to move to some other country, with a greater regard for its honor. It might be well if this purpose, which is in no danger of being executed, were carried into effect—except for the sake of the unfortunate other country to which they should remove.

The General Expression.

The following from the San Diego News gives the view of the press generally upon the Kalloch case. There are two or three San Francisco papers who uphold the verdict; probably to curry favor with the mob and jackals of the city:

We look for the entire press of the State to speak of the Kalloch case as it deserves—as a blow upon law, and a disgrace to the jury system, as they should. Long ago, it was said that the Sheriff, Mr. Desmond, had packed the jury in this case, and both are welcome to the compliment, if there be such thing in it. The reading of the evidence as it proceeded was ample to show to all that many of the witnesses for the defence were a herd of perjured rascals that deserve the penitentiary or something worse. Years will be exhausted in San Francisco before the foul blot can be removed. * * *

Of all the shameful things that has ever occured on this coast, the aquittal of Kalloch is the most disgraceful, and one of the hardest deals that the jury system has ever sustained. Better than any case we know of, it discloses the vile uses to which money may be applied, and in neither case are we bettered. The result is simply a shame to law and order, a disgrace to the State and a blister that will stick to the jury system for a long time.

BODIE is honored with a visit from a real live French Count—Count De Cousy—who arrived there a few days since to look after some mining property in which he is interested. Hope he'll prove a big count for al l concerned.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:
SATURDAY, APRIL 9.....1881

THOSE PHOTOS.—A lady friend, having lost a package of photog aphs of her children, writes to inquire if those referred to a week or two since in these columns may not be the same. We fear not. Our package comprises four pictures—three young ladies and one elderly one. There is no family resemblance between any two of them, and we are half inclined to think they are the collection of some careless young man who parts his hair in the middle. One of the young ladies has long, blonde (or sorrel) hair, all afloat; has an amiable look, and some symptoms of beauty, but not strongly drawn out. Another, of about the same age likewise has long, flowing and dark curly hair, and features quite pretty enough to attract a young man of the kind above described, only that she looks quite sad or sour, it's hard to say which. The third young lady, a little older than the other two, has her hair cut short and banged in bang up style, and is a good girl—too good for the sort of a young man above described. The last of the list was quite young a good many years ago, but evidently has recovered from that defect, if defect it is, but is hardly aware of the fact. Her hair, also dark, is put up on the Composite-Corinthian style—piled up in a square crown on top, partially banged in front and streaming to the winds elsewhere. But what she can want with a young man like the one above described is incomprehensible. The backs of the cards indicate that the pictures were taken, one in Los Angeles, one in Visalia, another in Bakersfield, and the fourth in "Lovewell's Gallery of Art," wherever that may be, and are wrapped up carefully, but not elegantly, in a piece of the San Francisco Examiner, giving a clue how the young man stands on the Presidential question.

A BIG STRIKE IN DEEP SPRING.—We learn from Mr. D. P. Macarter of Big Pine, that a rich gold strike has been made by Mr. Berry, the Recorder of the district. It seems that some time ago Mr. Berry commenced work on the old Hard Cash claim, one of the old locations. The present work consists of a shaft, which has been sunk to a depth of eighty-five feet. At this point immensely rich gold quartz has been struck, equal it is said to anything ever found in the Mammoth, at Lake. The ledge is reported to be seven feet wide, and the character of the ore is a honey-combed quartz. The claim is situated about five miles north of Gilbert's ranch, between Piper's and Deep Spring Valley, in Inyo county.

CATTLE SOLD.—Messrs. Perkins & Chatten, of Tulare county, through Mr. John Broder principally, have recently been making extensive purchases of cattle in this valley, some 1,200 or 1,400 head in all, and which will be started for their destination in a few days. Among others who have sold, to these purchasers are the following: Lank & Kehoe, 160 head, dairy cows principally, at $14 per head; S. G. Gregg, 400 stock cattle, at $11; Messrs. Lairds of Bishop, 200 head, mixed, at $13; Messrs. Hutchins, of the same locality, about the same number, but we are not informed as to the price, nor the names of a number of other sellers in that vicinity, whose lots together make up the total above stated.

SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENT.—The term for the present year of the Round Valley school closed on Friday last. The event was rounded up in an appropriate form by a very pleasing entertainment given in the evening by the children, in which singing and recitations were the leading, but not the only features. We regret that we are unable to give the name of the teacher, more especially as we believe it is a young lady.

SHAKE.—We had quite an emphatic earthquake shock here early Wednesday morning. In fact, it came in two divisions or "bumps," and made things crack considerably, but did no damage, except to reveal the fact that there is hardly a time piece that can be believed under oath; some of them fixing the time at 10 minutes past 6, others 20 minutes before, others again just as it happened, anywhere between 5 and 7.

THE CHROMO.—Last week we offered a chromo for a local item worth mentioning. We, this issue, get one such item, but in the shape of a birth notice, to be seen elsewhere, and upon which, we understand, a requisition is to be made for the aforesaid chromo. We repudiate—can't stand that—it would bankrupt a chromo factory to make awards for items of that kind in this prolific climate.

LETTER LIST.—The following list of unclaimed letters remaining in the Post-office at this place, at the 1st of the month, should have appeared last issue but by an accident was then omitted. But it goes anyhow this time: William Dickerson, Wm. Dosson, Mrs. H. Hamilton, Jack Kelso, King Olds, Theodore Olds.

RUNNING—From Capt. Keeler, who came up to-day from Keeler, we learn that his mill at that place started up yesterday on ore from the Armagh, belonging to the Company, and that the prospects are as good as could be desired for a long and successful run, most of the time with ten stamps.

NEW BASE.—John R. Hughes, these many years the main stand-by of Cerro Gordo, has purchased the John Shulte saloon property in Lone Pine, and, we presume, will make that place his principal base of operations hereafter.

A CHANCE.—Divers persons may find it to their interest to read certain advertisements in this issue relating to the surrender of county warrants and to furnish materials for and to rebuild the Bend City bridge.

SHOOTING AFFRAY AT BISHOP.—On Thursday evening last, William Adams, late Superintendent of the Indian Queen mine shot P. W. Forbes in Horton's saloon, at Bishop Creek, under circumstances as follows, as reported by parties from that locality: Forbes was the attorney in an attachment suit before Justice Brooks against "Johnny" Williams. About 7 in the evening, after a hearing in the case, Williams invited Forbes and a number of others to take a drink. Forbes declined the drink, being a temperance man, but accepted a cigar. Williams then began abusing Forbes in language too foul to be indicated in print, finally slapping his face, at the same time making an effort to draw his pistol. Up to this time Forbes had paid but little attention to him, but seeing that it was time for action, caught Williams by the throat. While sinking to the floor under the choking, Williams was seen by a by-stander to be trying to get his pistol in position to shoot, and thereupon said: "Look out; Johnny is going to shoot Pete" (Forbes). The attention of the latter being thus called to the pistol, he grabbed it and wrenched it out of Williams hand. The two then stood a little ways apart, Forbes with the captured pistol in his hand, remarking at the same time, "I've got his pistol and he can't shoot now," or words to that effect. At this juncture Adams came into the saloon, or stepped up from another part of the room, and drawing a derringer, advanced upon Forbes, saying: "Put up that pistol, or I'll kill you or you'll kill me," and fired at the same instant. The ball struck Forbes directly over the left eye, but at such an angle that it did not penetrate the skull. Forbes was standing with the captured pistol in his hand, and upon receiving the wound endeavered to cock it to return the shot. Before he got it leveled at Adams, however, it was discharged, the ball entering the floor. Adams, whose pistol, it seems, was empty, ran out of the place. It does not appear that Adams, previous to his own shot, was in any way involved or concerned in the trouble between the other two, and why he should have taken any stock in it at all, and especially in this murderous manner, is utterly unexplicable on any other theory than that seeing a large man standing with a revolver threatening another very much smaller in size, an irresistible impulse prompted him to shoot the large man to save the smaller. But this is the merest surmise, and a full investigation may put quite a different face on the affair. Adams was immediately arrested and brought before Justice Brooks, but there being no formal complaint or prosecuting witness present, the Justice discharged him. In a couple of hours afterward he was again arrested and brought before the Justice, who then placed him under $5,000 bonds. During this interval Mr. Forbes had gone to a doctor's office and had his wound dressed. Yesterdaay a complaint and order of arrest against Adams was sworn out of Justice Parker's office in this place, and District Attorney Laird has gone up to conduct the prosecution.

A CASE AT LAW.—The cases of Harris & Rhine vs. Frank, and that of Charles Baxter vs. G. W. Frank, and A. J. Marcus, involving some business transactions relating to the Kearsage Mining Company, have occupied the attention of our Superior Court during the past week. Colonel Manuel Eyre, a gentleman of the San Francisco bar, is here representing defendants. Messrs Reddy & Conklin are the attorneys for plaintiffs. These cases have been considerably muddled, but through the prompt and undoubted correctness of the rulings of Hon. John A. Hannah, matters were righted and judgment was rendered for plaintiffs. Executions were thereupon issued and forwarded to the Sheriff of San Francisco, for service. Upon their arrival there they were met by a preliminary injunction, issued by that bundle of legal inconsistencies and absurd (il) legal concreteness, miscalled a Superior Judge of San Francisco, yclept, Halsey, restraining the Sheriff from the execution of the process. It is a ridiculous proposition that one Court can interfere with the process of another of co-ordinate jurisdiction, and none but a Halsey would make so great asinco of himself. The cases now stand upon some supplementary proceedings which will not be disposed of until Col. Eyre becomes eligible o practice law as an attorney before our Superior Court.

GOLD BULLION.—There was a grand clean up last week at the Mexican camp in Beveridge district, and the result was over $8,000 in gold, which was brought in in different lots varying from $500 to $1,000 each. Nineteen arastras are said to be running, and about fifty men are at work, which makes a busy little camp. All the ore worked in the arastras is taken from the surface of the ore veins, wherever pay rock can be found, without any regard to the development of the mines. This camp is situated near the summit of the Inyo's, on the east slope, and about opposite Lone Pine. Taylor & McEvoy's mill which is located about one mile below the Mexican camp, is now running steadily.

TAKE NOTICE.—The Inyo County Board of Education will hold their first session for the current school year on the 3d Wednesday in May, a fact that may interest persons desiring to obtain teacher's certificates on examination.

COMING HOME.—Omie Mairs and family are booked in the passenger list at Omaha, to arrive in San Francisco yesterday, the 8th.

TO-NIGHT.—Inyo Lodge, F. & A. M. holds its stated meeting for this month, to-night.

A ST. PAUL, Minnesota, Republican paper, wants G. C. Gorham appointed as Consul to Honolulu, as it learns that the smallpox is prevailing there, and there would be a hope of his taking it and thereafter ceasing to be a trouble to his party.

THE LATEST.

The following, though but the headings of the dispatches in the Chronicle of the 6th, gives quite a complete synopsis of the news of the day up to that date:

Thirty villages were destroyed by the earthquake at Scio; 5,000 persons were killed and 40,000 are rendered destitute....In the new English budget there is a large reduction of duties on silverware, which will benefit American manufacturers....Beaconsfield's condition remains substantially unchanged ....The English newspapers are still carrying on the war against American pork products....Orders have been issued for all arms to be lodged at police stations in many counties of Ireland before the 7th inst....The Powers have agreed upon a proposal to be made to Greece on the frontier question.... Work has been delayed on the Palmer and Sullivan railroad in Mexico by the authorities....The Governor's message was received in the Senate and its recommendations referred to the several committees....No bills were introduced in the Senate....The Democrats in the Assembly developed obstruction tactics ....McClure introduced a legislative apportionment bill in the Assembly.... A joint Republican caucus was held in the Senate Chamber yesterday afternoon, at which there was much violent discussion on resolutions relating to the debris questions. In the caucus May said that in the present condition of affairs, apportionment was dead.

Terrible Earthquake.

Dispatches from Constantinople of the 4th instant give the following in relation to a most destructive earthquake on the island of Scio, some account of which is added as given in the San Francisco Chronicle:

A strong shock of earthquake in Scio, in the island of that name, yesterday, destroyed many houses and seriously damaged nearly all left standing. Later details say many inhabitants were killed and the remainder are encamped in the fields. Many neighbouring villages were destroyed. During the panic which ensued the Eastern Telegraph Company's offices were pillaged.

A Government despatch has been received concerning the earthquake at Scio, which stated that the effects were felt at Tchesme, and that the number of persons killed and injured is estimated at 3,000. The shock was felt at Carosta, Eubola and Tinos.

[Scio is an island in the Grecian archepelago, four miles off the coast of Asia Minor; it belongs to Asiatic Turkey, has an area of 400 square miles, and contains 50,000 inhabitants, mostly Turks. The surface of the island is rocky and uneven, being traversed by limestone ridges. The scenery is very picturesque. The country is irrigated by means of wells, though there are several small streams flowing through beautiful valleys, which present scenes of perpetual verdure. The productions are silk, cotton, wool, fruit and gum mastic, the last of which is the staple of the island. The wine of Chios (another name for Scio) was highly esteemed by the ancients, and still enjoys some repute. Scio, the capital city, where the earthquake was most destructive, is situated near the center of the east coast, and has a good harbor, defended by a castle. It has a population of about 14,500. The manufacture of velvet silk and cotton into fabrics is largely carried on in the city.]

ARTICLES of incorporation were perfected and an organization effected on the 16th ultimo, in New York City, by the Oriental Gold Mining Company and the Miller Gold Mining Company, each owning five claims, 1500x600 feet each, on the opposite side of the mountains from the now famous State Line properties. The Oriental properties are the Hillside, Red Ledge, Ellis, Canyon and South Dip. The Miller properties are the Nova Zembla, Boomerang, Independent, Keyston, and East Keyston. Each company is incorporated under the laws of New York, with a capital of $5,000,000 in 200,000 shares. The officers are Abel D. Breed, president; William McCaulley, Vice-president; D. F. Verdenal, Secretary, and George D. Roberts, Treasurer. Trustees—Abel D. Breed, William McCaulley, George D. Roberts, S. V. White, William F. Shirley, H. J. Hall and H. H. Hosner. Work will commence on these mines in a short time.

The Insect Population.

In 1849 Alexander von Humboldt estimated the number of species of insects preserved in collections to be between 150,000 and 170,000, Europe alone being represented by more than three times as many species of insects as of phanerogamous plants. Ten years ago Dr. Dr. Gerstacker estimated the number of species of insects to be 225,000, five times as many as the known species of all the other classes of animals together. If we assume that there exist in the whole world only three times as many insects as there are phanerogamous plants—the latest estimation of which approaches 225,000—we arrive at the startling sum of 750,000. Bewildering as this estimate appears, it is probably too low. The oak alone gives shelter and support to 150 species of insects, and the pine to more than 200, and one moth alone has 35 different species of parasites! Without going further in our calculations, we may safely assert that if the number of species of all other classes of animals should be doubled by new discoveries (which is rather improbable for some classes, and impossible for the vertebrates), the number of species of insects would be more than five times that of all other animals taken together.

THE oldest mining location in Mono county, referred to yesterday as having been made in 1854, in what is now Jordan District, was made by Colt, (not Cole), who is now a prominent mine owner in Mormon Basin, Utah. The location was made under spiritual guidance or direction, prior to the discovery of placer mines on Dog Creek, and no ledge was known to exist there or thereabouts at that time; but last Summer Jerome McDonald came into possession of the property, sunk a shaft a few feet and discovered a promising vein of ore. Mr. McDonald goes out Monday to resume work on the pioneer location. —[Bodie Free Press.

"WHAT is a cold?" asks "Chamber's Journal." Well, suppose you begin by sneezing so hard you nearly break your neck and bite your tongue terribly. Then your nose gets stuffed up, and you need about fourteen handkerchiefs a day, and the end of your nose gets more tender than a boil, and your eyes ache and are watery, and you begin to cough so the folks across the way can't sleep, and you feel lame all over, as though you had been under a fire engine, and you are ugly and kick the dog and chase the cat with the boot-jack, and tell your wife she can't cook, and make the house a gehenna for ten days—then you've got a cold.

HOW TO TEST ORE.—An Eastern mining journal says that if the prospector in the mountains finds a specimen and wishes to test it for mineral, let him proceed as follows: Pulverize the rock in question; take one part of that and two parts of gunpowder—that from a cartridge will answer—add sufficient water to make a thick dough; knead and make into a pyramid shape; let it dry in the sun or near the fire; when dry set it on a flat stone and apply a live coal to the summit of the cone. When combustion has ceased, if mineral was contained in the ore you will find a button by examining the ash.

THE roof of the M. E. church at Eureka, Nevada, is made of old tin cans. The "Sentinel" says: "The number of oyster cans used was 2,265. Besides these there were 3,356 quart fruit cans, and 665 one-gallon vegetable cans, making all joints water tight. Each piece of tin passed through the hands of the manufacturer thirteen times, which shows that the pieces were handled 81,818 times. The cost to the consumers of such luxeries as the cans contained amounted to $2,351 30."

A GENTLEMAN, not unknown in literary circles, was present at one of the Pope's receptions. The holy father approached him and said: "You are an American. Are you a Catholic or a Protestant?" "Holy father," responded our friend, "I am neither; I am a journalist."

HIGH EXPLOSIVES.—We shall begin in our next issue a series of articles on high explosives, which will de of great interest to all powder manufacturers and consumers. The first of the series will be on Gun Cotton.—[S. F. Scientific Press.

PHYSIC, for the most part, is nothing but the substitute of exercise and temperance.

TOM. FILLEBROWN came in today from the Walker Lake end of the narrow-guage railroad. He gave the reporter some items about the lake that are not generally known. For instance, the lake is about 29 miles long and 14 miles wide in one place, and is 1,900 feet deep. The water is strongly impregnant with soda, and yet the lake at the northern end contains trout in abundance—much finer-flavored fish, Mr. Fillebrown says, than those taken from Lake Bigler. "At the other end of the lake," remarks the narrator, "you might fish until the hair on your chin was a mile long, and you'd never get a bite."—[Virginia Chronicle.

The total population of Nevada is 62,265, of which 42,013 are males and 20,252 are females. The native population is 36,623, and the foreign is 25,942.

THE debt of New York city, according to a recent statement of the Controller, is $123,176,888. About forty millions of this is payable in 1904; eighteen millions in 1928.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

THIS HONEY WAS REMOVED FROM THE comb by centrifugal force, with a machine made for the purpose. It is therefore virtually the same as honey in the comb, only you don't have to eat the bees wax, which is indigestible and therefore disagrees with many persons. When first extracted the honey is liquid, but nearly all pure honey will candy or granulate in course of time, especially if exposed to the cold. Putting the cans in hot water for a short time will bring the honey to its fluid state without injury.

This Honey is put up in 10 pound cans, with patented screw tops, which renders it convenient for family use, and especially for the mines, to which it may be packed, even upside down, without leakage. A neat label on each can gives full directions.

Price, $1 50 per can, or 12½ cents per ℔ at the Apiary, if customers furnish their own receptacle. For sale at Harris & Ruine's, Independence, and at the Apiary, at Jacob Vagt's place, Camp Independence.

Special attention is given to reliable mining news from all parts of the country, which is gathered by an efficient corps of correspondents in every section, and from an extended exchange list. The metal and ore markets and gold, silver and miscellaneous stocks are reported and commented upon weekly by experienced financiers, who are unbiased by private interests, and upon these matters it is accepted as a reliable guide and unfailing instructor. Surveys of Mining Claims.

Following is the full text of an important circular just issued by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and must prove of interest to mine owners generally:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 3, 1881.

GENTLEMEN—On the 8th ultimo, the honorable Secretary of the Interior established the following rule in regard to the survey of mining claims, viz: "The mining survey first applied for shall have priority of action in all its stages in the office of the Surveyor General, including the delivery thereof, over any other survey of the same ground or any portion thereof;" and authorized the office to prescribe regulations for the enforcement thereof.

In the future, therefore, you will be governed by these regulations:

1st. The Surveyor General shall not order or authorize a survey of a claim which conflicts with one previously applied for until the survey first applied for has been completed, examined, approved, and platted, and the plats delivered.

2d. When the conflict does not appear until the field-notes of the respective surveys are returned, then the survey first applied for should be first examined, approved, and platted, and the plats delivered before the field-notes of the survey last applied for are taken up for examination or plats constructed.

3d. When the survey first authorized is not returned within a reasonable period, and the applicant for a conflicting survey makes affidavit that he believes (stating reasons for his belief) that such first applicant has abandoned his purpose of having a survey made, or is deferring it for vexatious purposes, to wit, to postpone the subsequent application, the Surveyor General shall give notice of such charges to such first applicant, and call upon him for an explanation, under oath, of the delay. He shall also require the Deputy Mineral Surveyor to make a full statement in writing, explanatory of the delay; and if the Surveyor General shall conclude that good and sufficient reasons for such delay do not exist, he shall authorize the applicant for the conflicting survey to proceed with the same, otherwise the order of proceeding shall not be changed. The Surveyor General shall retain on his files all affidavits, etc., relating to the controversy, and in the event of an appeal from his action, shall forward the same to this office.

The Deputy Surveyors are under your control in the execution of their work, and you will properly instruct them concerning the prompt execution thereof.

4th. Whenever an applicant for a survey shall have reason to suppose that a conflicting claimant will also apply for a survey for a patent, he may give notice in writing to the Surveyor General, particularly describing such conflicting claim, and file a copy of the notice of location of such conflicting claim. In such case the Surveyor General will not order or authorize any survey of such conflicting claim until the survey first applied for has been examined, completed, approved, and platted, and the plats delivered.

It is the intent of the rules adopted as aforesaid to furnish the first applicant in good faith for a survey with the opportunity to first present his application for patent at the district Land Office, and thus secure orderly proceeding. When the field-notes and plats have been delivered, however, it is to be held by the honorable Secretary that no authority exists to prescribe the order in which application for patents shall be filed, it being the right of the party to present his application when he chooses.

Therefore you will seek to avoid errors in the matter of the delivery of surveys, and in case of conflicting surveys will postpone the delivery of those last applied for for such temporary period as will be sufficient to enable the first applicant to present his application for patent.

When the survey first applied for is executed and delivered in ignorance of the fact of a conflict which shall speedily thereafter appear by the return of a subsequent survey, you will notify the prior party of the existence of conflict. If, however, the first survey shall have been delivered for any considerable period at the time the conflict is shown, such notice need not be given. Acknowledge receipt hereof. Very respectfully,

J. A. WILLIAMSON,
Commissioner.

Last Sunday J. H. Callison, betknown as "Doc." Callison, and Joe Turner got into a quarrel over a game of cards in Candelaria, when Callison drew his revolver and shot Turner three times, the latter dropping dead. Both men had been drinking. Turner was Deputy Sheriff of Esmeralda County under Sheriff Helm, and was well known by all the old residents. Callison is also an old resident; has been interested in mines in the county for years, and when not drinking is a peaceable man. He was taken to Belleville Thursday; had his examination before Justice A. G. Turner, and was aquitted, the testimony going to show that the killing was in self defense.—[Aurora Herald, April 9.

A "Call" reporter called to see Wheeler, the woman strangler, who is to be hanged in a few days. He found two lady visitors in the cell, and a number of beautiful boquets, presented by visitors during the day, tastefully arranged on a little stand. The "Call" is great on publishing full lists of the attendants at social gatherings of all sorts. Now, a list of these females who delight in making such fools of themselves as to go smiling and sniffling around such self-confessed beasts as this Wheeler would be of much greater interest to the general reader than that of the finest ball that ever occurred on Nob Hill.

In a recent interview at Deming, Charles Crocker gave a reporter to understand that the Southern Pacific Railroad Company had already completed the purchase of all the lands necessary in Texas and Louisiana to run that road through to New Orleans. Two hundred miles of road are already in operation and 45,000 tons of steel rails have also been purchased, and the road is to be completed to New Orleans by the 1st of July, 1882.

ANGRY wife (time, 2 A. M.)—"Is that you, Charles?" Jolly husband—"Zash me!" Angry wife—"Here I've been standing at the head of the stairs these two hours. Oh, Charles, how can you?" Jolly husband (bracing up)—"Shtandin' on your head on t' shtairs! Jenny, I'm shprized! How can I? By Jove! I can't! Two hours, too? 'Stronary woman!"

YOUNG Blenkinsop—"Father, I intend to become a minister when I get through college. What do you think of Unitarianism?" Father—"Well, my son, your good figure would take well in any church, but as for Unitarianism itself, you might as well try to run a circus without a clown as a church without a devil."

The State Line Mine—Lida Valley News.—Montezuma District.

From a gentleman just in from the southeastern portion of Esmeralda county we learn the following items of news:

I. M. Taylor is back from his New York trip, and says the balance of the pipe for conveying the water to the State Line mine is now on the road, and will arrive at the mine about the 15th of this month.

As soon as the pipe arrives a large number of men will be put at work digging the ditch and putting in the pipe. About five miles of pipe is already laid. The machinery for the mill is all on the ground, but nothing will be done with it until the water is brought in. Then the mill will be put up. There are at present only enough men at work in the mine to sink in the main shafts and run the drifts already open, but as soon as the water is brought in a large force of miners will be put on. The mine is looking better than ever before.

The Centennial mine, at Gold Mountain, struck a rich body of ore a few days ago, at a depth of 90 feet.

Steve Roberts spent several days in the district week before last, and bought several mines for the company he represents; he also tried to buy others which he failed to obtain.

N. A. Garvin, agent for Roberts and company, also secured several mines and jumped some mining property which will probably bring the parties to the halls of justice at at the county seat, next term of court. Garvin says the company for which he is acting are going to put up a mill, and will have it running before the State Line will theirs.

Considerable prospecting is going on at Gold Mountain, and parties are securing timber lands and water rights near there. Quite a number of wood choppers are at work cutting and piling up cordwood.

Rich ore has been struck in the Centennial mine, at Lida Valley. This mine is considered one of the best pieces of property in Southeastern Esmeralda.

The Andrews & Scott five-stamp mill is running steadily on ore from the Centralia mine, owned by Peter Anderson.

The old Lida Valley mill is undergoing repairs and will soon be in running order. An 80 ton test is to be made on ore from the Lida Belle mine as soon as the mill is ready.

John Chiatovitch, acting agent for a New York company who own several mines in Silver Peak and Palmetta district, has put several men at work on the company's mines. The company mean to open up their properties and see what there is in them.

John Howell is erecting a smelting furnace at Montezuma, with a capacity of fifteen tons. He has let a contract to parties there to furnish 25,000 bushels of charcoal.

A few men are prospecting the mines of Montezuma district.—[Aurora Herald, April 9.

THE Ludwig copper furnace is in successful operation. They have for some time been piling up bullion at the rate of three or four tons a day. The bullion produced at the furnace is about 95-100 fine. The company is well satisfied at the results thus far obtained, and only regret that they did not erect the furnace at Dayton. Charcoal costs at the works 24 cents per bushel, and about 25 bushels are used in smelting a ton of ore. Experiments have been made with coke, and hereafter will form about one-half of the fuel used.—[Candelaria True Fissure.

THE Pioche "Record" is informed by an old and experienced miner that it is altogether unnecessary, and a very foolish and dangerous practice, for a man to try to pick out an unexploded giant powder cartridge from a drill hole, thereby running the risk of getting killed or maimed. By taking a piece of giant powder cartridge and placing it over the hole containing the unexploded cartridge, piling a little dirt around it and then shooting it off, the concussion of the explosion will cause the cartridge in the hole to explode.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

SATURDAY, APRIL 16..... 1881

JAY GOULD has conspired with the Central Pacific to prevent through shipments of freight to California by the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé road. It seems the new line commenced with a much larger patronage than was anticipated by the Union Pacific, and Gould thought it best to commence buldozing operations early, and prevent the new line from achieving any popularity, even before it was opened. He, however, was compelled to allow the new line to carry Arizona freights, but conceded that much only because he couldn't help it. It is difficult to figure out any great profits to accrue to Stanford & Co. in this arrangement, seeing that their Southern Pacific, though a supposed through line, becomes nothing more in fact than a line of rails a thousand miles or so out into the wilderness, with no sources of business except transporting a few through passengers and a little way freights, and little of that going from the west to Arizona. Through Gould's "concession," the whole of the freights, a few articles excepted, will come from the East, and travel on Southern Pacific rails but a very short distance at the most. From all this, we infer that Stanford couldn't help himself either, else Arizona freights, like all the rest, would have had first to visit San Francisco before reaching its destination, no matter over which road it came to the coast. The present arrangement can't continue a great while; there will be "kicking" somewhere—if not Stanford, then by the Atchison road, which will have to complete the 35th parallel road through to this coast for its own protection.

IT is refreshing to note the murderous coolness with which certain politicians regard death as a factor in partisan predomination at Washington. Mahone, for instance, is reported as being prostrated almost to death's door by the excitement of the Democrats' attack upon his course. Thereupon, it is said, the Democrats calmly discussed the propriety of keeping up their attacks hoping to worry Mahone into the grave, that they may thereby again get control in the Senate. Then, to offset this, the Republicans in a very matter-of-course sort of a way, say that the proper thing for them to do is to get Mahone and Dan Voorhees to go on with their proposed duel, counting upon it as a sure thing that the little man's (Mahone's) bullet would easily perforate the diaphragm of the big man (Voorhees, the Tall Sycamore of the Wabash), and thereby create a vacancy to be filled by a Republican Governor, and thus insure Republican supremacy in the Senate—which teaches decent people to keep out of the United States Senate, if not out of politics in general.

THE Commissioner of the General Land Office recently submitted to the Secretary of the Interior a draft of the decision in the case of the townsite of Eureka vs. Conant et al., mineral claimants, prepared conformably to the existing practice of inserting in townsites and mineral patents a clause of reciprocal reservation in cases of townsites upon mineral lands, and suggesting a change in the practice. Secretary Kirkwood, upon consideration of the matter has just rendered a decision to adhere to the present practice of the Land Office, which is to insert reservation clauses in mineral patents in cases where patents for the same lands have have already issued upon townsite entries and in townsite patents upon entries in mineral regions.

THE Esmeralda Herald now enters upon its eighth volume, and changes its firm name from M. M. Glenn to Glenn Bros., proprietors, Hugh Glenn having purchased a half interest in the paper. Without any discount, the Herald is about the best country weekly journal of our acquaintance, except for one thing, viz: two volumes a year for a folio weekly is piling up volumes rather too rapidly—it implies too much age and wisdom to correspond, don't you see?

THE Tucson Star advocates a narrow guage railroad from that city to Hermosillo. It says that such a road would stimulate all the industries of life in a country of wonderful mineral and agricultural resources.

A FEW minutes past 2 o'clock Sunday morning last, the coast counties got the heaviest shaking up by an earthquake they have had for many a day.

A DISPATCH from Paris says that the new Czar of Russia is determined on a war with Germany.

THE reduction of the public debt for March will not be less than $5,000,000.

AN IMPORTANT MATTER.

It is certainly important to the future of this valley, and the county at large, that if we are to have any railroad at all cutting into any portion of this isolated region, it should cut directly through this valley from end to end instead of from a hundred or more miles to the eastward, with a high mountain range intervening. Should the Carson and Colorado road be built east of the Inyos, as now proposed, it will, we believe, prove a detriment rather than an advantage to the interests of this valley proper. Though it will open up a large scope of desert country to the miner's pick, and create lively markets for all kinds of agricultural products, yet this valley can derive but little profit in supplying the demand thus to be created, besides losing what trade we now command with that region. With the road there, the conditions will be pretty much as follows: Many camps will spring up throughout that section. Supplies of all sorts, especially farm produce, must be shipped in. The railroad in its course from Reno south passes through or near a series of extensive farming valleys lying along the foot of the Sierras until it comes near the northern extremity of this valley, the largest and best from the northern rim of the Great Basin, along the foot of the great range, to San Bernardino. At the point mentioned it bends squarely to the eastward—"takes to the woods" as it were, leaving this great valley entirely out in the cold. It is plain to be seen that those northern valleys, having the advantage of direct railroad communication, can send their surplus products to all the camps out east of us for less money than similar articles can be hauled by teams an equal distance across the mountain to the same destination. On the other hand, were the railroad to run through this valley, it would still develop the mining interests along the eastern as well as this, the western slope of the Inyos, and give a market not only for all our own surplus products but of those valleys as well, should mining developments come any where near reasonable anticipations.

While we do not mean to say that a change of route from the east side of the mountain to the west side would be to the advantage of the mining interest of the said east side, we do mean to say that such a change would be immensely to our own advantage on this side, and, as above present conditions, greatly enhance the mining business on that side as well as this. As now mapped out, the road runs too far east to be of material benefit to the mines of the Inyo range, even on its eastern slope. The Inyo range (White Mountain included) is the mineral deposit, par excellence, of this southern inland country north of the Colorado, east to Utah. It is literally an unbroken series of mineral ledges from one end to the other—over a hundred and twenty-five miles. No man can even guess the amount of business the development of these innumerable ledges will create; but it may be accepted as a common-sense conclusion that if this series does not in the aggregate promise enough to pay a railroad, it is useless to look for such in the outlying spurs out in the desert. There are good mines out there, beyond doubt, and in time there will be flourishing camps there. But at the best they must be wide distances apart as compared to such as equally favorable transportation facilities would build up along the entire length of the Inyo range.

The natural route, both for business and topographically, for a trunk north and south line is directly along the eastern foot of the Sierras from Oregon to the Southern Pacific. It is the only continuous stretch of country in all this Great Basin where a permanent population at all points does, or ever can, exist. It is the only possible route for a railroad to command the traffic of such an extended line of permanent business, and at the same time, build up a greater amount of mining business proper than can be hoped for upon any other line whatever, running whatever course it may through this interior. A road running through this valley will command the traffic of a present and fixed population of 3,000, all told, and all that of the mining interests of both slopes of the Inyo range, as well as the western slope of the Sierras; whereas, if run away to the eastward, as proposed, it will not get scarce a dollar's worth out of this entire list, save a portion, and but a portion of the camps of the eastern side foot-hills. The present terminus of the C. & C. road will get as much of the traffic alluded to where it now is as the road ever will at any other point on its mapped line after passing Columbus. Continued on its proposed line from that point, the road will take something from us, and give but little in return. It diverges from the Sierras at the very point where it should head to skirt them closer. In so doing it abandons for all time the business of the most extensive and only established section or settlement in its reach south of its present terminus. By thus "taking to the woods," or the desert, to head off possible future opposition from the north, it only invites and proves the need of an opposing line from he south, and whence such a road will certainly come, if there is no through line, giving the same advantages, from the north.

The C. &. C. Company wil certainly do well to look into these facts before making another advance. And it behooves us all to have this road in our midst instead of just far enough away to be a damage. As a step to this end we propose in due time to try to collect full statistics, as suggested by Mr. Wasson, of the entire passenger and freight traffic of the county, as it new exists. If business men, or shippers and receivers of freights of all descriptions, will aid, that part can be approximated very closely. The showing may not be all that is required, yet it should be made.

A PRESS dispatch from Dallas, Texas, April 10th, says: It will be recollected that two years ago Rev. W. G. Veal, a prominent Methodist preacher, was arraigned for a carnal and lustful assault on Mrs. Emma Griffin, at Waxahachie. This was his second appearance in Court for such scandalous conduct. His Church found him guilty, the Masonic fraternity expelled him, and the Court fined him $500. From the latter verdict he appealed to the higher Court, which granted him a new trial. His second trial terminated at Waxahachie to-day in a verdict of guilty and a fine of $1,000 and costs.

Two murderers are to be hung at Bakersfield on the 27th of this month. They are both Mexicans, which probably accounts for the fact juries could be found to bring in a verdict of murder in the first degree. People who have no money held for capital crimes were never known to be afflicted with emotional insanity, and very rarely with "self defense." There is no question though but the two condemned men richly earned the rope. Their names are respectively Josef Rickard Silveria and Cruz Dominic.

A SAN JOSE spinster has sent a long and urgent letter to the Herald there protesting against the rumored project for equalizing the sexes numerically by the immigration of ladies from New England to this coast. The fair and ardent writer claims, and with a vehemence born of personal indignation, asserts that there should be no unnatural additions to the female population of California until the marriageable maidens already here shall have been supplied with husbands.

ON the Comstock disgusted miners are turning longing eyes toward the new bonanza of Wood river. Ore is reported to lie about near the surface in great profusion, but at present it is buried four feet under the snow. Bellevue is the rather poetical name of the chief town near the miner, which is a four-days trip from Blackfoot, Idaho. There is no question that next month will see a great hegira of the old prospectors from Nevada to the new mining region.

GERMAN society in Indianapolis is said to be deeply excited over a double-headed scandal, through which two divorce suits are pending. These were filed by August Richter and Rev. Henry Baumiller, each on a charge of adultery. A notable peculiarity in the case is a reported compromise, whereby each of the dissatisfied husbands is to marry the divorced wife of the other, but Richter is to pay Baumiller $1,000 boot in the trade.

AT Los Angeles they seem to be in trouble as to how to raise eight thousand dollars, to pay off a mortgage on the Terrace property selected for the seat of the Normal school. The city cannot donate, nor levy a tax for that purpose, so the private subscription plan will be tried. It may succeed, but the amount is quite large.

ANOTHER evidence of the critical state of affairs in Europe is the purchase of vast quantities of arms and ammunition by foreign powers. At the manufactory of Herr Krupp in Prussia orders have been received for a large number of heavy guns. Roumania has ordered 100, Greece 700, Sweden 50, Holland 120 and Italy 400.

IT is said that a few weeks since the Nevada Bank would advance next to nothing on Comstock shares. Recently they began to open their coffers and will advance quite liberally on them. San Francisco operators construe this as a straw in favor of a better stock market. And it seems to be at hand.

A GREAT DEAL of rain has fallen throughout the coast counties during the past few days, greatly to the delight of the farmers, crops, generally, standing much in need of it.

THUS far this year the United States have received over five times as much specie from Europe as last year, the gold receipts being about twelve times as much.

The Missouri river is 21 feet above low water mark, and is causing sad havoc at Omaha and other points.

THE following is an extract from the observations of European astrologers: The planets which are at present such conspicuous objects in our evening sky are Saturn, Jupiter, Venus. All are in motion eastward, but Venus is moving so much more rapidly than the other two, that she will pass over Jupiter at a distance of seven lunar diameters, on the 22d (February) instant. In like manner, she will pass over Saturn at a distance of eleven lunar diameters on 2d March, after which she will continue to move eastward, but with slackening speed, until April 11th, when she becomes stationery, and then retraces her path to take her place in one of the most remarkable planetary assemblings ever chronicled. On April 22d the Sun, Mercury, Venus, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune and Vesta, will all be in close proximity, the Sun, Jupiter and Saturn being in actual conjunction. Such groupings are of extreme rarity in the annals of astronomical science, and it is thought highly probable by many biblical students that a similar grouping, which took place at the beginning of the Christian era, formed the asterism, or star, which led the Magi to Bethlehem. There is a wide spread popular belief now that as the planetary conjunctions of 1880 years ago heralded the first advent, so the conjunctions of April will usher in the second.

THE New York Tribune says: The slaughter of the French expedition, which had set out to make preliminary explorations and surveys for the Trans-Sahara Railroad, is a most melancholy recital. The engineers had a strong band of followers, and were well armed and equipped, but were surprised by hostile tribes and all the leaders except two were killed. These two retreated with sixty-one men, to receive from another treacherous tribe sympathy and poisoned dates. The only surviving Frenchman, Polevuin, with twenty-eight natives, was at last accounts fighting for his life with another band of marauders, and the chances of a rescue were slender. If the pioneers and surveyors are exposed to such deadly perils as these, the traveling public will learn with composure of the failure of the enterprise and the delays which it involves. Rapid transit is not a pressing need in the Sahara.

THE Cleveland Leader contains a description of the remarkable electric light manufactured there by the Brush company in order for use in the British navy, and the successful test made of it. It has a 10,000 candle illuminating power, fifty times greater than the ordinary electric lamp for street lighting, and is believed to be the largest and most powerful light ever made by human hands. It is designed to be used in night attacks and to scrutinize the seas for torpedoes. A forty horse power engine is required to produce the light. The carbons used are two inches and a half thick. The intensity of heat generated by the carbon point is half a million degrees. It is calculated that with an ordinary reflector the beam of light will be so powerful a person five miles away can see to read by it.

A PROPOSED anti-Jewish meeting of university students at Pesth, the Hungarian capital, having been prohibited by the police, and the prohibition having been ratified by the Premier, to whom they appealed, Herr Istoczy, a prominent Jew-hater, questioned the Minister President in Parliament respecting the reason of this "violation of the liberty of public meeting." Herr Tisza answered that agitations against nationalities or religious societies could not be permitted. Herr Istoczy there upon declared that a general struggle against Judaism would be commenced at the next election.

A FEW weeks ago the telegraph announced that Jim Currie, the murderer of Porter, the actor, in Texas a couple of years ago, had been shot and killed in a drunken brawl. It turns out now that it was another Currie who was slain, and that James is out West alive and well. In the meantime, however, pretty nearly every paper in the coun- has congratulated its readers on the violent taking off of this murderous ruffian. Mr. Currie could fill a large trunk with his obituary notices, and he is no doubt touched by their wonderful unanimity in describing him as a monster.

TEXAS is increasing in population more rapidly than any State in the Union. It is reported that seven thousand settlers enter her border every day. At this rate she will soon distance the Empire State. It is also reported that 30,000 men are at work constructing new railroads in the State.

DON MATEO KELLER died of heart disease while sitting at the breakfast table at his home on the morning of the 11th instant, aged 70 years. Matthew Keller, or "Don Mateo" as he was colloquially called, was one of the best known, most enterprising and useful citizens of Southern California.

LETTER FROM THE CAPITAL.

SACRAMENTO, April 10.

MESSRS. EDITORS—The extra session will enter upon its second week tomorrow. It will probably wrestle all week with the second readings of the appropriation and road and highway bills—the first in the Assembly, the second in the Senate. The former may reach the Senate and the latter the Assembly this week, as the Senate had already spent sixty days over a road bill, and the appropriation bill is not necessarily a complicated subject. The classification idea has been left out of the road bill entirely, which has enabled the Senate to make any such headway at all. But the best bill that body can send to the Assembly will cause much wrangle, even if they keep out the word street. The larger cities want to include streets, and if they insist upon it there is no telling where it will end, if at all. As to the

APPORTIONMENT BUSINESS,

I doubt whether any law will be enacted at all, if we should sit here all Summer, unless there is a radical modification of feeling all round. It was the main cause for an extra session, and even now there is more or less debris into it also. On Friday I was before the appropriation committee, for the purpose of helping along the

IRRIGATION SURVEYS.

The State Engineer stated the case very clearly, and the undersigned did what he could to impress upon the committee the fact that Inyo county was well watered and possessed much good irrigable land. Should the appropriation be near what it ought to be, the survey will be extended there the present year, and an official report made upon the locality and quantity of water, and the locality, quality and variety of land contiguous, as well as the probable cost of canals, ditches and reservoirs necessary to properly develop the agricultural resources. The State Engineer is getting up a map on an extended scale, which when completed will show all this, and when once the reports and maps are completed the work will be final, as it were, and will not have to be done over again. All this could and should have been done twenty years ago, and the geological survey should never have stopped, notwithstanding old Whitney's cranky ways. Little New Jersey expended $100,000 last year on this sort of work. Just now when capital and emigration are being diverted to other States, Territories and countries, we are quarreling in committee, on the floors of the Legislature, through the press and every other way over the most vital questions, like so many schoolboys or men in their second childhood. One source of opposition to the water and land survey and report is the fact that so much of the water is already claimed or monopolized, and therefore there is no occasion for setting all the facts before the people at large. On the other hand, the subject of eventually storing the vast quantities of water that run away entirely during rains and melting snows, and are not utilized by those who have vested rights. Were this sort of information compiled in practical form and given to the world it would be bread cast upon the waters that would return manifold, and the cost would be a mere bagatelle in comparison. There are not a dozen pages of really official matter published by his State to be found in the State Library, concerning the variety, extent and locality of the mineral substances existing in California, and which possess a commercial value and enter into the arts and manufactures. The State Mineralogist will no doubt do full justice to Inyo county on that score as fast as he can get round to it, and if the State Engineer is enabled to carry out his plans it will be not a great while before Californians will know as much about their own State, possibly, as they do about Arizona, Mexico, Alaska, Australia and other more convenient localities. However, there is much bad blood existing here throughout every feature of legislation—political, private, personal, official and what not—and what the result of this extra session is to be, it were foolish to attempt to forecast. J. W.

THE Kern County Californian in a long article on the subject of riparian rights says:

The most important case ever tried in this county, or perhaps the State, will commence in the Superior Court of this county Friday, the 15th inst. It is entitled "Miller & Lux and J. C. Crocker vs. The Kern Valley Land and Water Company." The gist of the complaint is that the plaintiffs are the owners of a large body of land lying along Buena Vista and Tulare Lake, and that the value of these lands depends upon the moisture imparted to them by the waters of Kern river, that formerly meandered through them; that they are riparian owners, and that, in consequence of the wrongful diversion by the defendants (not riparian owners), of part of Kern river into the Calloway Canal they have been greatly damaged and the value of their lands destroyed. The complaint is long, contains a great many points and specifications and is drawn up with great ability.

PROF. BAIRD, National Fish Commissioner, gives out that although the Congressional appropriation is hardly sufficient for the purpose, he intends to have the salmon hatchery on McCloud River—which was swept away by flood—in operation again by the 1st of July. This news will be welcomed all over the country. The McCloud River Hatchery has distributed millions of salmon eggs, sending them wide-cast to be propagated in lakes and running streams, which have since yielded a generous supply of these populas food fishes.

ALEXANDER III is by no means easy in mind. The shadow of nihilism is over him as it was over his father. His principal occupation seem to be looking out for concealed mines of dynamite.

The Boss Bullion Shipment.

In answer to a query as to the largest weekly yield of the Bonanza mines, the Gold Hill News says;

There were, during the years 1876 and 1877, several bullion shipments from the Bonanza mines which excited the wonder and admiration of the world. It would take time to look over the list of these shipments for the largest amount turned out in any one week by a single mine. Your questions can be answered, moreover, without it.

The biggest bullion shipment ever made at one time from the Comstock was by the Bonanza mines for the week ending Dec. 29, 1877. It was as follows:

Con. Virginia shipped at that date 133 bars of bullion weighing 16,668 lbs, and valued at $540.196.06.

The California shipped 129 bars, weighing 16,130 lbs., and valued at $558 903.66.

Summary—Dec. 29, 1877, bullion shipment from the Bonanza mines: 262 bars of bullion (16 tons, 818 lbs.), valued at $1,099,099.71.

This was one shipment and made for that week, but really included eight days run of the mills. It was loaded on flat cars like pig iron and sent on the Virginia and Truckee railroad without any special guard.

A BILL recently introduced in the Missouri Legislature to tax railroad companies on their gross earnings is said to meet with considerable favor. At present the companies are taxed on the value of their property; the new bill provides that they shall be taxed on their gross earnings, at the rate of 40 cents on the $100, for State purposes only. The tax would yield about $85,000 a year to the State.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

SATURDAY, APRIL 16. 1881

The Bishop Creek Shooting Affray.

Last Saturday, the 9th, Wm. Adams, Jr., was brought before Justice R. Fred Brooks, at Bishop Creek, for examination on the charge of assault to commit murder upon the person of P. W. Forbes, as stated in our issue of that date.

G. W. Gill, Esq., appeared as counsel for Adams, and District Attorney Laird for the people.

A number of witnesses were examined, including Forbes himself, who, notwithstanding his wound, was able to appear and testify in the case.

From Mr. Forbes' testimony it appears that after he had thrown Williams to the floor, Adams said, "You are choking him; he is my friend," to which Forbes replied "Of course I am," at which Adams caught Forbes and pulled him off of Williams. Forbes, knowing that Williams would shoot him, grabbed William's pistol from the floor during the struggle, and was standing with it in his hand pointed to the floor, when Adams said, "Put up that pistol, or you or I will die right here," and fired at the same instant, the ball striking Forbes over the left eye in the eyebrow. We give this much of the testimony for the reason that from what has been stated heretofore, it was the inference that Adams appeared upon the scene only at the moment of the shooting. The other facts adduced are substantially the same at given last week.

Defendant offered nothing in defense, and was held in $20,000 bonds to answer with the following sureties: Wm. B. Hutchings, T. K. Hutchison, J. M. Horton, I. P. Yaney, W. J. C. Gill, C. H. Parsons and John Blair.

John J. Williams, was held on a similar charge to answer in the sum of $5,000, with Wm. O. Harrell, J. F. Hutchison and P. Laird as sureties.

The ball crashed through Forbes' skull, but did not penetrate the brain. The wound was dressed by Dr. Howell, who testified that it was very liable to prove a very serious matter. We are glad to say, however, that Mr. Forbes is likely to recover without permanent injury.

Messrs Reddy & Conklin have been retained for the defense.

AN INDIAN MURDERED.—Several Indians got on one of their regular jamborees at Big Pine on Sunday last, and had lots of fun—in their peculiar way. A well-informed Big Piner denies that that the fire-water was obtained at that point, for the reason that the town was well-nigh on to a whisky famine at the time, and no one had it in quantities sufficient to sell it by the bottle, to Indians or white men. However, the Indians known as "Frank Hutch," "Mose" and "Charley" had been gambling during the day. In the evening one of the latter mounted his horse and threw a lasso over the neck of the one known as "Frank Hutch," dragging him some distance. He was then held by one while the other deliberately cut his throat, almost severing the head from the body. Such is the Indians' account of the bloody affair. The profound regret of the community is that the wrong throat was cut. It should have been that of the miscreant who sold the whisky.

MERCHANDISING.— Ex-Sheriff Moore has given official affairs the shake, and taken himself unto merchandising at Big Pine, having purchased the business of D. P. Macarter. "Jack" is a popular, thorough-going business man and is bound to do well in the prosperous location he has selected. His preliminary advertisement will be found elsewhere.

A WARNING.—As a warning to evil-doers, it becomes our duty to state that Baker, the last tenant of the County Jail, bagged during one single hunt in his cell by candle light, no less than 114 voracious bed-bugs, and gave it as his general opinion that if he had felt any permanent interest in the sport, that he could have done much better than that.

THE PROPER THING.—We deem it proper to remind whom it may concern that yesterday was Good Friday, that to-morrow will be Easter Sunday and Thursday next is when seven planets will simultaneously take a square pull at the sun, with what effect remains to be seen.

RETURNED.— We received a call yesterday from Mr. C. McVickars, who is on his return to Bishop Creek from Los Angeles where he has been visiting for three or four weeks. He proposes to open up his watch and jewelry establishment at Bishop for a permanent stay.

DEPARTED.—Mrs. Ellen Grangey nee Eudey, to the regret of many old friends, bade this region a final adieu early this week, intending to rejoin her husband and other members of her family in Calaveras county.

RESIGNED.—H. L. Childs, Esq., formerly of this paper, has resigned the position of Deputy Internal Revenue Collector, so long held by him. He is succeeded by R. J. Van Voorhies, who resides at Bodie.

BASKETED.—Another anonymous communication, this time from Bishop Creek, duly consigned to the waste basket. Will contributors ever learn that their names must accompany communications?

ASSESSMENT.—Notice is given in this issue that the Swansea Mining Company has levied a five-cent assessment (No 2) on its capital stock, delinquent May 14.

PREACHING.—Rev. F. M. Willis will hold services at the school house in this place to-morrow evening at the usual hour.

WHAT "OLD INYOITE" HAS TO SAY.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 11, 1881.

MESSRS. EDITORS—I have been cruising in and about Colusa county for the past five weeks, and am very favorably impressed with its wealth, productiveness, and industry. It is purely a farming section, and such a thing as a piece of quartz, no matter how rich in gold or silver, exhibited in any of its towns, would excite but very little attention.

WHEAT

Is the staple article, and at the Willows alone--which is the terminus of the Northern Pacific railroad—there is at present stored one million sacks of wheat--last year's growth. Farmers have held on to their cereals for a rise, but storage, interest on cash advanced, re-sacking and handling will certainly eat up what little they could have realized had they sold when they harvested the crop.

DR. GLENN--

Defeated candidate for Governor, and the boss farmer of Colusa—charters steamboats, loads his grain on them to be carried down the Sacramento, then charters vessels at the Bay and ships direct to Europe. By this course he realized handsomely last year, and expects to again do so this season.

Since my return to the city I have had the pleasure of meeting many Inyoites, and by a little finesse last Saturday assembled in room 9, at the Lick House, enough for quite a reunion. The following were present: O. I. Mairs, wife and children, V. G. Thompson, Sher. Stevens, Mrs. Eudey and daughters, Lizzie, and Mrs. Annie Gill, Miss Eva Shepherd, Dave Regensburger and yours truly. As usual on such occasions, we talked over

OLD TIMES AND PRESENT TIMES,

And made wild predictions, etc., as to times to come. Many interesting reminiscences were recalled, and, altogether, a very pleasant hour was passed.

OLD INYOITE.

POSTPONED.—Owing to the absence of District Attorney Laird at Bishop last Monday, the long pending case of the People vs. Lufkin was again postponed. Can't say how long.

GOOD WORK.—The street at the corner of Edwards and Market has been nicely filled up to the grade.

THE papers published in many of the worked out mining camps of Nevada, are filled with information for their starved out readers as to how to reach Wood River. If energetic prospectors or enterprising capitalists desire to reach the richest and most continuously extensive mining region in America, let them take stage or other conveyance at Carson City and keep going south till they get well into the mountains of Esmeralda county, Nevada, or into Mono or Inyo counties of California. If they are in search of mines rich in gold and silver, let them come to Aurora, Bodie, Jordan or Tioga; if they want mines rich in free gold, let them come to Bodie or proceed to Homer, Beveridge or other districts in Inyo, and if they want to find mines that are far richer in argentiferous or auriferous galena than anything yet shown in the Wood River country, let them go to Tarrytown and other districts in the vicinity of Deep Springs Valley, a few miles south of Bodie.—Bodie Free Press.

THE decision of a Chicago judge that a man is not necessarily a lunatic because he believes in spiritual manifestations, is attracting some attention. Colonel H. W. H. Cushman, deceased, had insured his life for $10,000 in favor of a medium by the name of Annie Lord Chamberlain. Cushman's heirs contested the policy on the ground of insanity caused by spiritualism. He had attended the medium's seances, and believed that he had held communications with the spirits of departed friends. Among other witnesses produced on the trial were several men of standing and intellect, who testified to their belief in spiritualism. The Judge decided that Colonel Cushman was competent to transact business, and sustained his action in the insurance policy.

A LADY, in giving a description of the inaugural ball says: "One of the handsomest ladies at the ball was Mrs. Bruce, wife of the colored ex-Senator. Her dress was of black velvet, with old gold satin trimmings, with lace and buttercups. She is tall, with a fine figure, brown eyes and hair, and ha exquisite teeth." The Southern people would have been unreasonable indeed had they given the inaugural address other than a favorable reception. It is all that could have been expected and more. While, of course, distinctly and emphatically Republican, it is also distinctly and emphatically national.—St. Louis Republican.

DISPATCHES in regard to the crop outlook were received at this office yesterday from nearly every county in the State. The general tenor of the reports is that the grain and fruit yield will compare favorably with former seasons, and in many localities be greatly in excess. Frost has injured the fruit crop in some sections, but notwithstanding there will be enough and to spare. Large quantities of last year's grain still remain in store. Upon the whole according to the advices received, the farmers have cause to congratulate themselves upon their harvest prospects.—Record-Union.

SPEAKING in defense of the fumes of the Eureka (Nev.) smelting furnaces, a prominent physician of that town states that the worst case of fever and ague that ever shook can be cured through their agency, and for malarial fevers of any kind they are a perfect specific. The arsenic and sulphur in the fumes are evidently the remedial agents.

KINCHEN GINN, a convict in the penitentiary at Goldsboro, N. C., was put in the sick ward with another man, who died. After the preparations for burial, Ginn placed the dead man in his bed, and covered him over nicely, got into the coffin himself, dressed in the burial clothes, and when in the potter's field frightened the driver away and escaped.

THE Missouri has been higher in the past few days than ever before known, and has occasioned great distress and pecuniary losses, as will be seen from the following dispatch, dated April 12:

The overflowed water of the Missouri is slowly subsiding, though the ice is piled to a height of from ten to thirty feet along the bank and on the bars and bottoms. Yankton is filling with refugees from the lowlands, and people are doing their best to care for them. Outside help is needed, as the resources of citizens are not adequate to the demand. Thousands of people are rendered homeless, and all they posses has been swept away. Nearly all the stock on the lowlands, amounting to more than 100,000 head, are drowned. Farm houses and dwellings are submerged, or floating about in the waters. On the site of Green Island, out of 20 houses, but one remains, and the ice is from ten to twenty feet deep. The bottom from here to the Big Sioux, sixty miles long and from five to fifty miles wide, is still under water. Yankton parties are still out in yawls, bringing in people. Yankton is almost destitute of fuel and coal oil, and short of provisions. The winter still holds on, increasing the suffering among the homeless farmers who have been drowned out. All railroads north and west of here are snowed in. The damages to steamboat property will amount to $60,000, including two boats sunk, the Western and the Tantenille. The steamers Peninah, Nellie Peck, Belle, Helena, Blackhills, Josephine, Mead and Big Horn, are all lying high upon the ice far inland. They are damaged to the extent of $30,000, but will be put afloat as soon as the weather will permit, probably inside of thirty days. The losses to property in general cannot be estimated, but are very great. The end is not yet. The season of floods has only begun, and the entire Missouri Slope is baried in snow.

THE New York Herald's Washington special says: Californians here complain bitterly that the Republicans should take up Gorham. They recall the fact that the Republican State Convention of California last year unanimously adopted a resolution asking the National Committee to keep Gorham out of their State, because he had made himself odious to the Republicans here before, by stumping the State for a Democratic candidate for Governor. It is said now that Senator Miller of California has fatally compromised himself with his people at home in the first month of his term by his support of Gorham. The Democatic persistency in the Senate has, therefore, secret encouragement from the Republican side and will continue to have this unless the Republican nominations are so far revised as to eliminate Gorham and Riddleberger; the latter, not on account of any objection personal to himself, but because the Senators do not relish the appearance of anything that smacks of a bargain.

JAMES E. ANDERSON, of the Ruby Hill Mining News, returned from Washington last night. He says there is intense feeling in political circles over the nomination of Judge Robertson to the Collectorship of New York by President Garfield. Mr Anderson seems to think that the affair is likely to produce a terrible split in the Republican party if not compromised in some way. Among disinterested Republicans Blaine is blamed for attempting to dictate appointments in Conkling's State. Democratic sympathy, as a rule, goes out to Conkling, but most of the Democratic Senators will vote for confirmation as a matter of policy. If they can keep Conkling and the Administration by the ears it will give them a better chance to carry New York in the next great contest. Mr. Anderson returns looking as though he might have enjoyed free access to the loaves and fishes of the Capitol.—Eureka Sentinel.

J. B. STEPHENS, who killed William Hilburn at Grapevine Springs, near Silver Reef, last July, has been convicted of manslaughter. Hilburn used to live at Marietta and was well known in this part of the country. The killing was a cowardly murder. Hilburn and a man named Pollard were growling about the price of a pair of boots, which Pollard claimed Hilburn was trying to beat him out of, and while they were struggling for the possession of a pistol from which Pollard had already fired one shot at Hilburn, Stephens stepped up and shot him through the head as he was on the ground fighting with Pollard. —Candelaria True Fissure.

THE County Clerk of Kern county recently paid a visit to San Francisco. On his return he was followed by four huge boxes of stationery supplies, enough, says the Californian for all the county offices for a year to come. It seems that he not only had no authority to make these extensive purchases, but did so in the face of an advertised proposal for bids. On examining the invoice it was found that a bottle of mucilage which could be bought in Bakersfield for 80 cents was put down in the bill at $1.85. The Supervizors have very properly refused to endorse the extra-official action of the Clerk by ordering the goods to be paid for.

THE United States Treasury officials say that there is now massed in the vaults of the Department a larger amount of gold than was ever known to be in one place in history, in modern times, at least, and probably more than could be authenticated as existing in a single treasury at any time before in the world. There is now about $173,000,000 in gold and bullion, exclusive of some $50,000,000 in silver, while the Bank of England has only about $75,000,000 in gold.

While a dozen policemen were escorting a process-server at Ballinamore, County Leitrim, they were attacked by twenty women with stones and sticks. A girl aged 20 was fatally shot, and another wounded. Several of the police were seriously injured.

A special to the Chicago Times from Charleston, S. C., of April 5th, says: Reports from all portions of South Carolina are to the effect that the fruit crop has been ruined by the extreme cold of the past week.

AFTER all his bitter speeches against America and Americans, Carlyle renders tardy justice to a much maligned country by leaving in his will a bequest of books to the library at Harvard. It is only a fitting recognition of New England appreciation, which was earlier and more hearty than that accorded by his own countrymen.

MOLLIE'S LITTLE RAM.—Mollie had a little ram, fleece black as rubber shoe, and everywhere that Mollie went, he emigrated too. He went with her to church one day—the folks hi-la-rious grew, to see him walk de-mure-ly into Dea-con Al-len's pew. The worthy Deacon quickly let his angry passion rise, and gave it an unchristian kick between the sad brown eyes. This landed rammy in the aisle; the Deacon followed fast, and raised his foot again, but, ah! that first kick was his last. For Mr. Sheep walked slowly back about a rod, 'tis said, and ere the Deacon could retreat, it stood him on his head. The congregation then arose, and went for that ere sheep, but several well directed butts just piled them in a heap. Then rushed they straightway for the door, with curses long and loud, while rammy struck the hindmost man and shot him through the crowd.

General Armstrong is now in Boston raising money for his Hampton Indian School. During a conferance with some leading Boston philanthropists in the parlor of the Vendome Hotel, he said the change of sentiment in the South on the subject of education within the past fifteen years is the most wonderful in the history of civilization. No one of the colored teachers graduated at Hampton has encountered hostility. Everywhere the best white people welcome and encourage them. The most opposition comes from the illiterate colored preachers of the old style. Another interesting fact mentioned by General Armstrong is that Southern colleges for white youths are crowded with young fellows who are living on hominy in order to get an education.

Miles, an Englishman and a Mormon, was convicted of polygamy in the United States District Court for Utah. The case was appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States, and the decision was reversed. The error in the Court below was in allowing one of Miles' wives to testify against him, when the law forbids either a wife or a husband to testify for or against each other. The Superior Court very properly says it must administer the law as it finds it, but at the same time points out to Congress the manner in which it can make convictions for polygamy possible in Utah.

There is one boy in Galveston who will never be a musician. He is too independent. His teacher was trying to make him play the right notes, and said to him:

"You must not reach way over there on the treble. That's not right."

"I guess I'll reach where I please on this piano. We own this piano, I reckon. I'll put my feet upon it if I see fit."—[Galveston News.

A physician at McLean, Ill., owed a woman $100, and suggested that she take pay in medical services. She remarked, at a quilting bee, that it would take a great many years of such a doctor's services to be worth a $100. She is wealthy and he has sued her for $10,000 damages for slander.

During a late storm at San Jose, Cal., a strange thing happened. The trees in the vicinity were covered with lizards, and some were also found lodged in the branches and stuck on the ends of lately cut trees. The lizards varied from two to four inches in length.

People have queer ideas as to the power of the President. A colored man called on President Garfield the other day and insisted on an interview. He was very indignant because they would not let him in. His wife had run off with another man, he said. He came to see the President to appeal for advice in the premises and assistance in carrying that advice into effect. A small sized boy from Georgia, who listened to his story as he told the doorkeeper, advised him to shoot the other man, and he finally went to do it.

The following is said to be a good remedy for epizooty: "A tablespoonful of chloride of potash to a gallon of water, to be given to the horse to drink three or four times a day. The potash can also be mixed with a bran mash. Tar water is considered to be a good remedy. Another remedy is to rowel a horse in the shoulder with a tar rope as soon as the disease appears or before, if there is any danger of the animal contracting it."

A COLORED man applied for a marriage license. "What's the lady's name?" asked the clerk. "I dunno, boss. Is der any needcessity fur you to put dat on de papers?" "Yes." "Well, I'll go and get it wrote down," and he went out muttering something about "de fool notions of white folks and free niggers."—Memphis Avalanche.

THERE is something wrong with a city ordinance that prohibits a steamboat or locomotive from whistling, and yet permits the small boy and fool man to whistle all they like. As a matter of choice the steam whistle is much preferable.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

THIS HONEY WAS REMOVED FROM THE comb by centrifugal force, with a machine made for the purpose. It is therefore virtually the same as honey in the comb, only you don't have to eat the bees wax, which is indigestible and therefore disagrees with many persons. When first extracted the honey is liquid, but nearly all pure honey will candy or granulate in course of time, especially if exposed to the cold. Putting the cans in hot water for a short time will bring the honey to its fluid state without injury.

This Honey is put up in 10 pound cans, with patented screw tops, which renders it convenient for family use, and especially for the mines, to which it may be packed, even upside down, without leakage. A neat label on each can gives full directions.

Price, $1 50 per can, or 12½ cents per ℔ at the Apiary, if customers furnish their own receptacle. For sale at Harris & Rhine's, Independence, and at the Apiary, at Jacob Vagt's place, Camp Independence.

PROPOSALS FOR RE-BUILDING BEND CITY BRIDGE.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT SEALED proposals will be received by the Board of Supervisors of Inyo County at the office of the County Clerk, until MONDAY, MAY SECOND, 1881, at 12 o'clock, M., for supplying the following designated labor, etc., in the razing and reconstruction of the Bend City Bridge. Contractors will be required to comply strictly with the plans and specifications on file in the office of the County Clerk, which are now subject to inspection. Said Bridge to be located at a point crossing Owens River about 300 yards below where the present Bend City Bridge is now situated, said location to be marked by two posts, by the Board of Supervisors.

Contractors will be furnished with necessary timbers and materials, that is to say: Contractors will dismount and take to pieces with necessary precaution the present Bend City Bridge, also the remaining section of said Bridge on the old dry channel, and haul all the timbers and materials to the location of the proposed Bridge. The caps, tie-beams, stringers, and planking of the old Bridge shall serve and be employed as caps, tie-beams, stringers and planking to rebuild said proposed bridge; the chords of the old bridge shall be used as braces of the span of the proposed bridge as shown in figure 1 of the aforesaid plan; the railing of the old bridge shall be used as posts of the railing of the proposed bridge.

The laminated ribs formed of several planks or boards nailed together of the old bridge, shall be, by the contractor, carefully unnailed and taken apart, and be used as braces of the piles as shown in figure 5, also as rails and braces as shown in figures 2 and 4, of the proposed bridge. The bolts and iron bars of the span of the old bridge shall be used to make the required bolts for the span of the proposed bridge. The county will furnish all the nails, spikes, and round iron, ¾ in., to make the pins to pin the caps and stringers; but the making of the above specified pins and bolts for the span must be included in the contract price; and no extra charges shall be allowed for the construction of said proposed bridge unless some extra work not included in the aforesaid plans and specifications be ordered by the said Board of Supervisors. Contractors shall have the privilege of using the pile-driver of the county, with the blocks and ropes belonging to the same, provided it be subjected to only the usual usage in such work, and returned to the Court House.

The person or persons to whom said contract may be awarded shall be required to give a good and sufficient bond in double the amount of such contract price for the faithful performance of such contract. Payments to be by warrants drawn upon the Special Bridge Fund and Road Fund, Dist. No. 3.

It devotes much space to questions bearing upon economical management of mines, and from time to time illustrates the more important improvements in mining machinery and engineering methods. Special attention is given to reliable mining news from all parts of the country, which is gathered by an efficient corps of correspondents in every section, and from an extended exchange list. The metal and ore markets and gold, silver and miscellaneous stocks are reported and commented upon weekly by experienced financiers, who are unbiased by private interests, and upon these matters it is accepted as a reliable guide and unfailing instructor. The Coming Road

Robert C. Corberley, the agent of Bancroft & Co of San Francisco, was in town this week, and gives information of the advance of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad along the 35th parallel. He took the railroad now extending from Alberquerque to Fort Wingate, and witnessed the animation connected with the work, which is news even to us along the line. The iron is now laid from Alberquerque to the Arizona line, a distance of about two hundred miles. From that point to the Colorado Chiquito, a distance of about one hundred and fifty miles, the line is graded, and ready for the iron. The supply of iron was exhausted for the time being, but the provision is made for it, and the delay will be short. Mr. Corberley returned over the line, and found that the company was engaging five thousand men to continue the grading from the Colorado Chiquito toward the Tehachipa Pass. The distance from that point to Tehachipa is about the same as from San Francisco to Los Angeles, with most favorable grade to that point. At the rate now progressing this road will be close upon us before the present year is out, and one of our prominent citizens suggests that the people of Kern look to it, that no turn is made in the road to skirt the coast. The people of the coast are making strenuous efforts to cause a deflection from this valley, and the least our people can do is, to present the company with statistics as will show the inducements this valley offers for following what is geographically the proper line. The natural advantages of the direct way through this section can be overcome by the united efforts of the people of the coast who have large interests at stake. The advantage to the company, and to this valley, of passing through Bakersfield about the centre of the town, or just below, and continue the construction south of the Southern Pacific, however near to it, would be incalculable. General Beale, who arrived in Kern on Monday, is enthusiastic in his expectations from this great highway. The 35th parallel line has been surveyed by him, and he has the aquaintance of the directors of the road, who in view of his examination of the route, sought to secure him as the consulting engineer. The citizen referred to thinks the people of the town should meet and adopt some means for providing all the information possible of our resources and extent, and proposes that the gathering of great landowners looked for the coming week, in connection with General Beale, would offer a good opportunity for consultation on plan and ways and means. We commend the suggestion to our readers, and hope they may become wakeful on this important question.—[Kern Gazette.

Gov. Perkins' Gratitude.

Gov. Perkins, in conversation a few evenings ago, speaking of his appointment of W. H. Knight, an employe of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company, for Harbor Commissioner, and the adverse criticisms in relation to the same, said it was one appointment during all his term which gave him satisfaction.

"I came to this city," said the Governor, "twenty-two years ago, with a pair of blankets on my back and two dollars in my pocket, and from here I walked to Oroville. There, for the first time, I met W. H. Knight, and he hired me for $50 a month as porter. I worked there till I bought him out, many years afterward. He then went to San Francisco, with a small fortune, and lost it in business. When I became one of the owners of the Pacific Coast Steamship line I took him into the office at a salary of $175 a month, and now I appoint him to be Harbor Commissioner at $250 a month. He did not know a thing about it until he was appointed, and never asked me to give him the place. In addition to the satisfaction it gives me personally to do this thing for an old man who first befriended me, a poor boy, I think the people of this State ought to be grateful to me for appointing an honest man to that position, for an honester man than Knight don't live in California. Every one who knows him says that."

The Governor concluded the story by remarking, quietly, that if he had wanted "to put up a job" in the Harbor Commission, Knight would have been the last man on earth he would have selected as the instrument.

The State Miners' Hospital.

Dates of the 16th have the following in relation to the above named institution, the creation of Representative Jos. Wasson:

The Governor has sent to the Senate the names of the Trustees of the new Miners' Hospital, an institution the organization of which was authorized by an act passed at the regular session. Following are the names: George Hearst, Gen. B. B. Redding and Solomon Heydenfeldt, Jr., of San Francisco, John Daggett, of Siskyou, and E. P. Coleman, of Nevada county. The law provides for a Board of Trustees, who are given power to accept donations, select a site and erect a hospital, where homeless, sick, crippled and indigent miners may receive treatment and care. An offer to donate 150 acres of land, known as the Shurtleff property, at Shasta, Shasta county, has already been received by Mr. Daggett, and as soon as the Board meets a circular will be issued soliciting subscriptions in aid of the hospital. The law does not appropriate any money, but provides that the whole thing shall be a work of charity, supported by patients who are able to pay and by contributions. The State Treasurer will probably be Treasurer of the institution.

Diary of an Office Hunter.

This, coming from the Washington "Star," is no doubt authoritative:

March 4th—Might be induced to take an Assistant Secretaryship.

March 17th—Willing to take the head of a Bureau.

March 19th—Eager to be chief of division.

March 24th—Anxious to be third or fourth class clerk.

March 31—"Just hoping" for a clerkship of any sort.

April 7th—Willing to take anything.

April 20th—Would like to borrow $10 "to get out of the infernal town."

May 1st—Grand exit amid a firmament of wrath and brimstone.

Report when he gets home—Wouldn't accept the best place under the Government; Administration bound to be a failure.

IT is said in Washington that a bill will be introduced in the next Congress, with the approval of the President, to change the form of government in Utah. This bill will abolish the present form of appointment of Governors and Judges, and will provide a Commission of seven persons to administer the affairs of the Territory. These Commissioners will be named by the President.

HONEY can be used in lieu of sugar for almost all kinds of domestic use. It has no superior in the canning and preserving of fruits, making strawberry shortcake, etc. Many persons claim that honey disagrees with them—making them sick. This is a mistaken idea, and is owing to those persons having eaten honey mixed with the poison of the bee, bee bread, larvæ bees, etc., as the old-fashioned strained honey used to be. But the honey of to-day, such as is produced by intelligent bee-keepers, and bearing their own label, is pure nectar, free from all deleterious substances, and is by far the purest and most healthful sweet known. As an article for the table, both tasteful and ornamental what can be superior to comb honey? This is procured now mostly in small frames, and is removed from the hives as soon as it is sealed, thus preserving its delicate whiteness. But for use in the cuisine, extracted honey is superior, as it is free from wax, being thrown from the comb by centrifugal force. —[Food and Health.

THE New Orleans Democrat tells us that the South Mexican Railroad, in which General Grant is interested, is projected from Auten, Lizarado, on the Gulf, fifteen miles south of Vera Cruz, to Huataleo, on the Pacific, a distance of 503 miles. It crosses the Mexican Cordilleras where engineering will be difficult, but not impossible, as Henry Meiggs demonstrated in Peru that nothing in the way of railroad construction is impossible. The cost of the road, as estimated, will be $15,150,000, or $30,000 a mile, whereas the Vera Cruz road, which was built by English capitalists, cost $200,000 a mile. It is said that the people of Vera Cruz have taken alarm at the prospect of this road being completed, as it will deprive them of the monopoly they have hitherto enjoyed of the Mexican trade with the Gulf and Atlantic ports.

POISONED BY A PENCIL.—Mr. Samuel Clarke, of Vasselboro, Me., has been in the habit of carrying a copying pencil in his coat pocket. One day Mr. Clarke went to Augusta, and while in the city he purchased some troches for a cold, which he put loose in the pocket where they were constantly coming in contact with the lead. While returning to Vasselboro on the cars, he felt a tickling in his throat, and to allay the irritation partook of several troches. His tongue at once began to swell and turn black, and by the time he arrived at home he was deadly sick. A physician was summoned, who promptly administered antidotes for the poison. It is said that a piece of the lead of one of these pencils, half the size of a pea, will cause the death of a robust man.

IN one of the hotels at Nice is a beautiful American, who lately went to an "at home" in full dress—low necked satin, diamonds, etc. On arriving and looking round the room, she perceived the other guests to be in demi-toilet. "Well," "she said, "If I'd known that it was only a sit-round, I'd not have put my clothes on."

AT a recent Parsee wedding at Bombay, seven youthful couples were united, the eldest bridegroom being only fifteen years of age and the youngest sixteen months, while the youngest bride was only nine months old. The wedding-knot was tied while each child was seated in its mother's lap.

THE Imperial family of Germany is quite able to support itself. If the Crown Prince were deprived of his inheritance he could easily win bread and butter by his skill as a turner, while his eldest son, Prince William, is an excellent amateur artisan.

A MAN at Ancona, Italy, having married one of the twin daughters of a widow lady, after her death married his mother-in-law; the latter died, and then he espoused the remaining daughter.

"MY opinion is," remarked a philosophical old lady of much experience and observance, "that any man as dies upon a washing day does it out of spite."

IT is a well known truism that people learn wisdom by experience. "A man," says Mr. Jones, "never wakes up his second baby to hear it laugh."

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

SATURDAY, APRIL 23.....1881

THE scene in the Senate between Messrs. Mahone and Hill is said to have been so boisterous that even the reporters could not catch all the angry words spoken. A correspondent of the Syracuse Journal says that before Mahone left his seat he rose, and looking across at Hill, said in a tone of defiance: "The Senator has charged me with what no man shall dare to charge me!" and pointing his finger in a menacing way, shouted "Stop! I say stop, right there!" with emphasis on the closing words. It was manifest that Hill quailed; but so full of ire was he that the passion was irresistible, and he could not or would not desist. When Mahone left his seat he talked as he moved over toward Hill, half crouching, half creeping, and saying: "You want to know, do ye? who it is? [raising his voice to a high pitch.] You want to know who it is that dares to vote as he pleases?" When Mahone came close to Hill, shaking the finger in a manner that was in keeping with the flash in his eye, he suddenly stood erect and shouted: "Well! here is the man who dares to vote as he pleases."

WE suspect the Carson and Colorado narrow gouge railroad "ain't long for this world." Instead of reducing fares to Bodie, for instance, it has actually raised them $3—heretofore, by stage, it has been $15; now, by railroad' rounded up with 40 miles of staging, it costs $18. As freights will probably be charged in about the same ratio on the railroad, it is altogether likely most if not all the freight to Bodie, Lundy, Bridgeport, and all that section, will continue to come by teams. In fact, teamsters have agreed to deliver freights at 1½ cents per pound at Bodie and Lundy, and that is lower than the railroad will do it, having to handle all their freights two or three times on the cars, besides then having 40 miles of teaming. The Bridgeport Chronicle advises the farmers of that country to stock a stage line, and carry passengers at $12, and it is probable it will be done. Then what will become of the aforesaid narrow gouge?

A TERRIBLE domestic tragedy took place at Chico on the 15th instant, the following particulars of which are given in a press dispatch of that date: "Henry Swearingen, who had been in town all the afternoon, went to his home this afternoon with his wife and mother-in-law, Mrs. Ex-Senator David Boucher, and shot the old lady dead. As his wife turned he shot her. Then, as she did not expire, he shot her again through the breast, after which he shot himself through the centre of the forehead and expired immediately. A Chinaman and a boy were the only witnesses of the bloody deed, and they gave the alarm immediately. J. O. March of Dayton held an inquest on the women. The body of the man was brought to this place. Intense excitement prevails."

THE Carson Index says the rate of fares over the V. & T. and C. & C. Railroads from Virginia City has been fixed as follows: To Dayton, $1.40; Churchill, $3.40; Wanbuska, $4.65; Mason, $5.15; Schurz, $7.40; Hawthorne, $9.90. By rail and stage the following through rates have been established: From Bodie City to Aurora, $15.90; Bodie, $16.90; Mill Creek, $20.90; Bridgeport, $19.90. Candelaria, $19.90; Belleville, $18.90; Columbus, $21.40; Benton, $23.90; Bishop Creek, $29.90; Independence, $32.90.

THERE is such a thing as being too conscientious. This seems to be what ails Secretary Kirkwood. It is reported that he has driven his clerks to the verge of distraction by demanding that all letters coming to the Interior Department be turned over for his inspection. His desk is said to be buried under correspondence about Lo and the adjoining room filled with letters. He now talks of resignation.

THE stiff-necked Briton does not take kindly to the Monetary Conference, and the chances are that the Ministry, though deluged with petitions, will not appoint a representative. Ex-Secretary Evarts, now in London, takes a rose-colored view of the Conference, but this is probably due to the fact that he is on a free junketing excursion and feels well.

WE do not believe that there was ever a merchant in the world who attained any considerable degree of success without advertising.

AT Bodie, Bill Barton gets 150 days in the county jail for selling whisky to Indians, or, rather, for getting caught at it.

PROPOSED ROAD LAW.

Representative Wasson sends a copy of a bill, introduced by Mr. Byrnes, amending the present Road Law in several essential particulars. The bill is now before the Assembly, having passed the Senate. It will probably become a law. Owing to its great length, we can notice but a portion of its salient points.

"The Board of Supervisors of the several counties shall divide their respective counties into suitable road districts, [and may change the boundaries thereof,] and each Supervisor shall be ex-officio Road Commissioner of the several road districts in his Supervisor District, and shall see that all orders of the Board of Supervisors pertaining to roads in his district are properly executed. [Said Commissioner shall receive no compensation for performing the duties imposed on him by this act.]"

The foregoing, including the explanations enclosed in brackets, is section 2641 in full. The next section empowers the Supervisors to appoint a Road Overseer for each or any road district, to hold office at the pleasure of the Board, and to be subject, in the performance of his duties, to the direction of the Road Commissioner or Supervisor in whose Supervisor District the Road District may lie. But the Board need not necessarily appoint any Road Overseers; in default of such appointment, it is made the duty of the Supervisors, each in his own district, to perform the duties of such Road Overseers. It does not appear that they are to receive any pay in this case any more than in the first mentioned. However, it is reasonable to presume that the Commissioner would be entitled to a Road Overseer's pay while executing a Road Overseer's duties proper. But even in that contingency he wouldn't get rapidly wealthy, for Road Overseers are allowed but $2 50 for each day's actual service, the whole number of such days' service not to exceed seventy-five in the year. In addition to this $2 50, Road Overseers are also allowed 15 per cent. of road taxes collected by him, but is barred of allowance for the time spent in making such collections.

The road tax is fixed at a maximum of $2 for each tax payer, which amount the said tax payer may pay in cash, or, at his option, work out on the road at the munificent rate of one dollar per diem. Thirty cents on each $100 of taxable property may be set aside for road purposes, of which 20 per cent. may constitute a General Road Fund—to be used at any needed point in the county, without regard to district lines, in cases where the district tax or fund is insufficient.

The proposed law is a material improvement on the present idiotical and swindling arrangement, whereby we have as many independent Road Masters, Road Tax Collectors, labor hirers, civil engineers, and money wasters, as there are road districts; all this, because each Road Master is expected to expend all the funds he collects within his own district, whether especially needed there or not, and in accordance with his own ideas of engineering and labor values, and all as if the road interests of his district did not extend an inch beyond his district lines; practically, Road Masters under the present law are accountable to no one, notwithstanding required reports and itemized bills they must occasionally render to the Board of Supervisors—not but what Road Masters generally try to accomplish reasonably fair results for the good of their own respective districts, and to make an honest accounting of funds in most cases, but, because the law furnishes no reliable restraints if they do not happen to feel like doing honest work and making honest returns. Time was when a $4 road tax was collected in cash, and the equivalent rendered was one day's work by a six-bit Indian. "Working the roads," under existing laws, and all similar, has ever ranked as a fraudulent joke, or as burlesque, like the old time militia trainings. The trouble is that it is not based on any system of community interests; it assumes that a district (road) has no further interest in public highways than in such portions as may lie within its own boundaries. Now, if there is any one thing in which an entire community or county may have an equal and common interest, it is in a system of public highways. But there can be no such system under a law that places a thoroughfare under the independent engineering control of as many different persons as there are townships along its line, and under conditions that will permit the expenditure of $500, say, in one township where perhaps not a dollar may be needed, while, for the lack of means in a more impoverished and adjoining township, the road as a thoroughfare, may be and remain impassable, and of no value whatever to the community at large, including that portion which paid in the wasted $500. Imagine a toll road, a railroad, canal, or other public or quasi public enterprise whatever, carried on under such a "system!" All such as well as private enterprises of like character, are systemised and made successful only when, as a whole, they are each under the direct supervision of a single director, competent and responsible.

We had here at one time a road law, or management, based on common sense, business principles. It made it the business of a single person to order and supervise repairs upon the highways wherever most needed to promote their general efficiency, all with a due regard to the amount of funds available for the purpose, and also an equitable expenditure of the same, one part of the county with another. So empowered, he could provide suitable appliances to effectively forward the work at a minimum outlay for labor and materials, and with a regular crew, could and did carry on the work, not as burlesque, but in a full sense of personal accountability, as if for a private employer. At no period before nor since has as much been accomplished for each dollar of road tax paid in; nor was it ever more in the power of the Board of Supervisors to ascertain with such exactness how nearly an equivalent had been rendered for the money. That law, in effectiveness and approach to true business principles, was as much superior to the act now pending as the act now pending is ahead of the pre-Adamite road law or fraud now in force.

It is true a lugubrious howl was heard against the law we commend; it was a howl on a sectional basis. All districts had to pay the road tax alike: ergo, work must be done in all alike, whether needed or not needed in those that howled the loudest, and where, until that law went into effect, no one had ever thought of working the roads—their roads were, and still were, toll roads, but they squealed all the more vehemently for some work to be done somewhere in the district. The most prolonged and dismal squeal came from Darwin, through its local paper; at that time the nearest county road to that place was eighteen miles distant; nevertheless, having paid some $600 road tax, it denounced the Road Overseer as a Chinaman of the first water because he would not undertake to macadamize a stretch of sand in that district at a cost of $6,000, if any good was done; nor was the squeal softened because that stretch was part of a toll road. Then two men who wanted to be Road Masters joined in the chorus, and in that way it came to be believed by some that the only good road law we ever had ought to be repealed, in favor of the present imbecile pre-Adamite method of wasting road money. This result was finally accomplised by that great leveling instrument, the new Constitution.

That instrument emphatically declares in effect that every man is as good or a little better than his neighbor, so all laws must operate upon all exactly alike. And thus it comes that all laws for these sparsely settled mining counties must also conform to cow-county requirements. As a dollar a day will pay a cow-county man pretty well, they think it ample for commutation road tax rates here, where board costs that much or more. So, too, with regard to the $2 50 a day for Road Overseers, and the no pay at all to the Road Commissioners. That sort of pay may enlist muscle and talent in a cow-county, but it won't do it anywhere else. If the pay was adequate in these particulars, this law would do very well, perhaps, but never half so well as the general Road Overseer law above alluded to as tried here.

A POINT of much importance to young people has recently been decided in Missouri. A young woman in Audubon county sued a young man for breach of promise of marriage. He claimed that the contract was entered into on Sunday night, and was not legally binding, and his claim was sustained. This is a loud warning to the interesting young persons who look upon Sunday evening as the natural "sparking" time. Sunday night promises seem to be like pie crust. The safe plan is evidently to clinch the Sunday business by getting the promising young men to swear fidelity on a week day.

As a sequel to the troubles at El Paso, mentioned elsewhere in these columns, a dispatch of the 15th inst gives the following: "As the jury was holding an inquest on the body of two Mexicans killed a few miles north of here yesterday, John Hale, a desperado, attempted to intimidate the authorities. Hale fired and killed Kremlow, a policeman, who fired at the same time, wounding the newly elected Marshal, Studemier, and killing Hale and a Mexican bystander with the same shot. G. W. Campbell, a friend of Hale, attempted to draw a pistol and was mortally wounded by Marshal Studemier."

ON the 13th instant, the Mammoth Company of Lake District levied an assessment (No 8) of 25 cents per share, delinquent on the 14th of next month. The official notice of the assessment appears in the Bodie Free Press from which we infer that the Mammoth Herald is dead again—thrown up the sponge, as it were. But sich is newspaper life—and death—in a mining camp.

NEWS IN BRIEF.

Following is the epitome of the news in the San Francisco Chronicle of April 20:

A crisis is expected to day in the Senate, as the pending question on the election of officers will be the first to come up; both Republican and Democratic Senators have been warned to be present....Blair's resolution calling for an extra session has excited much comment; the Democrats wish to unite with him in demanding action on the tariff ....In the Senate yesterday Logan defended his war record and Cameron championed Mahone's course....Blaine is reported to be suffering severely from Bright's disease of the kidneys. ....General Longstreet has been nominated as United States Marshal for Georgia....George C. Gorham has had a lively quarrel with Congressman Jorgensen of Virginia.

Lord Beaconsfield's relapse was caused by a sudden change in the weather. He will be buried at Hughenden by the side of his wife. His will divides his estate between Ralph Disraeli and Lord Rowton, while to the latter are confided all his private papers....Parnell spoke in Glasgow yesterday....The Monetary Conference was opened yesterday in Paris. Fifteen countries were represented, the English and Italian delegates not having arrived....There is a civil war in the Sooloo Islands, caused by the death of the Sultan.

There is great destitution and suffering in many of the flooded towns in the valley of the Missouri....Chicago suburbs are under water....A new and dangerous disease has broken out among the car horses in Chicago....Discouraging reports are sent from Missouri, Illinois and Kansas in relation to winter wheat.

The Road bill occupied the attention of the Assembly during the greater part of yesterday, and but little progress was made....The majority of the Assembly Committee on Apportionment reported the Senate bill for classification of the State. Camron voted with the Republicans....A resolution to pay mileage to the Chief Clerk and Minute Clerk was adopted in the Assembly....The Senate passed the bill for payment of the Legislature....Several deficiency bills, as segregated, passed the Senate and were read the first time in the House.

FOLLOWING is the Bodie Free Press' rendering of the late shooting affray at Bishop Creek. We have studiously refrained from prejudicing the case one way or the other, and hence reproduce the Free Press statement without comment:

From a gentleman who was present at the shooting affray at Bishop Creek on Thursday of last week we learn some particulars which put a different face on the affair from that conveyed by the account from THE INYO INDEPENDENT. William Adams, Superintendent of the Indian Queen mine, was present during the whole of the difficulty between P. W. Forbes and John Williams. Forbes being much larger and physically more powerful than Williams, got the latter down, choked him until the bystanders thought he was dead, took a pistol away from him and assumed an attitude that conveyed the impression that he intended to shoot him, when Adams stepped forward and commanded him to desist, telling him (Forbes) that he had punished his antagonist sufficiently. Some words then passed between Forbes and Adams, when the former's pistol suddenly went off. At this Adams, thinking Forbes was firing at him, jerked a derringer and fired, the ball striking Forbes over the left eye but glancing off and inflicting but a slight wound. Adams was arrested and admitted to bail, but few if any attaching any blame to him for his action under the circumstances, and no one regretting the unfortunate occurrence more than himself.

A SANTA FE (N. M.) special of the 17th instant says: On Wednesday afternoon a party of Americans and two Mexicans became engaged in a quarrel at El Paso, and the Mexicans were killed. The affair created great excitement on both sides of the river. On the following day armed Mexicans crossed the river to take possession of the bodies of their friends. The Americans grew indignant at the conduct of the Mexicans, and in a short time organized a party to attack them. Meantime the town of Franklin (the American El Paso) was thrown in a state of the wildest excitement, resulting in a conflict between the two parties. The row became general and bullets flew thick. During the melee John Hall, mistaking one Krempton for a Mexican, shot and instantly killed him, and was himself shot by an American. The Town Marshal having tried unsuccessfully to quell the disturbance took part himself, and fatally wounded one Campbell and a Mexican. A number of others were slightly wounded. Since Thursday the towns of El Paso and Franklin have been quiet, and there will probably be no further disturbance.

THE Indian Queen M. and M. Co. of Esmeralda county, Nev., has paid dividends since the 5th of January, 1881, to date, of $20,000, and on the 7th inst. declared one of $6,250, payable on the 20th inst. Shipments of bullion from March 22d to April 4th, amounting to $8,800, have been made.

LETTER FROM THE CAPITAL.

SACRAMENTO, April 17.

MESSRS. EDITORS—Another week of the extra session has passed. During said time, the road bill matured in the Senate during sixteen months' effort, reached the Assembly, where it has been read for the first time. A Senate bill to reapportion the State into Senatorial and Assembly districts also reached the Assembly, so that the present week promises to be somewhat exciting as compared to the past two. The Assembly general appropriation and deficiency bills have reached the Senate, where they are likely to be more severely dealt with than in the house of their origin. In short, I feel disgusted at the feeling existing among Senators respecting the item to carry out the irrigation survey, alluded to at some length in my letter of a week ago. It is likely to pass by a hard, close fight, only, whereas it should become a part of the law without any contest. The mining element of the Assembly stood in solid with the members from the southern part of the State. A strange opposition is reported on the part of the Senator elected from the San Bernardino and San Diego district. How he will profit by it remains to be seen. Last Winter a year, the word "mine" was as a red rag to a mad bull with him. We have a couple of Assembly millionaires who are great on economy, too. There was a lively rattle over the

SCHOOL TAX QUESTION

Since I wrote you last. The outlying counties forced an increase of the State levy to the extent of over $300,000. It now remains for the extreme and thinly settled counties and districts to levy in proportion so as to draw their State portion of this money. However, it has not been disposed of in the Senate, and it is no use to count the chickens yet. The said

APPORTIONMENT BILL

Leaves Mono and Inyo together as one Assembly district. Senatorially, Mono and Inyo and Tuolumne go together. That would be an improvement on the present arrangement—it would be strictly a mining classification. There is nothing so effective here as a positive stand on some one subject or interest. Mono is more entitled to an Assemblyman as to population than some other counties so favored in this bill, but the whole question is so complicated and interwoven that no one is going to be satisfied, and I still doubt whether any bill at all will pass this session and become a law. The member from Alpine—a county lacking 9,500 population sufficient to entitle it to one Assemblyman, and which cast only 107 votes last election—is the most intractable person in the lot. His vote alone may defeat the Republicans, no matter how just a bill they may present. The Democrats are not likely to agree except on the general proposition to defeat any and every bill whatever, and let the subject go over till 1882-3. By that time, however, there is likely to be a third party, after the manner of the Dolly Varden of 1873-4. I believe I hinted at something of this kind in a previous letter—from San Francisco. My surmises are being substantiated, and Denis Kearney is to be brought out again as a political evangelist or redeemer of the city and State. First, at the proposed city election next Fall, followed by the State election a year after. A full-page interview with Denis appeared in yesterday's Record-Union. It is now in order for the Call-Bulletin to reprint it, and then begin to

"SPREAD THE LIGHT,"

As Denis expresses it. This time it is to be "anti-monopoly," with the locomotive left out—the play of Hamlet, with scarcely a smell of "my father's spirit", remaining to swear by. The mantle thrown off by Booth is picked up by the new firm of Kearney & Co. It will be more ring-streaked, striped and spotted than ever, and a work of political black art that will cause your old-line Republican and Democrat to look around for an entire warehouse full of sack-cloth, and an active volcano in the way of ashes. I am not yet free to give you the full ins and outs of the new programme of political reform, as I have learned it lately. O, tempore! O, mores! Freely translated, this means, Oh, mush!

THE MINERS' HOSPITAL.

The Governor has appointed a Board of Trustees under the law to establish a Miners' Hospital, etc., as follows: B. B. Redding, railroad land agent; George Hearst, the well-known mining operator; E. P. Coleman, an owner in the celebrated Idaho mine of Grass Valley; Solomon Heydenfeldt, one of the leading advisers of the Bonanza firm; John Daggett, present Assemblyman from Siskiyou county, and an active miner, and my most earnest helper in the passage of the bill. The town of Shasta has offered nearly 200 acres of improved land, as an inducement to locate the institution there. Of course, it should be in or near San Francisco, where the best medical and surgical aid is available; but the above is indicative of the interest taken in the matter. The Trustees will soon meet and put out a programme of organization and future action.

I hope by another week to be able to report some final progress of this extra session, which is a dreary experience indeed. An April shower last night was a god-send—an earthquake would be welcome next to the millenium.

It is reported that all of the many ladies who were candidates for the office of School Director at the Iowa elections last week were defeated.

The largest class ever graduated by the University of California numbered fifty-four and included eight ladies. The first lady graduated in '74.

The Lousiana schools are now receiving interest upon the school fund to the amount of $30,320; and are soon to have an apportionment of $68,750. Schools are increasing in number and efficiency, and a stronger sentiment in favor of public education is evident throughout the State.

The offer of a prize for the best car for transporting cattle in comfort brought to the American Humane Association no less than 420 models and 200 plans and sketches, all of which the Committee of Award are carefully examining.

The race is not always to the swift. The Toronto Globe asserts that a good walker will travel more miles in a day than a fast trotter; "a horse that could walk five miles an hour would probably reach San Francisco sooner than Maud S. or St. Julien."

Professor S. A. Knapp writes to the Iowa Homestead that in practical feeding at the Agricultural College, as nearly as could be estimated by substituting corn and hay for sweet corn fodder—an acre of the latter is equal to four tons of hay and eighty bushels of corn.

And the same is true for THE INDEPENDENT.

HAWTHORNE is to be blessed (or cursed) with a bountiful supply of newspapers. The Carson Times contemplates starting a branch office at the new railroad town; the proprietors of the Esmeralda Herald have a similar project in contemplation, and the Times says that A. C. CONCERT AND FESTIVAL.—The young people of this place, under instruction of Mrs. E. M. Willis and Miss Nettie Thompson, are preparing themselves to give a public entertainment on Tuesday evening, May 3d, and which, we feel assured, will prove a very pleasing affair throughout. The principal object in view, aside from the pleasure and benefit to the participants and the community—which needs something to break its humdrum routine, if any in the world does—is to raise means to pay off a present indebtedness for Sunday School cards, papers, etc., and to obtain additional supplies, which are much needed. This done, any remainder of funds will be applied, first, to pay the expense of lighting the school house on church and other similar occasions, which expense has heretofore come out of the preacher's meagre income, and, lastly, should there be anything left, it will be used in payment of a debt against the parsonage—materials for the kitchen addition. We give these details now to avert possible misconception of the purposes in view. The price of admission to the entertainment is to be fifty cents each for adults, children free. The programme and other details will be given next issue.

SALINE VALLEY NEWS.—Prospects in Saline Valley are exceedingly flattering. The latest advices are as follows: Crittenden's party are working steadily on the War Eagle, and have the tunnel in 100 feet, which gives a vertical depth of 125 feet from the surface; at that point the pay streak is three feet wide, and the average assay value of the ore is full $200 per ton, and there are about a hundred tons on the dump. The Bullion tunnel is in 130 feet along the vein, and attains a depth of nearly 100 feet. The pay streak is four feet wide, and the assay value of the ore is quite as high as that of the War Eagle, and there are between 300 and 400 tons on the dump. We are not advised as to other locations, but, as a precursor of an early boom, it is worthy of note that four ladies with their families are now residing there.

A CHANGE.—Louis Fromm has sold his restaurant business (Fromm's Restaurant) to Levy Bros. Charles Levy, we believe, is to take charge of the establishment, and will open it for business in a few days. Mr. and Mrs. Fromm think of reestabishling themselves in business elsewhere, probably in Arizona.

WHAT HE REMARKED.—An ancient friend submits the following observation in writing: "The seven planets making war on old Sol seem to have worked very well to squeeze him in such away that he set water to pouring down into Inyo county, yet did not succeed in getting the heat out of him."

NEW HOMES.—W. F. Matlack has purchased, and now occupies, the lot and dwelling where Postmaster Hardy has resided for years past, and the latter has fitted up the rear portion of his Postoffice and store building for a residence, and so can always be found at his post.

THE CROP PROSPECTS.—The prospects for early crops and big yields were never better in this valley at this season. This is true of fruit as well as of other crops, notwithstanding that considerable of early kinds was destroyed by the cold of last month.

MINES SOLD.—Geo. M. Pinney has recently sold to New York capitalists the Ida, Eureka and Independence mioes, at Panamint. It looks as though the new Eastern company was preparing for extensive operations at that point.

NEW DISCOVERY.—Charley Schweer is opening out a newly discovered ledge in Swansea District—a four-foot ledge of rich, copper silver-glance ore. In any other region than this such a showing would create a furor of excitement.

TO RETIRE.—The people of Bishop Creek and vicinity will learn with the most sincere regret that it is the intention of Dr. F. T. Bicknell to shortly retire from that field of professional practice.

PICNIC.—We are told that Lone Pine proposes to indulge in a big picnic, etcetera, on the 5th of next month. Also, that there is room and a welcome, for everybody and his cousins and aunts.

AGENT.—Geo. M. Gill, Esq., will act as collector and soliciting agent for THE INYO INDEPENDENT, at Bishop Creek and Round Valley. He is authorized to receive orders and sign in receipt.

AT HOME.—O. I. Mairs and family reached home on Tuesday last, well pleased with their long Winter's visit to Canada and Vermont—but equally glad to get home again.

RUMORED.—There is talk of a sale of the Hard Cash gold mine, Deep Spring District, to Supt. I. M. Taylor, of the State Line—an important fact, if consummated.

SHEEP.—About one-third of a band of 75,000 sheep are now across the river passing northward, en route from Los Angeles county to Montana.

RAIN.—On Monday last it rained here continuously for about fourteen hours, wetting the ground in a manner to be of vast benefit.

REOPENED.—The Centennial Brewery, at Lone Pine, is being started up again under the management of Von Briesen & Co.

RUNNING.—The Defiance furnace at Darwin started up on the 10th instant, mostly on ore from the old Promontorio mine.

FOR SALE.—A fine invoice book, cheap, at this office.

LATEST MINING NEWS.—Crosscutting was commenced on Monday in the south end of the seven-foot level of the Whangdoodle mine, in Blowhard district, on the summit of the Bazoo range. Intense interest was manifested by all concerned, the result being awaited with the greatest anxiety. When the cut penetrated a distance of nineteen inches albuminous and globuliferous styltopite was struck, which was considered a favorable indication. At two feet a mass of unindividualized amygdaloidal pyrrhosiderite was encountered, which contained some zipetite, with crystals of humbugite. Whiskitite was also found, inclosed in a black, glassy substance. The small sample left of this will be examined by our assayer immediately. We shall watch developments in the Doodle mine with growing interest. In the well-known Rip Snorter the main shaft has reached a depth of eleven feet seven inches and five-eighths. The lower drift has passed through a body of calcareous, pyritiferous chalcortibite, which indicates the near presence of damphoolite. The Superintendent is smiling and confident, and the future looks brilliant for the Snorter. In the Old Blister several buckets of low-grade limestone have been raised during the week. In the north drift of the fourth crosscut of the first level south, water was struck yesterday. This must have disgusted the Superintendent, for he was soon afterwards in the nearest saloon, wrestling with four fingers of old rot. The Blister is a puzzle, but the insiders are holding for a rise. At the Sockdologer work has been suspended during the past week in order to put a new handle on the windlass. The repairs were completed last night and a full force put on the mine this morning. The last assessment on the Sockdolager stock has all been paid in, amounting te four dollars and six bits. The affable, gentlemanly and efficient Superintendent makes glad the hearts of our wholesale houses by doing business on a cash basis, and immediately invested the sum in a sack of flour and ten pounds of beans. He is sanguine of success, and we predict a big strike in the Dologer before the supplies are exhausted. In the Gol Buster work is being pushed from the three-foot station. The pumps have full control of the water, and a large body of double-breasted, highly metaliferous dolophonite has been opened out, with stringers of dyhyntribilic lipidakrokite. This settles it, and a mill will be erected at once by the Eastern owners.

LETTER FROM ROUND VALLEY.

APRIL 21, 1881.

MESSRS. EDITORS—Seeing that your columns are not severely taxed by poetical effusions of Spring warblers, which generally prevail during the "etherial mildness," you may permit something prosaic from this section.

FARMING

Is in full blast: the plows are ripping and tearing furiously and seed grain scattered in every direction. Although Mammoth is quiet—could'nt sell a sack of spuds there just now—there is no lack of vim and energy evinced in this valley. Farmers are up and doing—scratching for dear life and taxes.

As long as man and horse exist, we presume wheat, oats and barley will be in demand. Still it is amusing to hear some people whine and cry—they can't imagine where our market will be "next season." This has been the old song since the first crop was raised; yet we observe that about every June very little stuff of any kind is for sale in Owens Valley. Usually, those who raise the least whine the most concerning a "market." We may naturally expect a failure of crops some time—other countries experience total failures occasionally—in that event a few hundred tons of grain on hand would then be convenient in Owens Valley.

IMPROVEMENTS.

Some buildings have gone up lately—house by Hiltons;—barn by Shipley; house and large granary by Goodridge and a barn, 60x60 ft. in contemplation by the latter; also a house is being built in the valley by Sherwin. Considerable sod is being plowed this Spring by different parties, which is conceded to be the very best kind of improvements on a farm. "He who causes two blades of grass to grow where only one grew before is a public benefactor," and of course isentitled to a seat in heaven. Could'nt exactly tell you what chapter contains the above verse—however we will soon have a new version of the old book, which will necessitate Bro. John Clarke and other versatile scriptorians to forgive and forget—take a fresh start at Genesis. Having raised millions of "blades" and a thousand million heads of wheat (cabbage heads, etc. innumerable thrown in) where only inferior grass and alkali were previously visible—in fact, made the desert blossom like the rose, why should'nt the great army of nature's noblemen (printers included) irrespective of dogmatic creed and elongated faces, expect a happy future "beyond the vale," Still some of the good brethren, slightly bigoted, probably, would consign a vast number of useful and worthy people to everlasting punishment. Pity, that!

FRUIT TREES AND FISH.

Olds and Thorington hane this Spring set out some fruit trees away up near the foot of the Sierras, thinking that old Boreas and Jack Frost may deal gently with early blossoms in that locality. Fruit and fish are very desirable articles of diet, which we all crave for. Should high winds and frost prove too severe for the former, we feel sanguine of success with the latter.

Few years ago Mr. Frank Hilton stocked his little pond with trout, but on account of the adjoining grain fields being kept too wet the water and fish were turned loose. Several parties have since seen some fine trout in those creeks and he (Hilton) caught one weighing three and a half pounds. The much talked of German Carp have been lately introduced into this valley. P. E. Jones put about 280 live and healthy carp into his two ponds, which are supposed to be doing well—more some other time on carp.

MAY-DAY

Preparations are on the tapis. Mr. Goodridge, having completed his new house 24x26 will be pleased to have his many friends occupy the premises, as they have done on many occasions heretofore, and spend a few hours jovially eat drink and be merry, a free and easy social gathering, picnic fashion, on Monday, 2d.

Mr. Goodridge being single—not controlled by calico—will not be expected to prepare refreshments, hence, those who indulge in that habit of eating every day, will bring along a little yrovender. Dancing will also be a prominent feature. Quite a crowd is expected to assemble, providing pleasant weather will prevail.

MR. BRIMPS.

LETTER FROM BISHOP CREEK.

BISHOP CREEK, April 20, 1881.

MESSRS. EDITORS—I have thought for some time I would drop you a line, but local items in these parts are as hard to get as a new made "scad." But waiving all of this, we have just had a delightful rain. It fell gently and scarcely any wind accompanied it, so at the present writing, it has cleared off warm and pleasant, with no fear from frost for some time to come. The green grass as well as grain that has been sown, shows decided improvement. The more advanced wheat and barley, looks remarkably well. Farmers generally concede that this indicates a bountiful harvest. A much larger amount of small grain has been sown this Spring than usual, all of which should bring "glad tidings" to the farming community when harvest approaches.

ROUND VALLEY.

Last Sunday your correspondent made a visit to the ranch of Mr. Thos. E. Jones, the well known and prominent farmer of Round Valley, and was shown his fishing ponds, in which he had placed his 280 carp recently obtained from Los Angeles. The ponds were expressly prepared for them. They are two in number, situated near the dwelling. The larger one is near 70 ft. in diameter, in which is placed 175 of the larger fish. He tells me he has lost but few in their transit. These are the first fish of the kind that has been introduced in our section. Mr. Jones deserves great credit, as he has been to much expense and trouble, trying to develop this new industry. These fish multiply with such extraordinary rapidity, that in a creditable short time he will not only have enough to supply the wants of his own table, but those of his neighbors who now cannot see anything in what he has done. As he is the pioneer of this enterprise, and after having looked at the situation, your correspondent has no hesitation in saying that it will prove a success, and Mr. Jones fully compensated for his trouble.

PERSONAL AND MINING MATTERS.

Mr. P. W. Forbes, recently the victim of an unfortunate shooting affray is now convalescent; was in the streets of our town yesterday morning, walking around shaking the hands of his numerous friends. Some one asked him, "How is your eye?" to which he replied, "Be dad, I wish I had all I can see out of it." Col. Frank Shaw of Adobe Meadows, is sojourning in our town for some days. He reports all quiet above except here and there a stray coyote waiting and watching eagerly for another Bishop Creeker to come along with a load of butter.

The mining outlook in the White Mountains remains about the same, with prospects favorable.

At some future time I may be able to give your numerous readers a better and more comprehesive idea of the doings of our valley and its surroundings, when I can report numerous marriages, and other things appertaining thereto.

FARMER.

SAW DUST FOR CAR WHEELS.—The Lumberman says: We have been shown the model of a car wheel consisting of an iron rim of seven inches outward diameter one-half inch thick, fitted with a well proportioned hub, the space between the hub and rim filled with pine saw dust, pressed in so solidly that we are ready to believe the assertion that resting the iron beams upon bearings, a pressure equal to 23 tons applied to the hub failed to develop any signs of weakness.

DR. TALMAGE says, "If, when I get to heaven, I find less than 100,000 souls have been saved through my instrumentality, I'll ask to be excused, and to be allowed to come back and atone for the dead failure."

IT is predicted that within twenty years the government will expend fifty million of dollars upon public buildings in Washington.

GLADSTONE, it appears, proposes taking a manly stand on the subject of the Boers war.

THE heads of the Boers seem to have been turned by their surprising success against incompetent British generals. They are now reported to be making things lively for the loyalists in the Transvaal. Journals of all parties in London urge that prompt measures be taken to suppress these outrages.

Consumption.

Consumption usually begins with a slight, dry cough in the morning, then, on going to bed, getting more and more frequent, with more and more phlegm, increasing debility, thinness in flesh, shortness of breath, and quickening pulse. In fatal cases, its average course is about two years; hence the importance of arresting the disease at as early a stage as possible, and the sooner rational means are employed for the purpose, the greater the chance for success.

The disease is owing to an irritation commencing at the throat and extending to the lungs, so that their action is interfered with, and the blood does not receive sufficient oxygen to purify it. The first thing to be done is to remove obstruction which is the irritation or congestion of the lungs. Four ounces of glycerine, two ounces of alcohol, two ounces of water and one grain of morphine make an excellent mixture for relieving the cough. It should be taken in doses of two teaspoonfuls every two hours until the cough is relieved.

The chest, below the neck, should be rubbed with tartar-emetic ointment every morning over a space as large as the hand, until a thick crop of sores is brought out; then rub the ointment between the sores to bring out a new crop. Meantime the patient should take regular and vigorous exercise in the open air. There is nothing that equals horseback riding as a remedy in this desease. If a consumptive were to "live in the saddle," and sleep out of doors, taking care to keep the feet dry and warm, and to live upon good, nourishing food; in short, to "rough it," he would recover his health in a few months, even if the disease had made considerable progress. The trouble is, it requires a strong will to carry out so severe a course, in spite of the langour and debility which disposes invalids to quiet and despondency.

The most marked sign of lung disease is emaciation; and the most positive indication of returning health is increase in weight.—[Hall's Journal of Health.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Los Angeles "Commercial" tells of a wonderful cure of rheumatism by the stinging of bees. The patient—Mr. L. Wackerman, residing five miles south of town—was afflicted in the right hip and shoulder. Thirty bees were applied to the hip and fifteen to the shoulder, and the operation was repeated two days later, working a complete cure.

MRS. MOLLIE UTZ, of New Albany, Ind., a little over a year ago noticed a numbness in her fingers. Since then her hands and arms nearly to the elbows have become apparently solid bone. Her physicians say that ossification will continue until some vital part is reached, when death will ensue.

A STORY comes from Boston that a woman who brought her pail to be filled at a soup-house in that city was asked how many she had in her family, and replied. "Six—my husband, myself, two dogs, and two cats; and please don't put so much pepper in the soup, the dogs don't like it."

A YOUNG wife lately lost her husband, who was about seventy years old. "But how did you happen to marry a man of that age?" asked one of her friends. "Why," said the young widow, "you see I only had the choice between two old men, and of course, I took the oldest."

THOMAS JEFFERSON was the only skeptic in the line of American Presidents; but only two of them, Washington and Garfield, have been communicants. Jackson, Harrison, Polk, Grant and Hayes were Methodists, and the rest belonged to different denominations.

THE Big Blue mine at Kernville now employs in all capacities 150 men. Kernvillites predict a boom for that locality this season, and we cordially wish they may have it.

A GENTLEMAN the other evening objected to playing cards with a young lady because, he said, she had such a winning way about her.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

THIS HONEY WAS REMOVED FROM THE comb by centrifugal force, with a machine made for the purpose. It is therefore virtually the same as honey in the comb, only you don't have to eat the bees-wax, which is indigestible and therefore disagrees with many persons. When first extracted the honey is liquid, but nearly all pure honey will candy or granulate in course of time, especially if exposed to the cold. Putting the cans in hot water for a short time will bring the honey to its fluid state without injury.

This Honey is put up in 10 pound cans, with patented screw tops, which renders it convenient for family use, and especially for the mines, to which it may be packed, even upside down, without leakage. A neat label on each can gives full directions.

Price, $1 50 per can, or 12½ cents per ℔ at the Apiary, if customers furnish their own receptacle. For sale at Harris & Rhine's, Independence, and at the Apiary, at Jacob Vagt's place, Camp Independence.

Said Bridge to be located at a point crossing Owens River about 300 yards below where the present Bend City Bridge is now situated, said location to be marked by two posts, by the Board of Supervisors.

Contractors will be furnished with necessary timbers and materials, that is to say: Contractors will dismount and take to pieces with necessary precaution the present Bend City Bridge, also the remaining section of said Bridge on the old dry channel, and haul all the timbers and materials to the location of the proposed Bridge. The caps, tie-beams, stringers, and planking of the old Bridge shall serve and be employed as caps, tie-beams, stringers and planking to rebuild said proposed bridge; the chords of the old bridge shall be used as braces of the span of the pro-proposed bridge as shown in figure 1 of the aforesaid plan; the railing of the old bridge shall be used as posts of the railing of the proposed bridge.

The laminated ribs formed of several planks or boards nailed together, of the old bridge, shall be, by the contractor, carefully unnailed and taken apart, and be used as braces of the piles as shown in figure 5, also as rails and braces as shown in figures 2 and 4, of the proposed bridge. The bolts and iron bars of the span of the old bridge shall be used to make the required bolts for the span of the proposed bridge. The county will furnish all the nails, spikes, and round iron, ¾ in., to make the pins to pin the caps and stringers; but the making of the above specified pins and bolts for the span must be included in the contract price; and no extra charges shall be allowed for the construction of said proposed bridge unless some extra work not included in the aforesaid plans and specifications be ordered by the said Board of Supervisors. Contractors shall have the privilege of using the pile-driver of the county, with the blocks and ropes belonging to the same, provided it be subjected to only the usual usage in such work, and returned to the Court House.

The person or persons to whom said contract may be awarded shall be required to give a good and sufficient bond in double the amount of such contract price for the faithful performance of such contract. Payments to be by warrants drawn upon the Special Bridge Fund and Road Fund, Dist. No. 3.

Proposals must be endorsed: "Proposals for Rebuilding Bend City Bridge." And the same will be opened between the hours of 1 and 4 o'clock, P. M., on said 2nd day of May, 1881. And the right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

How the Ancients Measured a Day.

The first and most obvious division of time is the day—the time required for a revolution of the earth upon its axis—which could not have been a difficult matter to ascertain with sufficient correctness. But to mark and fix the time of the sun's apparent revolution through the heavens among the stars was a matter of so great difficulty that it was not exactly ascertained even at the time of the reformation of the calendar in 1582; yet so uniform is the motion of the earth in its orbit that the results of modern experiments render it next to absolutely certain that the time of orbital revolution has never varied even the the fraction of a second. In the infancy of astronomy, many ingenious experiments were adopted to ascertain this and other matters connected with the times and motions of the planets and other heavenly bodies, one of which may be mentioned even at the risk of tediousness. To ascertain the exact time of the revolution of the concave of the heavens, two vessels were placed over each other, the upper filled with water, the lower empty. At the moment of the appearing of a certain star above the horizon, the water was permitted to flow from the upper into the lower vessel, and the flow was continued until the same star appeared the next night, when the flow was stopped. The whole concave of the heavens had then made one revolution. The water which had flowed out during this time was then divided into twelve equal parts, and smaller vessels were made each to hold just one of those parts, and on the following evening they repeated the operation, filling successively six of those vessels, and noting carefully what stars rose above the horizon during the time required to fill each of them. Each group of stars which rose during the time of filling one small vessel was called a station or house of the sun. They then postponed operations upon the other half of the heavens for six months, when they repeated it, and thus divided the path of the sun through the whole heavens into twelve divisions, to most of which they gave the names of certain animals; hence the term zodiac, the propriety of which could have been seen only by the fertile fancies of the childhood of the race. The whole ancient method of dividing and naming the constellations is to us utterly absurd, and is really a hindrance to a knowledge of the stars.—[Popular Science Monthly for April.

THE horses of this section are having a new and very severe form of the epizooty. Five or six have died during the week. A horse that has the new disease, instead of coghing and running at the nostrils, as with the regular epizooty, swells at the head and mouth. In this condition he lingers a week or ten days, when he usually dies. Horsemen say there is no efficient remedy for the disease.—[Genoa Journal.

Mining Debris.

IN the case of L. L. Robinson against the Black Diamond Coal Co., the Supreme Court has affirmed the ruling in favor of the plaintiff. The facts of the case under consideration are briefly as follows: Robinson was the owner of a tract of land on the San Joaquin river, and the company had been mining for coal some three miles distant from this land, at an elevation of 700 or 800 ft. above Robinson's land, and had been so engaged for many years, before the commencement of this action. Adjacent to the company's mine was Guercus creek, which extended from the mine, in a deep gulch, to the lowlands, where the watery cargo was discharged, Robinson's land being flooded thereby. According to the evidence in the case, the company deposited in the creek, at or near the mine, coal screenings, ashes and other substances which during the rainy season were carried and distributed by the waters in the creek upon Robinson's land, and the value of the land was thereby greatly depreciated. In rendering its decision the Supreme Court held that it would not be claimed that the company could convey and deposit refuse matter from its mine upon Robinson's land by means of carts, without incurring liability for any damage suffered by him by reason thereof, and the court knew of no principle upon which it could be held that a person may escape liability by doing that indirectly which would render him liable if done directly.

FRENCH newspapers report the discovery in Algiers, by the archæologist M. Tarry, of a city which has been entombed in the sand. M. Tarry's attention had been awakened by the mound like appearance of the sandy soil, and some digging brought to light the minarets and upper portion of a mosque. Further excavations laid bare a terrace, a tower, and about a dozen houses, all in excellent preservation. He reported his discovery to the Government of Algiers, which has undertaken to have the site thoroughly explored. The place is in the southern part of the province, not far from the town of Ouargla, and exposed to the full blast of the sandy winds of the desert. Probably a succession of siroccos bearing clouds of sand completely filled up the streets and houses, making the town uninhabitable, and so drove out the population. At present there is no ground for conjecture as to the date of the occurrence.

HOW TO FIX IT.—Of course every one cannot get the tenderloin, the butcher naturally saving it for the best paying customers. But by following the following directions, every one can have good tender steak: Choose a platter large enough to spread the steak upon; put on pepper, a tablespoonful of vinegar and three tablespoonsful of olive oil. The pepper keeps away the flies, the vinegar softens the fibers, and the oil keeps it soft. This is the great French secret. Let it stand for about four hours. That will generally make a tough steak tender. You can leave it over night. The vinegar will not taste. If this is done a good deal of profanity, expressed or implied, wasted on the butcher can be turned to advantage in other directions.

TESTING EGGS.—"Les Mondes" gives the following old recipe for testing the age of eggs, which it thinks, seems to have been forgotten. As nature thinks so too, we may reproduce the recipe for our younger readers, and also as having other possible applications. Dissolve 120 grammes of common salt in a liter of water. An egg put in this solution on the day it is laid will sink to the bottom; one day old it will not sink quite to the bottom of the vessel; an egg three days old will swim in the liquid; while one more than three days old will swim on the surface.—[Rural Press.

AN aged negro the other day was showing the scars of the wounds inflicted by the lash when he was a slave. "What a picture!" exclaimed a looker on. "Yes," responded the colored brother, "dat's the work of the old masters."

A SOUTHERN Californian prophet says that San Francisco, with the surrounding towns and cities will be destroyed before the harvest of 1881.

The Southern Nevada.

Notwithstanding the fact that the Carson and Colorado railroad is pushing down into southern Esmeralda the Southern Nevada is not to be shut off or outstripped in the race. The surveyors for the Southern Nevada Railway left Ledlie station last Friday morning for the purpose of running a line from that point to Grantsville. The route to be taken by the surveyors will be up Reese river valley to a point 16 miles from Ledlie, where they will cross a low ridge and enter the Smith Creek and Ione valley, down which they will run until a point near the town of Grantsville is reached. The route is said to be an excellent one for the reason that only one divide or ridge will have to be crossed, that between Reese river and Smith creek valleys. The balance of the route is level and can be made ready for the rails at a reasonable expense. The surveying party will be in the field about three weeks, after which they will return and make a report, and in the course of five or six weeks active work will be commenced by the graders. By the first of September the locomotive's whistle will be heard in the growing town of Grantsville. The road will be built by the owners of the Nevada Central, and after once fairly started the work will be pushed with despatch. The necessary funds are in an eastern bank and no delay will be had on account of finance.—[Candelaria True Fissure.

A STATE Prison officer stated to an "Appeal" reporter yesterday that the strangest changes in the natures of men take place after they are consigned to the State Prison. For instance, the most daring and desperate criminal, after he assumes the regulation garb, becomes the most tractable and subdued; while, on the other hand, those who are committed for minor offences, are the most difficult to manage. Such culprits as Pritchard, Sharp, the stage robber, and others of that ilk, do no more think of infringing upon the prison rules than they do of abandoning hope for an ultimate pardon. The sneak thief, however, who is incarcerated for "robbing a drunk" for a sufficient amount to bring his crime up to the standard of grand larcency, is always getting himself into trouble by the feigning of bravado, which his cowardly nature would not permit him to exhibit outside of prison walls. That class of convicts try the patience and endurance of those who are incarcerated for greater crimes, the commission of which requires the demonstration of a certain amount of courage. Under these circumstances, prison officers are surprised, in the face of all the vigilance they exercise, that not more of the "lower caste" convicts meet with sudden death from "unknown" causes.—[Carson Appeal.

Water for Candelaria.

Col. J. W. Sutherland, a prominent Chicago lawyer, who has been spending the last two weeks in this city, left for Candelaria yesterday morning, where he will superintend the building of water works as the representative of a wealthy New York company, which has been organized for that purpose. There are now thirty-five car loads of pipe on the way from the East, which are expected daily to arrive, and the work is to be pushed forward at once. The water is to be conducted from the White Mountains, a distance of twenty-three miles. At present the dwellers in that benighted camp pay five cents per gallon for drinking water, strongly impregnated with alkali. Baths of the same kind of fluid cost two dollars each, and the water is used over and over again for perhaps fifty baths. The introduction of fresh snow water by Col. Sunderland and his associates will be joyfully hailed by the Candelarians.—[Carson Appeal.

SOME Rhode Island militia, in camp last Summer at Warnock, destroyed the nest and eggs of a setting hen. The owner had counted a great deal on the unhatched chickens, and has presented to the Legislature a claim for $600.

THEY had been at the masquerade, where she had recognized him at once. "Was it the loud beating of my heart, my darling, that told you I was near?" murmured he, "Oh. no," she replied, "I recognized your crooked legs."

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

SATURDAY, APRIL 30.....1881

WE have several times tried to dissuade people from trying to become Czars, Kings, Potentates and the like, and we hope none of our friends will. Just notice what a wretched life the Czar leads. "At one time the late Czar was prevailed upon to wear a chain breastplate under his tunic, but though one of the lightest kind was made for him he could not bear its weight, so the expedient was adopted of causing his tunics to be padded with cotton wool steeped in a preparation which hardened it, and rendered it, if not bullet-proof, at least knife-proof, and difficult for even a bullet to pierce at a long shot. An attempt was made some time ago to poison the Czar by sending him a petition covered with some noxious powder, since which he ceased to receive letters, papers, or petitions. For a similar reason he gave up smoking, though he used to like a cigar, and he drank no wine from bottles uncorked in his presence. In the Imperial kitchen the Czar's food was prepared by a French cook, who plied all his avocations under the eyes of two police guards—not that the cook himself could incur any suspicion, but because some conspirator might have got at the ingredients he was preparing. The food was always cooked in the simplest way, without sauces, and it was tasted by two officials before it was served at the Czar's table. Everything that Alexander II. ate or drank was tasted in his presence, and all the attendance in the dining room was performed by servants of tried fidelity."

A CORRESPONDENT of the Philadelphia Press says: "When York, Pa., was in possession of the Confederates, at the time of which I write, General Early, who commanded, levied a contribution of $100,000 upon the city. As nearly all the ready cash had been removed before he arrived, he only got $30,000. So confident was he in the success of the campaign in which he was engaged that he took the bonds of the corporation officers for the additional $75,000. He was beaten at Gettysburg, and the bonds were never presented. There is a story now in New York that General Early still has the bonds, and contemplates bringing a suit against the city to recover the amount.

THE Illinois Legislature has passed the bill taxing the railroad companies of the State 2½ per cent on their gross earnings. It is thought a much better way than the method of taxing them on their property, whose value it is difficult to determine. The estimated product of the tax is $1,000,000 a year. The Illinois Central, the largest and most important line of road in the State, is not included in the arrangement, as under its charter it has always paid 7 per cent. of its gross earnings to the State.

Mr. SELIGMAN, the President of the New York Hebrew Orphan Asylum, gave $20,000 last Winter to be divided among different benevolent institutions of the city, without regard to their religious beliefs. The Astors, as every body knows, are the most wealthy families in New York. They have lately raised rents on all of their houses, thus squeezing a few more dollars out of their tenants. Which is the Christian? Which is the Jew?

IT is suggested that the good time coming, when swords shall be beaten into plowshares, etc., has dawned on Atlanta, Ga. The Christian Index, a religious paper published there, has a font of type cast from bullets used by the Union and Confederate armies before General Sherman entered the city.

ONE of the best indications that the war is really over is the failure of Jeff Davis' history of the rebellion. Nobody seems to care anything about it, and booksellers find it in such small demand that it does not pay to keep. The failure to hang Jeff Davis is what killed him.

THE Star service has suddenly fallen into disrepute. Brady has been removed and the wires are freighted with promised scandalous disclosures. The operations of the Tweed ring, we are told, will dwindle into insignificance when the details of the Brady ring are made public.

A GENTLEMAN in New York, who does not desire to have his name made public, has given $50,000 to the Technical Art School, and a promise of $50,000 more if, after a year or two of trial, the experiment shall have proved a success. This is a shining example of generosity and modesty.

THE second trial of Clarence Gray, of Santa Barbara, for the murder of Theodore Glancey, is set for May 3d.

ABOUT AN ELECTION THIS FALL.

The beauties of the New Confustion are continually coming to the surface, and are likely to do so for an indefinite time to come. Two years ago, or at the time of the last election for county officers, it was understood that the terms of the officers then elected with certain exceptions, expired in a year thereafter, at which time another election was to be held, all in accordance with the provisions of the New Constitution. This election, which should have taken place last Fall, was upset by a decision of the Supreme Court in relation to the unconstitutional County Government bill, or for some other reason, no man knoweth what. Anyway, no election was then held, and in default of the same, the terms of the officers elected the Fall before for one year were extended one or two years longer, but whether one or two years, deponent sayeth not. for he didn't know anything about it, nor of any one else who did know. But it was generally admitted that it must be for two years longer, since the much admired instrument, above alluded to, fixed the time of such election to occur in an even numbered year only. But now we are told that agreeably with the provisions of the Constitution, which prohibits an extension of the terms of county officers, Governor Perkins will in due time issue his proclamation, calling an election for county officers this coming Fall. The officers then elected will have but one year to serve, as next year the regular "even year" election takes place. The fact is, the Governor should have ordered an election last year—an "even" year, and the officers would have been elected as the Constitution intended they should be. The editor of the Salinas Index is a State Senator, and that paper says:

"The election law passed at the late session of the Legislature does not, as some suppose, settle the question as to whether we are to have an election for county officers or not. It simply provides that there shall be a general election in 1882, and that county officers, except Assessors and School Superintendents, shall hold office two years. This was done in order to bring future elections on the even numbered years. No provision is made for an extension of the terms of the present incumbents, there being no reference to it whatever in the law. We have good authority for believing that the Governor will issue a proclamation for an election this Fall, in which the successful candidates will hold office only one year.

A GROWING indifference to religious services is noted in England as well as here. The Rev. Newman Hall says there is throughout that country a diminishing attendance on public worship. "As a rule," he adds, "in our large towns skilled artisans ignore our ecclesiastical arrangements. I do not say they are aggressively hostile or ostensibly infidels, but they are indifferent to our ordinary public services. As a class they do not go to Church. To a large extent this is true also among the upper ranks of fashion, wealth and intellect." He regrets, too, that a majority of English church-goers content themselves with the morning services on Sunday, leaving the churches almost empty in the evening. His figures as to London are as follows: "London has four millions of people, of whom one half might at one time be at church; but for these two millions there is only church accomodation for one-half, and of these one million of seats one half a million are not at any one time occupied."

Is card-playing sinful? The general opinion is that it is when the other side wins, but not so long as your side comes out ahead. A German philosopher denounces it as the most debasing of all modern occupations. He says of card players: "Having no thoughts to exchange, they change cards, and try to catch each other's dollars. The sense of the game is to win his fellow's property by any means of cunning devices. And the habit of doing so in playing takes root and effects a man's proceedings in practical life, leading him step by step to do so similarly in transactions affecting property, and to consider the use of any advantage justifiable which he may be able to hold, if the law only justifies." To this the Carson Appeal adds: Now we know what the matter is with the fellow. He has been playing pedro, for four bits a corner, over bid his hand, lost his pedro and got set back—hence the iron has entered his soul. Lots of us know how it is ourselves.

IN Cork county, Ireland, the sum expended by masters of fox-hounds exceeds $100,000 a year, exclusive of that spent by those taking part in the sport, but it is feared that Land League obstruction may lead to packs being given up. Mr. Stackpoole's harriers are advertised for sale "in consequence of mobs being sent to the meets to prevent hunting."

APRIL 14th was the sixty-third anniversary of the birthday of the flag of the United States, as adopted and established by Congress in 1818, when it was for the first time hoisted over the House of Representatives.

A NEW YORK special says: "The New York branch of the International Society at a secret meeting yesterday are said to have gone through the formality of trying and condemning the Czar Alexander III., for the murder of Sophia Perofsky and her confederates. On such occasions, it is said all the regular forms of judicial proceedings are scrupulously observed, the accused Czar being allowed counsel even to plead against the indictment, and the verdict being dependent upon the decision of twelve men regularly sworn, the President of the society acting as Judge. When the proceedings are concluded an official report is drawn up and forwarded to the parent society in London, or Geneva or wherever else it may be located. The same ceremony is said to be observed in all the great cities where a branch of the International exists. The existence of a branch society in New York, it may be added, is well known to the Russian Embassy at Washington as well as to the Russian Consulate here, and it is certain that outgoing lists of passengers for Europe are narrowly watched by their paid agents with a view of keeping track of whatever suspicious characters may be on board. If any such are discovered, a full description of their person is cabled to the Consul residing at the port to which the steamer is bound and also to military headquarters at St. Petersburg. How these agents manage to do this sort of work without uncovering themselves is a mystery, but some of the more shrewd of our New York detectives, who appear to know all about it, profess to be able to single them out on the wharves almost any steamer day."

THE biggest prize fight ever seen since "those days when there were giants" came off in North Carolina, the other day, between Preston Holloway, seven feet nine inches high, weighing 550 pounds, and Andrew Walker, who is half an inch taller, but weighing only 500 pounds. They are hard working farmers, and either of them can lift 1,000 pounds. After much talk by "disinterested" friends, they concluded the State wasn't big enough to hold two such titans, hence the fight, which was according to ring rules, and witnessed by a large crowd. After an hours struggle in a vain effort to throw each other, they got good and mad and went at it like two grizzlies. Walker finally struck Holloway in the throat and knocked him down. He came up again however, and got another of the same which came near killing him outright. Holloway is broken hearted over his defeat, and says he will never show his face again.

A SPECIAL from Little Rock, Arkansas, to the St. Louis Republican says: "Information has been received from Izard county of finding dead the body of Rev. Robt. Matlock, who was tried in Lawrence county last week for the murder of Thomas Miller last August. Matlock was aquitted and left town secretly, as threats had been made to lynch him. Friends of the murdered man have been in pursuit of him since his aquittal, determined to avenge Miller's death, and it appears they have succeeded. Matlock created considerable excitement in Central Arkansas a year ago being then engaged with others in conducting a new religious reformation. It is said that several murders resulted from these mens teachings, one of their articles of faith being that the shedding of blood was necessary to appease an offended God. These murders were supplemented by a series of lynchings, which effectually checked further progress of the religious frenzy."

Speaking of the Senate dead-lock the Tribune's Washington correspondent says: A new plan to bring the Democrats to terms has been broached. In the course of a conversation with your correspondent to day a Senator, who is in favor of the new plan, described it as follows: It would be perfectly in order for Garfield to send a message to the Senate saying that inasmuch as that body has not completed its organization so that it can proceed with the consideration of executive business he has concluded to withdraw all nominations now pending. This would leave the Senate with no business before it except the resolution to elect officers, and the Democrats would be compelled either to allow a vote to be taken upon that or take the suicidal step of moving to adjourn sine die. After the Senate had adjourned the President could go on and make appointments under the authority of the Constitution and the laws.

TALKING of public education, Whitelaw Reid, editor of the New York Tribune, lately said: "Strengthen the basis of the school system before you increase the superstructure. Teach few things, but teach them so they will be absolutely known. Make the course of studies more compact and manageable; postpone the accomplishments; banish every science and drawing, and first give the child what is essential for practical business of life and a basis for self-improvement."

LETTER FROM THE CAPITAL.

SACRAMENTO, April 24.

MESSRS. EDITORS—The Governor's estimate of the length of the extra session, as predicted, fell short. The "twenty days" event has come and gone, but the Legislature is here all the same. At the rate it progresses with the work mapped out, full as much more time will be required to complete it. Still, there is a feeling in the air that the present week will see the beginning of the end, at least, but it will not be because of innate or phenominal desire to close up the work short off. What, if anything, will bring about any sudden adjournment, is the fact that quite a number of either House desire, and are determined, as it were, to go home and attend to private affairs, regardless of what, under other circumstances, would induce them to remain and "fight it out," etc. The Senate

ROAD BILL

Has occupied the Assembly all of the past week, in addition to the time spent in discussing it the week before. And what a debate it has been! It has covered every phase of the question from the Appian Way of old Rome, up to the broad and narrow guage routes to death and eternal life. It has comprehended the subject of vehicles, inclusive of the chariot of fire that wafted the prophet to glory, down to common wheelborrows, by circles and broomsticks.

GRASSHOPPERS,

Gophers and grizzly bears have in turn waltzed up and down this legislative measure, and especially has the "old horse turned out to die" been compelled to show cause. Pennyroyal, cocklebburs, wild mustard and wood-ticks have been made to stand and deliver. The talking member from Sonoma proposed to amend so that a wagon carrying a ton should have a tire three inches broad, and every additional ton an extra inch of tire. A dozen members speaking in as many different subjects at once was a frequent occurrence, and the wonder is, the entire Assembly has not resolved itself into a Donnybrook Fair, or a wild breakdown, to the seductive strains of "Old Virginny Never Tire," or the "Rocky Road to Dublin." I knew well what it was going to be, having been through the mill one year ago. To hear the talking member from Nevada call the talking member from Alameda a "fool," and in turn be called a "—— fool," was of no concern to the Speaker, who had long ago resolved not to try to suppress the average language of the average member, when such an every day subject as roads and highways was on the tapis. This is about the only subject of the year that

"SLICKENS"

Has not entered, notwithstanding the rivers are (or were) designated as highways. It is not too late yet, however, for debris to step in; for, when the bill goes back to the Senate, its fathers won't know it from a last year's crow's nest. The Senate is making a perfect ass of itself from top to bottom, in its "anti-debris" crusade, and the end is not yet. That illustrious body has busied itself the past week in efforts to destroy all hopes of a survey for irrigation purposes, and to-morrow (Monday) it will attempt to legislate the Engineer himself out of office. How

THE GENERAL APPROPRIATION BILL

Will look when it returns to the house of its paternity remains to be seen, but there is enough done already to cause the most obtuse organ of smell to scent a battle near at hand. And so it goes. All hands have been skirmishing on the outside concerning the proposed apportionment. On the floor of the Assembly the respective parties are shy of starting the ball. It is a case of "One is afraid, and the other dare not." Open, organized hostilities are not unlikely to ensue before this letter reaches you, and the telegraph will have told you more or less of the preliminary result. As a general proposition, the Democrats desire no law at all on that subject, while the Republicans are not harmonized on the question of details. It will be fortunate for the State, perhaps, should no bill pass, for several counties outside of San Francisco are entitled to an increased legislative representation by reason of a decided increase of population, while the metropolis has not increased. Hence the importance and opportunity respecting the influence offsetting the ward politics of our top-heavy chief city. There cannot be too much harmony on this question among outside or interior people regardless of partisan predilections. This is almost all that can be said of the extra session up to date, without going into details innumerable, and to the average reader, hardly worth the effort. At best, it is a most complicated and interwoven outfit, and if anything results satisfactory to all concerned, outside of final adjournment, it will be more a matter of accident than design.

Dwight Crittenden, for a year or more Superintendent of the

MAMMOTH MINE,

At Mammoth City, Mono county, stopped off here one train last week, on his return over the mountains. It seems that the Cook Bros., and John F. Boyd have a working bond on some half a dozen mining claims between Beveridge and Cerro Gordo, east side of the range, and have been digging into them since the 1st of March, and will continue the work for a month or so yet. Crittenden is superintending it. The ledges are in a granite-limestone formation, and rich in silver ore; vary from two to seven feet in thickness. The plan of development is by tunnels on line of ledge. They are located about 1,000 feet in altitude above Saline Valley. There is an abundance of fuel near by, and a stream that is expected to afford even good water power. It is to be hoped development will be such as to induce those rich and experienced miners to purchase and go ahead with the work. It might inaugurate a new departure in Inyo affairs. J. W.

"Why did Pharoah kill the boy babies, and not the girls?" asked a teacher of her class of girls the other day. "Because boys are so much worse than girls," was the prompt reply of a little maid.

Says the Prescott (A. T.) Miner: Able-bodied men and women can find plenty of work in Yavapai county, Arizona. Let San Francisco, and other cities where a surplus of these persons are stopping, disgorge. Good wages can be obtained and no difficulty in finding immediate employment.

The Tuscon (A. T.) Citizen says that the antimony mines are the boom of Sonora. Ore of that kind in such quantities has not been recorded in the known world. About 300 tons taken from a shaft 70 feet in depth on the Sta. Margarita contain over 70 per cent. antimony and at least $200 per ton. silver.

Loring Farr, a Mormon polygamist who has been visiting Butte, Montana, was asked by an Inter-Mountain reporter whether he thought the Government would crush out polygamy. The reply was: "Certainly not. We believe in a higher law than the law of Congress, and we shall obey which one we see fit."

A Santa Clara farmer says: A calf at three months of age is worth $6, at twelve months old $12, at two years $20 to $24, at three years a young cow, with a young calf at her side, is worth from $35 to $50; then I sell them, as after this age they do not pay so well. Cows bring in $50 per annum in butter and cheese.

There is a young man at the West End who thinks men, as well as women, should know how to cook, and he spends a couple of hours in the kitchen every day, studying the art, instead of going down town to business. His father will discharge the handsome young cook and get an old and ugly one, in hopes of breaking up the folly of his son.—Boston Post.

A PRESS dispatch from Elgin, Illinois, dated April 28th, gives the following account of an appalling disaster: "Between 8 and 9 o'clock this morning a small boat running over Fox river, between East and West Elgin, as a ferry boat to take the place of the bridge recently washed away, was capsized and all the passengers to the number of fifty, with but one exception, were drowned. The boat was a mere scow, just purchased at a cost of $150, and was propelled by a rope. The first trip was made yesterday afternoon. Those lost were nearly all school children, who were on their way to school on the West side. The accident occurred in mid stream and from what cause cannot now be told."

EAGLE LAKE is 100 miles north of Reno, Nev., and contains 116 square miles of water surface. A tunnel one mile long will be run to a point twelve feet below the level of the lake, and through that outlet the water will be diverted for fluming and irrigating purposes. The lake is surrounded with a thick growth of magnificent sugar-pine, fir and ordinary pine timber. This will be cut and floated through the tunnel to a sawmill. The lumber will be dumped into the flume and floated to some station on the Oregon and Nevada Railroad.

A volume of smoke rises constantly from the midst of a densely wooded morass in Wakula county, Florida, and has for at least 50 years been a mystery to the people of that region. The spot is five miles from the nearest point to which any person has ever penetrated. The negroes believe it to be an entrance to hell, and regard it with awe. Some of the whites accept the theory of a volcano. Judge White of Tallahassee lately organized an expedition to explore the swamp, but, it seems, failed to make a way into the tangle of rank growth.

AT a very dignified meeting of physicians the question, "Why does hanging kill a man?" was discussed in all its phases. The most learned and technical phraseology was used to describe the pressure of the hemp on the esophagus, but one more learned than the rest declared that the real reason was that the rope was not long enough to allow the poor fellow's feet to touch the ground.

DIED.

At Bishop Creek, Inyo county, Cal., April 18, 1881, of diphtheria, CLUDE ADAIR, son of Mr. and Mrs. WM. O. HARRELL, aged 4 years 3 months and 27 days.

[For some unexplained reason, the above never reached this office until yesterday. We can only extend to the bereaved parents our most heartfelt sympathies in their loss, for which earth has no compensation—a loss all the harder to bear, though to a parent's loving heart no greater in fact because the little fellow was one of the vesy brightest, most intelligent to be found anywhere, and a pet with all who knew him.]

At Bishop Creek, Inyo County, Cal., April 21, 1881, Mrs. Elizabeth McCrosky, in the 50th year of her age.

The pall of sadness has been suddenly thrown over this community at a time when many were anticipating mirth and gaiety in the coming week. Mrs. Elizabeth, the esteemed wife of Mr. W. G. McCrosky of this town, died last Thursday about one o'clock in the afternoon, in her 50th year, after a brief sickness from neuralgia in the head, terminating in a congestive chill. Mr. McCrosky and his family were among the early settlers in this valley, and are highly esteemed by the entire community.

She leaves seven children, the youngest about 14 years of age; and one grandchild left an infant in her charge by its mother, some four years ago.

The funeral service was held at the Baptist church on Friday at 2 o'clock. The house was filled with sympathizing friends, many standing without for want of room. Rev. A. Clark preached a very impressive discourse from Heb. xiii: 14: "Here we have not a continued city but we look for one to come." May the star of hope guide the bereaved family to the peaceful realms where sorrow and sighing are unknown. L. R.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:
SATURDAY, APRIL 30.....1881

TO BEGIN.—We understand that the work of re-roofing the Court House is to be begun next week. If Contractor Tuttle had been present one morning just after the late rain, and noted what then occured he would have thought it high time to commence stopping leaks. When Court convened, his Honor found the "Bench" damp, very damp, but stuck to it as if it were really refreshing. It was different with the Clerk; his was a solid bottomed-chair, dished just right to hold about a pint more or less of water. The water was there, but unobserved till too late to avoid a catastrophe of no particular consequence to anybody but the Scribe himself. They do say he came up like a "Jack in the box," and exploded a "swear" quite out of the usual form in this Court. Perhaps he thought he was burnt; but he wasn't, for the water was nearly icy cold, and had come down through the roof, which is now to be replaced with a new one.

FEELING WELL.—Bishop Creekers and Deep Springites and Big Piners and all the people up that way, are said to be feeling much better than common, all on account of recent rich gold developments made in what was formerly known as the Hard Cash mine, and a number of other locations on the same vein, which are quite as promising as the original location. These locations are upon the northeast border of Deep Spring Valley. Samples from an adjoining claim, called the Pioneer, yield from $37 to $52 per ton in gold, although no gold is visible to the unaided eye. The vein is large, and the ore closely resembles that of Bodie. A very encouraging indication is the manifest improvement in the ore as depth is attained.

LONE PINE MATTERS.—A Lone Pine enthusiast sends the following by special messenger, accompanied by $3 cash: "We are going to have a regular boom in Lone Pine....A whisky boom ...John Hughes and Dan Williams, old Cerro Gordo rigids, now engineer the Schulte sample rooms....Chris. Crilovitch is major domo of the Cohn Hotel ....Dick Richards and Miguel Castro have the machinery in Peterson Hall nearly ready to steam up....Von Briesen's Centennial Brewery is swelling Internal Revenue receipts more and more each day.... All the old mills are in full blast, and several new ones are in contemplation.....Last, but not least, the Lone Pine Glee Club will present a most pleasing entertainment on the evening of May 4th.....A grand ball is to be the wind-up."

WHAT HE THINKS.—An acquaintance of ours, noticing that Rothschild & Co. were, this morning, shipping an unusually large shipment of supplies to miners over in the Inyos, in the vicinity of Cerro Gordo, grows spasmodically hopeful and sees in the next six month's vista something like 20,000 people—many of them all "swolled up" with capital—ranging through Inyo hunting for, buying, selling, and developing mines. We coincide in this view to this extent—that it will take 20,000 robust people to find a "sure enough" mine this side of the Colorado, such as will induce money kings to stage it in here to look at.

POSTPONED.—It has been deemed best to postpone the proposed exhibition for the benefit of our Sunday School from Tuesday next until the evening of Wednesday, May 18. The young people will thus gain ample time for preparation, and there is no doubt but they will furnish a very enjoyable entertainment. Preparations will also be made for supplies of ice cream, strawberries and cream, candies, cake, etc., free to all who want such things—and who don't?—and will pay for the same. The programme will be published in due time, probably next issue.

"COMING EVENTS CAST," ETC.—As an indication of the coming boom we find the Independence Assay Office crowded with business. Bishop Creek, Deep Spring, Waucoba, Union, Beveridge, Cerro Gordo, Swansea and Kearsarge Districts are all sending in representative ores to that office for analytical treatment. It is pleasing to note that the later finds appear to be of an unusually high grade of ores. Guess there's a good time coming, and, perhaps, it's nearer at hand than Wood River.

ANOTHER OBSERVATION.—That same old friend sends us the manuscript of the following: "That description of 'The Latest Mining News' must have been made by a first-class expert; the writer of this considers himself high up on the scale, but gives in and declares himself beat. But there is one kind of stuff contained in the Whangdoodle that he overlooked. It is called yokle, and is found in small pieces."

GONE AGAIN.—Jas. E., the junior of this paper, has again gone on a trip, this time to Deep Spring. Greenly took him there in a wagon, and he expects to get back early next week and report observationc as to Deep Spring prospects.

TO MEET.—The honorable Board of Supervisors convene on Monday for the transaction of regular business and also to open bids and perhaps, award contracts for rebuilding the Bend City bridge, and for materials for the same as advertised in these columns.

NOTICE.—Supt. Symmes, ex officio Secretary of the County Board of Education, gives official notice in this issue that that body will next meet on Wednesday, May 18.

IS BOSS AGAIN.—It will be observed by his new advertisement, this issue, that Omie Mairs has resumed management of the Pioneer Stables. And he has some good stock and vehicles, too.

SOME MORE IN RELATION TO THE BISHOP CREEK SHOOTING.—Last Saturday, after the paper was put to press, we received a curtly worded letter from Mr. P. W. Forbes demanding a correction of our statement in the previous issue, wherein it was stated that he had appeared in Court and given his statement during the examination of Mr. Adams. In all we have had to say in relation to this unfortunate affair we have been especially careful to make no assertion of facts except upon reasonable authority. It was in an effort to carry out this desire that the error complained of by Mr. Forbes occurred, and in this way: The writer of this (with but little time at his disposal for the purpose), glanced through the mass of testimony, taken before the Justice, and filed in the Clerk's office. Among the rest, appeared Mr. Forbes' own statement of the affair, signed by him. Our error was in not noting that it was a deposition and not a transcript of testimony elicited in open Court, as we assumed it to be, and therefrom further assumed, naturally enough, that witness had so far recovered as to be again on his feet. In all else, we gave the exact substance, if not the exact wording, of this and other testimony so far as given at all. The document on which we based that statement reads exactly as follows in quotation: "Personally appeared before me, a Justice of the Peace of said Township, P. W. Forbes, who deposes and says that on the 7th of April, 1881, he was in Jack Horton's saloon, Inyo county, California. Mr. Adams, the defendant, called me up to take a drink," etc., etc. Then follows the testimony heretofore given, and very much more, signed by Mr. Forbes and the Justice, together with date of filing (April 7th), all in the same general form as the numerous other "depositions" to which it was attached. And it was nowhere recorded, so far as we observed, that it was the Justice who appeared before Mr. Forbes, and not the reverse, which last might be inferred. We last week gave an extract from the Bodie paper purporting to put "a very different face on the affair" from the account first given in this paper, as affecting the defendant in this case. So far as we are able to judge, the "face," remained identically as before in its material point; nor do we perceive that the correction, above made, is of any more materiality to the actual merits of the case one way or the other; it was none the less the recorded testimony, though originally given in the form of a deposition. As to the nature of the wound: As the first reached of the depositions of the two surgeons, we gave the substance, briefly as possible, of but one—Dr. Howell's. But as it seems the real extent of Mr. Forbes' wound is quite generally underrated, we will add Mr. Forbes' own statement in relation thereto, as follows: "Immediately after the shooting, I proceeded to Howell & Bicknell's office to have my wound dressed. Dr. Howell found two wounds about two inches apart, at one of which he thought the ball had passed out, as I had only received one shot. Howell then dressed the wound, and between 11 and 12 o'clock of that night I went to bed, where I remained till the 16th. On the 8th (the next day), Dr. Bicknell opened the wound and found that the ball was yet in my head. Dr. Bicknell (assisted by Dr. Howell) cut the scalp from one wound to the other, laid the skull bare, extracted the bullet and several pieces of the skull bone, one of which was full half an inch square, at the same time ordering me not to quit my bed, which last, I may add, was not necessary. How THE INDEPENDENT, after this kind of a racket, can stand a man on his feet, the next day, travel him all over town and everywhere else, is a mystery to me [We did nothing of the kind, even inferentially—EDS.]; it would be a bonanza to some of local physicians. If you can find any evidence given by me at the examination on the 9th, I would like to know it, as would several others, who know I was in bed at the time." As may be seen by what is said above, we got the results of the preliminary and subsequent examinations mixed; but the distinction was not material in an account of what it alluded to, otherwise we should most likely have been more particular, and dated that part on the 7th instead of the 9th, when the final examination occurred.

PERSONAL.—Judge Duncan Campbell, of Big Pine, passed through a few days ago on his return from Los Angeles, whither he went with Mrs. Campbell some weeks ago for the benefit of her health. She remains at that sanatarium, and, we regret to say, still in very poor health.....Mr. Crittenden, superintending mines at Beveridge, was here during the week on his return from San Francisco to Beveridge....Miss Nellie Hughes, not many years since one of our Independence toddlers, now a fine looking young woman, passed here on her way from Bishop to visit her father at Lone Pine who is on the sick list. ....V. G. Thompson, of the Blaney House, has just returned from a visit of inspection among the Deep Spring mines—and he is a believer in those same mines.

DENTISTRY.—Dr. M. W. Parsons, of Stockton, wishes us to announce that he will shortly make a professional visit to this section. He is a Dentist of some twenty years' experience, and, we believe from our knowledge of him when he made a like visit here some years ago, that he is a master in his profession. His formal announcement will appear next issue.

TO-MORROW.—There will be preaching in the School House to-morrow evening as usual and Sunday School at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

IT now takes but twelve hours to go from Carson or Virginia City to Bodie.

Los Angeles has a society known as the Los Angelos Holiness Band. Letters of incorporation have been filed, and the members belong to a new sect, known as "Perfectionists." One of the incorporators is a real estate agent, who says he has not committed a sin for thirty years. Nevertheless, it will be just as well, and perhaps a little better, to lock up chicken houses when those Perfectionists are around, especially that real estate agent.

A RUMOR comes from Oakland that the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Company has negotiated the purchase of the South Pacific Coast Railroad company's road, including its ferry franchises between San Francisco, Oakland and Alameda. There is possibly some foundation for the rumor, as the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe people have been doing a good deal of negotiating, surveying, etc., in Alameda. The supposition is that the trans-continental line will strike the Southern Pacific road at Newark.—S. F. Alta.

THE first man arrested for violation of the new law in Wisconsin against "treating" was an editor who had jocosely favored the bill when pending in the Legislature. The Courts have declared the law inoperative, because of some carelessness in its preparation, and invitations to guzzle are not to be suppressed.

G. W. Garside returned from Gold Mountain yesterday. He says matters in that camp are moving along as rapidly as possible. All the pipe for bringing in the water is already on the ground, and the only delay caused in that direction is the lack of lead for which the company has sent and which is not yet delivered. As soon as the lead shall arrive the work of laying the pipe will be pushd as fast as possible. Much of the necessary material for the mill is not yet on the ground, though it is daily expected. In the mine proper the work of sinking is being rapidly done. Mr. Garside expresses himself surprised at the extent and value of the mine, and freely says it is the coming wonder of the coast. He suveyed the townsite and made maps and plats of it, so that those desirous of purchasing may know where the different lots are located. Gold Mountain, in his opinion will be a 'booming camp before many months.—[Candelaria True Fissure.

FRIDAY morning's stage brought back several old Bodie miners who "looked too high for things close by" and rushed off to Arizona several months since, and they say hundreds of others would return if they had the means to do so. They say there are about 400 miners at work at Tombstone, and over 3,000 idle men on the streets, some of them literally starving by inches. One of the returned miners, being tired from his stage ride up from Hawthorne, put the whole story into a nutshell by remarking to an old sport with whom he was aquainted: "Why, you can imagine what utter destitution prevails in Arizona when I tell you they are running ten-cent faro games down there—fact?"—[Bodie Free Press.

THE late Illinois Legislature gave the State a new law requiring all dealers in deadly weapons to keep a register, open to the public, giving the names and ages of all persons to whom such weapons are sold, which record must also give the price paid and the object for which it is bought. It is also made a misdemeanor, punishable by fines varying from $25 to $200, to carry a razor concealed as a weapon. This law causes the Chicago Times to remark that hereafter citizens of Illinois will have to file a declaration of their intentions before they can commit murder.

COMMITTING perjury for hire has not proven profitable to James O. Brien, who swore, last Fall, that he knew H. L. Morey, the mythical gentleman to whom Garfield did not write the famous Chinese letter. O'Brien has just been sentenced to eight years imprisonment for his share in that scoundrelly political trick, which punishment will certainly overbalance any benefit that he derived from his false swearing. If Justice shall lay her hand as heavily upon the other guilty conspirators, honest partisans of whatever party will rejoice.

A CONNECTICUT Judge has been investigating the beggar business, paying attention to it for thirty years. The result is certainly not complimentary to Europe. He says that out of the thousands of cases of street beggars inquired into by him he has never found an American among them. He closely investigated several hundred cases, and found in every one "a foreigner and a liar."

THE Mussle Slough settlers who are imprisoned in Fresno county write that the proposition on the part of 5,000 people in San Francisco to deliver them by force is declined with thanks. They wish to excite no act of violence, and will abide by the law. These are hardly the sort of men who should be driven off land they have paid for and are trying to develop.

HE was too solemn a preacher; he didn't suit in Nevada. The chairman of the farewell committee expressed it well. Said he: "Now you can git, pard; we ain't agin religon out here, and it riles us to see a fellow trifilin' it. Git."

IT has just been discovered that President Garfield bought a plug of tobacco the other day without consulting Mr. Conkling.—[Chicago Tribune.

"I'VE noticed," says Fuddidud, "that all the railroads run past all the fences that are painted all over with medical advertisements. It's funny," he added, "but it's so. Did any of you ever notice it?" All present acknowledged it had never occurred to them before—just that way. Fuddidud is more than ever convinced of his profundity.

IT is said that the Prince of Wales, as the highest officer in Templarism, is about to confer on President Garfield the Grand Cross of the Temple, The only Knight in America who has that order is M. THE Governor-General of Canada draws $50,000 annually, the same salary the President of the United States is entitled to. But the Canadian official has not one-tenth of the population or the wealth to draw upon that the President has. And the services of the former are not important. He is the fifth wheel of a very small coach.

SOUTHERN UTAH, already noted for the variety of its minerals, is expected to come to the front shortly with an unlimited petroleum supply. The boom comes slowly; we'll live to see the day when Utah will be manufacturing the wares and burning the oils now purchased on the Atlantic Coast.—[Southern Utah Times.

PEOPLE who have hard work to borrow money should think of Charley Brush, the inventor or the electric light. When Brush was working at his light, trying to perfect it and get it into use, he found it difficult to borrow $5; now his income is $1,000 a day, and steadily increasing.

ALECK H. STEPHENS, the feather weight Congressman, is said to be one of the few really popular men, socially, in Washington. He is rarely alone, young and old being fond of calling upon him. About four hours a day, from 5 to 9 o'clock P. M., he plays whist.

"I SELL peppermints on Sunday," remarked a good old lady, who kept a chandler's store, "because they carry 'em to church and eats 'em, and keeps awake to hear the sermon; but if you want pickles you must come week days. They are secular commodities."

FLORENCE PERCY, who wrote "Rock me to sleep, mother," is living with her third husband. The others seem to have been rocked all right.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

THIS HONEY WAS REMOVED FROM THE comb by centrifugal force, with a machine made for the purpose. It is therefore virtually the same as honey in the comb, only you don't have to eat the bees-wax, which is indigestible and therefore disagrees with many persons. When first extracted the honey is liquid, but nearly all pure honey will candy or granulate in course of time, especially if exposed to the cold. Putting the cans in hot water for a short time will bring the honey to its fluid state without injury.

This Honey is put up in 10 pound cans, with patented screw tops, which renders it convenient for family use, and especially for the mines, to which it may be packed, even upside down, without leakage. A neat label on each can gives full directions.

Price, $1 50 per can, or 12½ cents per lb at the Apiary, if customers furnish their own receptacle. For sale at Harris & Rhine's, Independence, and at the Apiary, at Jacob Vagt's place, Camp Independence.

PROPOSALS FOR RE-BUILDING BEND CITY BRIDGE.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT SEALED proposals will be received by the Board of Supervisors of Inyo County, at the office of the County Clerk, until MONDAY, MAY SECOND, 1881, at 12 o'clock, M., for supplying the following designated labor, etc., in the razing and reconstruction of the Bend City Bridge. Said Bridge to be located at a point crossing Owens River about 300 yards below where the present Bend City Bridge is now situated, said location to be marked by two posts, by the Board of Supervisors.

Contractors will be furnished with necessary timbers and materials, that is to say: Contractors will dismount and take to pieces with necessary precaution the present Bend City Bridge, also the remaining section of said Bridge on the old dry channel, and haul all the timbers and materials to the location of the proposed Bridge. Contractors shall have the privilege of using the pile-driver of the county, with the blocks and ropes belonging to the same, provided it be subjected to only the usual usage in such work, and returned to the Court House.

A Barber on Baldness.

Speaking of the credulity of many people touching the efficacy of hair tonics, an intelligent French Hairdresser says.

Very often the hair falls out after sickness. In such cases it generally grows again without the aid of any hair tonic whatever; but when it falls out from natural causes it never grows again. The celebrated Dr. Bazin, who was formerly physician in chief of the St. Louis Hospital at Paris, and who is known throughout the world as the most learned specialist for affections of the skin, told me one day that there was nothing that could make the hair grow after the baldness had come on gradually. This I believe firmly, for, if there was anything of the kind, we would not see so many New York doctors with heads as completely destitute of hair as the backs of turtles. I am even persuaded that these gentlemen would follow the example of those Greek heroes who, under the leadership of Jason, made a voyage to Colchis to bring back the Golden Fleece. Modern Argonauts, the doctors, would consider themselves happy if they could bring back from such a voyage the secret of restoring the human fleece.

I don't think I am far from the truth when I say that during the past twenty-five years that I have practiced the profession of hairdresser, I have made the trial upon different bald heads of more than five hundred different hair tonics; and I am bound to admit that I never saw a single head the hair of which was restored after baldness. At the end of so many failures, I am completely undeceived as to the value of all the preparations, and I would not now recommend any one of them, because I would be afraid to commit the crime that is designated by the words, "obtaining money under false pretences." In my pathological studies upon the hair, I have found that people who perspire a great deal from the head are apt to get bald. The bad habit of wearing hats indoors is also very hurtful to the hair. In 1806, after the famous battle of Jena, in which the Prussians were completely defeated by Napoleon I., Baron Laarey, the celebrated military surgeon, perceived that many of the German prisoners were completely bald. Surprised, he made inquiries as to the cause of this, and he found they owed their baldness to the shape—as homely as unhealthy—of their caps. The foul air of their head gear, having no issue, destroyed the vitality of the hair.

THE dying victim of a Chicago shooting affray drew a photograph out of his pocket, and indicated by signs, for he could not speak, that it was the portrait of his murderer. Acting on this information the police soon found the right man.

OUR standing army has a paymaster to every 185 soldiers. There are 130 of these paymasters, and their salaries aggregate $355,000 at $2,736 each.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT.

For some years past the Columbus mining district has been considered one of the most promising on the coast, a district rich in mineral products, and wanting only in water. Governor Kinkead has just returned from a trip to the district, in company with Messrs. Sutherland and Clatworthy, proprietors of the White Mountain Water Company. He speaks highly of the mines, and considers it the mining locality of the coast.

THE MINES.

The mineral bearing belt is four miles long and two miles wide. It contains two lines of mines, the first beginning at the north, or rather northwest, and runs in the following order, Northern Belle, Princess, Mount Diablo, General Jackson and New England. The second ledge, about 3,000 feet to the east of the first, has its mines located with the Victor at the north, and George Washington, Mount Potosi, and Enterprise adjacent. There is another shorter ledge, on which is located the Metalic, Equator and the Lucky Hill. The Northern Belle was the first one developed, and securing a mill at Columbus, eight and a half miles away, began to pay dividends immediately. It has now paid over forty dividends, amounting to two million dollars. The Mount Diablo, an equally rich mine, began taking out ore, but were unable to secure a mill, and having no water facilities could not build one. The proprietors, however, went ahead and developed their property, and now have ore enough in sight to keep a forty stamp mill running for two years. The Victor has 50,000 tons of $40 rock piled on its dumps, and the other mines are similarly situated. There is at least $6,000,000 in sight in ore, which can be measured, and intelligent geologists claim that the district may be counted on for at least $60,000,000.

THE GRAND NEED

has been water, and Messrs. Clatworthy and Sutherland are now arranging to bring water to the mines from Pineshower canyon, in the White Mountains. They will lay pipes 23 miles at an expense of $100,000, and inside of four months will be able to discharge 300,000 gallons of water each twenty-four hours, with a fall of 800 feet. As soon as the water reaches the district the Mount Diablo, Lucky Hill, Victor and George Washington mines will erect mills, and a New York company will erect one for custom rock. The amount of water carried by one pipe, however, will not supply the district, and another pipe of equal capacity will be laid before next January. With the introduction of water, Columbus District will step to the front at once.—[Carson Appeal.

ACCORDING to all accounts, the ex-Empress Eugenie has been receiving very churlish treatment from some of the English people. It appears that she desired to make three burying-places in the little chapel at Chiselhurst, so that when she died she might be laid by the side of her husband and son. In order to get space for the three tombs, it was found necessary to acquire a piece of land forming part of the field adjoining the chapel. When the owner was applied to he bluntly refused to sell the land, on the grounds that he would de nothing to advance Romish practices. This was not all. Determining to leave Camden House, she secured other quarters, but found she could not take up her abode in them until a month after she was to leave Camden place. She appealed to the tenant who was to succeed her, Mr Ferdinand de Rothschild, to be permitted to remain the month at Camden House, but he refused. Surely this is very shabby treatment of a lady whose troubles alone should cause her to be respected and treated with consideration.

A BILL now under consideration in Indiana requires that any man desiring to drink shall take out a yearly license, price ten dollars, the money to go to the support of Inebriate asylums, and the license to be cancelled the first time its holder is found drunk.

D. O. MILLS began life a poor man, yet he managed to save five million dollars, thereby enabling his daughter to marry an editor. With a father who is patient, industrious and saving there is hope for every girl in America—with five million dollars—to wed a newspaper man.

FREAK OF A LUNATIC.—A curious incident occurred at the Vatican. An unknown Cardinal appeared in the Loggia of Raphael among the many persons gathered there on the occasion of the anniversary of Leo XIII.'s coronation. For a few moments he was supposed to be a foreign Cardinal whose appearance was unknown to the officials, and some ladies present are said to have kissed his hand and received the benediction from him. It was, however, soon noticed that he wore a mustache and that some of the accessories in his dress were incomplete, and on his being questioned it was found that the supposed Cardinal was a poor madman who had on several occasions presented himself at the Vatican asking to be presented to the Pope. Having managed to pass the Swiss guards he had made his way to the apartment of Cardinal Jacobinia, where he had changed his clothes for a suit of his Eminence's robes, and was proceeding tranquilly to take his place anong the members of the Sacred College in the Sistine Chapel when he was discovered. He was quietly removed by the guards and taken to an asylum.

SECRETRY BLAINE haa received a letter from the United States Consul at Basle, Switzerland, by which it is shown that there is no instance on record of any person in Europe being injured by eating hams or pork imported in a salted condition from the United States, the only danger from trichina being through eating hog's flesh in a fresh state, recently slaughtered and imperfectly cooked. He further says that from the 1st of November until the 10th of January, 1881, two months and a half), 136,350,200 pounds of lard and 137,987,500 pounds of hog's flesh have been exported from the United States to Great Britain, where the official inspection of such imports is most rigid, and in all this vast quantity no instance of infection has been discovered.

THE question of a universal language comes to the front again, and the spelling reformers of Europe talk of holding an international congress at Berlin at the time the congress of orientalists meets in September. The subjects suggested for consideration are the formation of a common alphabet for the East, and, finally of a universal alphabet. Music is pretty nearly a universal language for its own purpose; phonography squints that way, and now with the telephone to help, something ought to be done to restore mankind to the lingual position they enjoyed before they built that unfortunate Tower of Babel, or babble, one might say.

THE Boston Journal closes a long editorial on the subject of "Senatorial courtesy," by saying; "The Republican Senators in Washington may be convinced of one thing, and that is, that while the intelligent men of the country may not indorse all that the President has done in the matter of appointments, they will most surely sustain him in resisting the assumption of his constitutional functions by Senators under the thin disguise of observing due "Senatorial dginity."

A WRITER in the San Francisco Bulletin claims that 20,000 acres of land has been planted in vines in California this season, making a grand total of 18,000,000 vines. Estimates place the previous area in vineyards at 60,000 acres, and the increase is therefore about twenty five per cent. The season's planting in Los Angeles county is estimated at 2,250,000 in all. Napa county has about 1,800,000 vines.

JUDGE TYLER was trying a case with Mrs. Clara Foltz as opposing counsel. Tyler is notoriously a low bred boor and a bully of the worst type. During the trial he so far forgot himself as to remark to Mrs. Foltz, "A woman's place is at home raising children," to which the lady quietly replied, "A woman had better be engaged in almost any business than in raising such men as you are, sir."

A VERMONT clergyman makes the future of good Christians clear by saying; "After crossing the mystic river, we shall go on from man to the angel, from the angel to the archangel, from the archangel to the celestial, from the celestial to the divine, and then gathering the stars in clusters about our heads, dream out the endless dream of eternity."

SATURDAY, MAY 7.....1881

DR. O. S. FOWLER, the father of phrenology, has for fifteen or twenty years been roaming over the country feeling of people's pumps, and among other things, telling them what kinds of husbands and wives they should select. Many hundreds of young men and maidens have paid $5 or more each to the doctor for the valuable information that was to make them happy for life. The knowledge may have been useful to some of them, but Fowler seems to have been one of those physicans who do not believe in taking their own medicine. His wife has brought suit for divorce. She is comparatively young and buxom, and spent the old man's money freely, and now, in the way of aimony, has obtained possession of his books, plates, and charts, etc. Fowler has answered the complaint, coming in with a cross-bill, in which he charges extravagance on her part, want of affection and worse than all, infidelity, her adulteries, he alleges, having run through a course of several years and with a dozen or more men. The poor old man couldn't have measured and weighed the cranium of his wife, or if he did phrenology cannot be relied upon as a reliable science.

THE worst of men are human—sometimes—as the following incident goes to prove; A burglar entered a house in which a mother was sitting up with a sick child. "Sir," she said to him in a whisper as soon as she composed herself to speak, "there is nothing of value in this house except that child's life, at least to me, but you may find otherwise. Here, take the keys, search everywhere, take what you want, but speedily and without noise, I implore you." She handed him the keys, placed her finger on her lips, and pointed to the door. The burglar moved quietly away, then turned and said in a low voice, "Is he very sick?" "His life depends on the continuance of this sleep." "Then he will recover for all the noise I make," the robber answered, laying down the keys and noiselessly taking his departure, but absolutely nothing else.

GENERAL GRANT has been making an interesting speech in Mexico upon the subject of annexation. He recounted the history of the San Domingo project, and expressed his opinion that the people of the United States would not be willing to accept Mexico, even if, as in the case of Santa Domingo, ninety-nine hundredths of the inhabitants of the country desired it. He said: "We want no more land. We do want to improve what we have, and we want to see our neighbors improve and grow strong that the designs of any other country could not endanger them." The sanguine advocates of the annexation of Canada and Mexico may not think these words of wisdom, but they will strike a good many thoughtful people as being sensible words indeed.

A PRESS dispatch from San Bernardino, dated April 27, says: The news was brought in by the mail driver from Resting Springs this morning that two white men and a Chinaman had met their death by assassination at that mining camp this week. The two white men were found in their cabin one morning dead: one with his head burst open and otherwise badly mangled, the other riddled with pistol shots. The Chinaman was found a mile and a half from the scene of these murders, in hia cabin. No clew to the perpetrators of the deed had been discovered at last accounts.

THE NOUN "HOODLUM" has been honored with legal recognition, so the dictionary must make room for it. Judge Hahn, of New Orleans, in sentencing a young rowdy for using firearms, said: "The conduct of a few hoodlumes the past few years has led to much mischief and public injury, given rise to much business in the courts depreciated the value of property, caused insurance companies to be reluctant in taking fire risks, kept away capital and caused alarm and consternation among respectable citizens who look to this court for protection. Your case calls for no leniency."

A TEXAS MAN has presented to President Garfield a miniature bale of cotton, with a note stating that, as the Lone Star State will have no more elections for two years, her citizens propose to devote their attention to King Cotton and other local matters, quietly adding that he reckons that the Ohio men can run the Federal Government.

AN electric shock is the punishment inflicted upon those who commit infractions of the rules in the Ohio State Prison. It is not heavy enough to endanger life, yet it is pretty severe.

PROSPECT HOLES BELOW PAR.

Ths New York Stock Report has the following, which may be of interest to miners and mining men in the far West:

The time once was when a Western man might visit New York city and offer a mining prospect to our moneyed men with almost a certainty of selling it at a good round figure, even if it were not developed beyond a depth of 50 feet. Almost any statement which the would-be seller might make about the extreme richness of the prospect, the easiness with which the ore could be mined, and his numerous other statements, all of which were intended to make his listener believe that this was the one chance of his life, and that few persons, if any, had ever been offered such a rare opportunity of acquiring rapid and extensive wealth, were likely to be eagerly swallowed. In that case the dose would act in so powerful a manner upon the recipient that it would occupy his thoughts by day and fill his dreams by night, until he could not resist the temptation to buy. But things have changed wonderfully within the past twelvemonths, and the man who brings a prospect here now stands a very poor chance of making a fortune out of it by selling it for seven or eight times what it is worth. The people have had their eyes opened by experience; they have seen mining companies organized in prospect holes, and they have seen them fail to carry out their promises because of the great amount of labor and money necessary to develop their prospects into mines. A comparison has been drawn between those companies who purchased mines that were developed, and that were in a condition to pay dividends almost from the start, and those who purchased prospects and have been in more or less trouble ever since they did so, and the verdict is decidedly in favor of the mines. Bring us mines—mines that will stand the most thorough examination—and there can be but little doubt about your disposing of them; but bring us prospects and your presence will be regarded more as an intrusion by those whom you seek to interest than in any other light.

IT now looks as though a town of some importance is likely to spring up on the north side of the Rio Grande River at a point four miles north of El Paso. Here the Southern Pacific Company have located 18 blocks of land; the Texas Pacific Company have located the same amount, and the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Company were at last accounts making a like selection of ground. The Texas Pacific road promises to complete their road to this point one year from this date, and the Southern Pacific promises to extend their road through to the Gulf. Both the Atchison, Topeka and the Southern Pacific will have their roads running into this embryo town within the next sixty days, and immediately thereafter the former will push on south toward the City of Mexico and the latter on to the east through the great State of Texas. If all of these promises are fulfilled the new town in one year from this date will have what is equivalent to six railroads—three to the east, one to the south and two to the west. So that the new town will at least become a great railroad center and a town of considerable importance without any other resources than that furnished by the railroads entering into it.

IT would seem as though there were no end to the different uses to which electricity may be applied. An enterprising reporter has now discovered two Germans over in Hoboken who are using it for the purpose of taking photographs. The process is styled linography, and by it pictures of any proportions, from one foot to fifty feet square, may be transferred from negatives so minute as to be mere specks to the unassisted eye. The impressions thus made are remarkably sharp, every detail being clearly and accurately defined. By and by the question will be not what can, but what cannot be done by electricity.

THERE is a list of nearly one hundred Star Route contracts, all of which the Department officers believe to have been corruptly manipulated. The rates of increase obtained by contractors in many of these cases are enormous. One route in the Indian Territory was swelled from $6,000 to $150,000; one in Dakota from $2,350 $70,000; one in Wyoming from $11,000 to $90,000; one in Colorada from $380 to $8,133, etc., etc.

THE Mining Record thinks that $175,000 is a fair price to pay for a mine that has $1,000,000 in sight, and publishes a lengthy article to prove the soundness of its position. If such mines command only such figures in the New York market it will serve as a damper on mine sellers generally, and they will endeavor to get a profit out of their properties by working them themselves.

THE INDIAN TROUBLES IN EARLY TIMES IN NEVADA.

Mr. Frank T. Gilbert, of Carson, is preparing a history of Nevada, and through the Appeal and other papers, asks for authentic information in regard to certain events, dates and other particulars of which are in dispute; among these, was the killing of Applegate and Lozier, at Dry Creek Station on the Overland road, in May, 1860. There are doubtless many of the old Nevada pioneers scattered through this region, and who, if so disposed, might furnish the historian much of interest and value to the record. Mainly on that account we reproduce the following from the Eureka Leader. The Elisha Mallory referred to is most likely our old friend of that name residing these many years at Bishop Creek. The Leader says:

Our fellow townsman, Reube H. Egleston, helped to bury the two men, and probably knows as much, if not more, concerning the circumstances than any one. He gave our reporter the following facts in regard to the killing: Four days after the attack on Dry Creek Station, he was at Diamond Springs, 60 miles east from that point, on his way from Camp Floyd to Carson, in company with Thomas Smith and Elisha Mallory, a rancher at present living near Genoa. The details of the fight were told to Mr. Egleston by a pony rider, W. L. Ball, more familiarly called "Little Baldy," who, with Silas McCanless, the station keeper, escaped from Dry Creek and made their way to Diamond. They are as follows:

At the time of the fight there were four men at the station, Cy. McCanless, the station keeper, John Applegate, Ralph M. Lozier and Little Baldy, the pony rider. McCanless, the station keeper, was living with a Shoshone squaw, and it appears the Indians were dissatisfied with this fact, and wanted the squaw to return to the tribe. Early on the morning of the fight the Indians, numbering about 15 or 20, who were camped near by, came to the station and demanded that McCanless give up the squaw. Considerable wrangling and high talk was indulged in, but the squaw was not given up, and McCanless having given the Indians a generous supply of rations and in a manner pacified them, they went off, evidently satisfied. They returned, however, about 10 o'clock, and creeping up to the station, which was built of cottonwood logs and being newly constructed, had not been "chinked" with mud, they opened fire through the crevices between the logs, and at the first volley killed Lozier and severely wounded Applegate, he being shot through the thigh. Leaving Lozier dead in the station, the three men; McCanless, Applegate and Baldy, fled from the place for dear life, with the Indians in hot pursuit. Applegate, at the outstart, had handed his revolver to Baldy. After running about a quarter of a mile, McCanless' squaw in the meantime running between them and the Indians, and endeavoring to keep the latter back, Applegate, who was fast failing from the loss of blood, knew that he could not hold out in the race, and, halting, he asked Baldy for the revolver, and rather than be overtaken by the red devils, who were close upon them, and dreading the torture they would inflict, he placed the revolver to his ear and deliberately blew his brains out. McCanless and Baldy continued to run for their lives and were given a most desperate chase. In order to lighten themselves they fairly stripped to their underclothing, and after a most desperate run of several miles, they managed to outstrip the Indians, who gave up the chase. The two men continued on at their utmost speed until they reached the Station at Robert's Creek, thirty miles distant from Dry Creek, making the trip in three hours. Here they found a Greaser cook and the pony rider, and after eating a hurried lunch, the four ran on to Diamond Springs, thirty miles further, reaching that point early in the afternoon. It was here that Mr. Egleston met them, and he promised Baldy and McCanless that the two men killed by the Indians should be properly buried when he and his party reached Dry Creek. Upon arriving at Dry Creek, nearly a week later, search was made for the bodies. That of Lozier had been dragged from the house and horribly mutilated. The cayotes had torn it to pieces. The scattered remains, with the exception of the lower portion of the left leg, were found and gathered up and buried on the spot where Applegate was found—near where he fell. Applegate's body had only been slightly mutilated by the cayotes and the two men were buried together nd a monument of stones erected over the grave.

This is the history of the affair as detailed to us. It occurred in the latter part of May, 1860. McCanless, shortly after the fight, returned to Dry Creek, and taking the squaw over whom the trouble originated to Salt Lake, married her, and the two lived together and had several children. Applegate was a native of Michigan, and Lozier was from Iowa, the former aged 22 and the latter 21 at the time of their death. The statement that the station was burned is a mistake. It is standing to-day if it has not been destroyed recently.

A MISSISSIPPI planter wanted to turn his land into a stock farm. His neighbors, who stick to cotton, applied to a court for an injunction to restrain him from sowing grass, claiming that it would spread over adjoining plantations and unfit the ground for cotton. The injunction was granted.

A MAN has recently been pardoned out of the Ohio State Prison who had been shut up for 34 years on a charge of murder of which he never was guilty. He had never seen a railroad car.

STATISTICS show that upon the average one dollar expended in legitimate mining produces five. Colorado produced over $23,000,000 at an outlay of $2,000,000.

WASSON TALKS.

The most pitiful bit of legislation yet offered in our Legislature is the Senate proposition to cut off the salary of the State Engineer, the intent being to stop that important work. Mr. Wasson, our Representative, though heretofore not a talker, has a more practical sense of what should be done for the general good, and in a decent manner, than a corral full of those bloviating, bucolic economists(?) who, for the sake of $8 a day, are blowing incessantly about the wrong done in using money for State engineering purposes, to maintain a State Mining Bureau and everything of the sort an inch in advance of the enterprises of aboriginal communities. But passing all that, it is pleasing to note that Mr. Wasson does beat those dead beats once in awhile, as will be seen from the following synopsis of proceedings found in the Sacramento Bee of April 30:

"The afternon session of the Assembly yesterday was devoted exclusively to the consideration of the question whether or no the House should concur in the Senate amendment of the appropriation bill—striking out the sum of $30,000 for the salary of the Secretary of the State Engineer and for the completion of the irrigation works of the State Engineer's department, and preparation of the final report, with maps and illustrations. The debate was largely a repetition of the arguments, pro and con, advanced at the time the House had the subject under consideration a few weeks since. Wasson of Mono attracted much attention by making his maiden speech of the session on the subject. He has always been regarded as a silent, hard working member, who interfered with no one else's business and always attended to his own, looking all the while to the advancement of the interests of his constituents. He spoke strongly in favor of making the appropriation and against the Senate amendment striking it out. Said he, all the southern counties have been mentioned by previous speakers except Inyo and Mono counties. It is for this reason, Mr. Speaker, that I desire the floor. I desire to state that the waters heading in Mono county and running through Inyo are greater than all which originate in San Bernardino, Los Angeles and San Diego. In that proportion irrigable arable lands in Owen's Valley are correspondingly great. I have favored the Drainage Act throughout, and I have nothing in that connection to take back. Much has been said about the maps of the State Engineer—that they were simply a necessary incident in connection with irrigation. It now resolves itself into the question—in connection with these maps—to furnish written reports describing the quality and quantity of land and the amount of water contiguous thereto. It is not a question of water already appropriated; it is a question of storing away of the water which runs off during the melting of snows and in the rainy seasons. The question of riparian rights and water already appropriated is a question of law—all the rest of the information which can possibly be gathered is of importance to the poor people whe now live here or who may desire to come. Owen's Valley alone has land and contiguous water enough to support 100,000 people, but it is as unknown as if it were in the moon. If they say this information is not important on the part of the State to give to the world, then you might as well cut off the Census Bureau in the giving of its statistics on immigration and emigration, also the commissions which give information on the subjects of horticulture, agriculture and mineralogy. He claimed there was no geological survey as yet and that it had been cut off just where it should have been continued. So far as irrigation being the child of debris, as had been claimed, it reminded him of the Irishwoman who applied for a divorce and gave as the only grounds for so doing that she believed that her husband was not true to her, and she had reasons to believe he was not the father of her last child.

"Other speeches were made, and the House refused to strike out the appropriation by a vote of 39 noes to 33 ayes.

"Consideration of the Senate amendment striking out the oppropriation of $12,000 for the Mining Bureau then came up.

"McClure took the floor and vigorously opposed the appropriation, to to the astonishment of all who had heard him at the regular session earnestly favoring the giving of $10,000 per annum to the Bureau and also to have 1,000 extra copies of the State Mineralogist's report printed.

"Wasson of Mono again took the floor and said with an animation which hushed the House into silence and attracted the attention of all: Will the gentleman from San Francisco (McClure) please explain to the house his consistency in now opposing the appropriation of $6,000 per annum to the support of the Mining Bureau, when he at the regular session of the Legislature favored the giving to the same Bureau the sum of $10,000 per annum. The support of this appropriation for it, said he, is recommended by the Governor in his annual message, and the Executive, in calling the extra session implied, so far as words could possibly do, that this was a State institution, as much as is the State University, the insane asylums, etc. Then he vigorously urged a call of the roll and amid much applause sat down. The House refused to concur in the amendment of the Senate to strike out the appropriation, by a vote of 47 noes to 13 ayes."

THIRTY days after a Michigan man got a divorce from his wife to marry one with a handsomer face, the woman fell heir to $287,000. You bet that ex-husband feels like a man with the jumwing toothache.—Detroit Free Press.

MR HENRY SHARP, of the Ormsby House' and family, will leave here sometime during the week. Mr Sharp purposes locating in New Mexico, His family will remain at Napa, Cal., for awhile.—Carson Appeal.

LETTER FROM THE CAPITAL.

SACRAMENTO, May 3.

MESSRS. EDITORS—The fifth week of the extra session and 30th day have come and gone, and nothing of the legislation mapped out completed. Moreover, the two houses have about as good as raised the black flag. All of which is no surprise to the undersigned, whose letters to THE INDEPENDENT will have confirmed. The Senate has narrowly escaped resolving itself into a Donnybrook Fair, and a general breaking of heads, and it is almost a pity it did not so result. That there has been a political bargain and sale made over at that end, there is hardly a doubt. The Assembly having stood in the way of delivering the goods, matters took a decidedly desperate turn yesterday (Monday). In short, when the general appropriation bill came back from the Senate, with the irrigation survey, engineer's salary, Mining Bureau and other items cut out, there was a bracing up, you bet. The Assembly, by a decided vote, refused to concur. When the general tax levy bill came along with an amendment excluding the Drainage act from its operation, the Assemply were even more decided. It was considered a back-door, unconstitutional business in toto by even the most ardent and consistent anti-debris members of the Assembly—a last resort of demagogues in a state of defeat. To cap the climax, they yesterday took away from Gen. Mansfield (Lieut.-Governor and President of the Senate) the appointing of the Senate part of the joint committee by conference. It was uncalled for and an open insult, but characteristic of the band over which he is so untortunate as to have to preside. The members of the Assembly from the southern part of the State, are, regardless of party, very determined, and they will be assigned the majority of the Assembly conference committee, a member of which your correspondent was to be. I drew out this morning in their favor. Altogether, the week will be an eventful one, so far as such a thing can be. It starts out with the funeral of Assemblyman Baker of Sacramento, a stalwart Republican, which further complicates the question of an apportionment of the State, although that was already about as mixed and doubtful as it could be. The pestiferous road bill was read a second time yesterday and ordered printed. I have no doubt this was the resnlt of the death of Baker. Every one was wearied with the two-weeks debate, including everything appertaining towards all highways from the ecliptic and milky way down to baby wagons, excepting a hearse. God Almighty rung in a dead-wagon and the Assembly dead-lock was broken. What the people of this State would do under the New Constitution without an allwise providence, would puzzle the oldest inhabitant. The outlook for a general breaking up here the last of this week is good, but still there is no certain indication of it. There is an ugly enough feeling all round to indicate a sudden dispersion, but on second thought the majority feel it absolutely incumbent to remain and do the best they can toward completing certain business. The Senate will not concur in the Assembly resolution to adjourn sine die, and at present there is no disposition on the part of the Assembly to renew the resolutions, and the Governor is not at all likely to interfere until the tax levy and appropriation troubles are settled as it becomes apparent that they cannot be adjusted. Altogether, it is a disagreeable spectacle, but a fitting sequel to affairs of the last few years.

ONE of the great wonders of Mexico, and perhaps of the world, is the great Iron Mountain, in the immediate vicinity of Durango. The Iron Mountain is nearly two miles in length and one mile wide, and about 700 feet high. Above the surface, uncovered and in sight, it shows about 500,000 tons of pure ore, ready to be shoveled or rolled, without any cost of mining, into the furnace to be erected at its base. Much of this ore ranges from 80 to 90 per cent. and some is carried directly to the forge. It works very kindly, and easily assumes the form of steel.

THERE is a glut of gold in the United States Treasury. The sum total is $173,000,000 of gold coin and bullion, and a Treasury official is led to say that there is now in the vaults of the department a larger amount of gold than was ever known to exist in one place in the history of modern times, and propably more gold than could be authenticated as existing in a single treasury at any time before in the world. In the Treasury vaults there are also some $55,000,000 in silver.

THE impression went out that Leadville was a busted community when a few of her leading mines collapsed last year. Not so. We see that her mines produced over three millions for the quarter ending March 31. This is equivalent to something like thirteen millions a year.

LASTANIA ABARTA, the girl who shot and killed Chico Foster at Los Angeles, was found not guilty after a three days' trial. The verdict seems to meet with general approval.

THE Visalia Delta now comes out enlarged to nine colnmus to the page, and otherwise very much improved in typographical make-up.

"The first time a Yankee oyster went down my throat," exclaimed Lord Beaconsfield, "I felt as if I had swallowed the declaration of independence."—Andrews Bazar.

OBSERVATION by the "Professor" who arranged the programme for the Garfield inauguaation ball: "I have noticed one thing among the leading politicians and prominent men—self-made men—and that is that but a few of them dance."

If Grant hasn't anything else to do, why don't he sit down and write a story, something like Endymion. He might call it "Conkymyown."—Oil City Derrick.

Ordered that the County Assessor be authorized to appoint one or more deputies, whose per diem shall not exceed 30 days in the aggregate.

On petition, Geo. L. Drake was appointed Constable of First Township.

Further account of the proceedings is necessarily laid over until next week.

BEVERIDGE MATTERS.—The Mexican owners, comprising the Keynote Company, have just perfected arrangements to have their ore reduced at Taylor, McEvoy & Co's mill, instead of working it in arastras as heretofore. The mill has a capacity of ten tons of ore per day, and the mining company expect to be able to produce about fifteen tons of ore per day, on the average of ore going from $60 to $90 per ton. It will be seen from this bullion shipments from Beveridge District are likely to amount to something henceforth. W. L. Hunter has the contract for packing the ore, but has first to build some three miles of trail. This arrangement is likely to prove advantageous to all the parties concerned. Taylor & Co. have a number of fine mines of their own, upon which they have been working for several months past, with fair paying results; but not one of their mines has been fairly opened, but can be now, while the mill is engaged on custom work as above mentioned, and the whole work done without putting on a larger force.

BULLION SHIPMENT.—Taylor, McEvoy & Co, ship this week $2,600, the proceeds of 102 tons of ore worked in their mill at Beveridge.

STATED MEETING.—Inyo Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., meets to-night, and with considerable work before it.

MAY 4TH IN LONE PINE.—We learn from persons who were in attendance that the concert, ball, etc., in Lone Pine on the evening of May 4th was, altogether, a grand affair, especially the concert, which success reflects decided credit upon the excellent management of Miss Marcia Stevens, as well as the several participants among whom we can name the following in addition: Mrs. John Veil, Miss Blanche Meysan, Geo. Gregory, Misses Mary, Zelia and Eugenie Meysan, Paulita Snow, Minnie Lasky and Dick Richards. Some enthusiastic correspondent sends us what purports to be a full programme of proceedings of the day and evening, together with many laudatory remarks etc., all of which we would be pleased to give in full had we any assurance it was bona fide; it probably is, but if so, why could not the writer have simply added his name as a guarantee to that effect? Yet, again, it may be sent us by some unknown persons for other than laudable motives, and in default of the attachment of a responsible name as the authority we are bound to so accept it, and also to reject it. A newspaper must have such guarantee of good faith in all matters relating to the proceedings of individuals, or take the risk of making itself a party to an unintentional wrong—of being itself imposed upon in various ways.

WATER SUIT.—A few days since Robert Arnold cut the ditch of water claimed by Ezra Goodale and proceeded to appropriate it for his own use. This water, it seems, has been claimed and used by Mr. Goodale ever since his settlement at Black Rock, the scene of the controversy, a period of over a dozen years. But it does not appear that he has ever placed his claim to this water on record. On the strength (or weakness) of this omission, Mr. Arnold sets his up and files his claim, and proposes to maintain his claim. On complaint sworn out by Mr. Goodale he was arrested for misdemeanor, and the case was tried this forenoon in Justice Parker's court, Judge Conklin appearing for complainant, W. P. George for the defendant, who was held in $750 bonds to answer before the Superior Court.

THE STATE LINE MINE.—This ledge appears to be developing far better than most sanguine hoped for. Five shafts are being sunk, and all exhibit any quantity of ore, some of it assaying as high as $10,000 to $13,000 per ton. Altogether the State Line bids fair to become a wonder indeed.

A GOOD CLEAN UP.—The Mexicans running arastras in Beveridge district cleaned up for their last month's run 796¾ ounces of bullion, worth about $14.50 per ounce—$11,550.

A Chapter on Hogs.

BISHOP CREEK, May 4.

MESSRS. EDITORS—Just now the hog question is beginning as usual at this time of the year to assume a rather serious aspect in this town; and to create hard feeling among neighbors as well as hogs. The source of the trouble is that hog owners generally are determined to set aside the hog law and to let their hogs find their own living no matter whose garden or potato patch suffer. This makes it hard on the erring animals as well as his unfortunate victims. The clubs, brick-bats and other missiles that used to be wasted on the Chinaman are now too scarce to administer justice to trespassing hogs. So it has come to pass that when the law abiding citizen has been assured that no murder was committed by the gunshot last heard, the next question is whether anybody's hog has been knocked down? This is a bad state of things. For my own part my sympathy is in favor of the afflicted hogs, and their much aggrieved pursuers, and against their lawless owners who seem to keep them for nothing else but to sponge and scourge their neighbors. I hope something will soon be done to restrain the wandering propensity of the animal, and thus to restore law and order, and good feeling in our town. I write this so that law officers as well as hogsters may take a hint, some of whom I know despise lawlessness except as regards the proper keeping of hogs.

A LAW ABIDING CITIZEN.

PANAMINT.—The big mill at Panamint started up on the 25th ultimo, on about 250 tons of ore, mostly faom the Hemlock and Wyoming mines, which is rated the finest chloride ores ever worked in the camp. Messrs Pheby & Anthony have the property under lease until October next. The mill is under the management of Mr. Ells, a number one machinist and mill man, who for the past month has been putting the works in repair, Our informant states that there are about 60 men in the place including four or five Chinamen. The Hemlock and Wyoming mines have some twenty men on the pay roll. At present there is no demand for any more miners or laborers.

DENTISTRY.—Dr. H. P. Swain writes us from Lone Pine that he will be in this place to-morrow or the day following and comes for the purpose of performing dental operations of any kind required. We understand that he has had some thirty-three years practice in his profession, twenty-seven of which has been in this State. He will remain here as long as his services may be required, after which he will locate temporarily at Big Pine, and also visit other localities in the valley.

It is represented that our new United States Senator, General John F. Miller, has made up his mind to break the dead-lock by voting with the Democrats to go into executive session, in order to have the Chinese Immigration Treaty ratified before the term expires for its exchange at Peking in November. An act of this kind, might for a time, injure him with the Republicans in Congress, but we think we hazard nothing in saying that it would meet with the unqualified approbation of all parties on the Pacific Coast. With the people of California, for instance, it is a small matter who fills the subordinate offices ot the Senate, but everything to have the evil of Chinese immigration suppressed.—S. F. Call.

IN the Bodie Superior Court, Department No. 1, on Thursday, Gen. Kittrell submitted a written apology to the Court, and after an eloquent speech by Pat Reddy on behalf of his client, Judge Briggs remitted the $250 fine imposed on Gen. Kittrell for contempt of Court and dismissed the case.—Carson Appeal.

THE Pritchard case, which has been dragging along for nearly a year, has finaly been decided by the Supreme Court, and a motion for a new trial denied. Pritchard, the slayer of Symons will therefore be compelled to serve out his life sentence.—Carson Appeal.

—PERPETUAL motion is perhaps impossible to obtain, but you can approximate it by putting a boy on a chair at a funeral and tell him to sit still.—Boston Post.

When a reporter's inquiry for news is met with "Damfino" he realizes what a mistake he made in not being born a bill board.—Stillwater Lumberman,

Microscopic Structure of Malleable Metals

The following observations on the minute structure of metals which have been hammered into thin leaves are instructive. Notwithstanding the great opacity of metals it is quite possible to produce, by chemical means, metalic leaves sufficiently thin to examine beneath the microscope by transmitted light. Such an examination will show two principal types of structure—one essentially granular and the other fibrous. The granular metals, of which tin may be taken as an example, presents the appearance of exceedingly minute grains, each one being perfectly isolated from its neighbors by still smaller interspace. The cohesion of such leaves is very small. The fibrous metals, on the other hand, such as gold and silver, have a very marked structure. Silver, especialy, has the appearance of a mass of fine, elongated fibers, which are matted and interlaced in a manner which very much resemble hair. In gold this fibrous structure, although present, is far less marked. The influence of extreme pressure upon gold and silver seems to be, therefore, to develop a definite internal structure. Gold and silver, in fact, appear to behave in some respects like plastic bodies. When forced to spread out in the direction of least resistance their molecules do not move uniformly, but neighboring molecules, having different velocities, glide over one another, causing a pronounced arrangement of particles in straight lines.—[Nature.

"THE Stock Report" whose editor has seen Judge Rising at work, pays him the following compliments: "He is one of the few men who can utterly separate his Judgship and his individuality. Off the bench he is the most approachable, affable even jovial of men; the moment he takes the bench he is changed. He is the judge only then and knows nobody except in as far as his status in Court presents him. Judge Rising might have been worth his millions; he is probably possessed of a few thousand at most. He is perhaps the best Judge on the coast. There is probably not a better—take him all in all—in America."—[Eureka Sentinel.

STANLEY MATTHEWS twenty-three years ago, when he was Federal District Attorney in Cincinnati, prosecuted to conviction a man whose sole offense was that he had given a cup of water and a piece of bread to two fugitive slaves who had sought his room at night. The evidence was weak, and when acquittal seemed likely Matthews pulled out of his pocket a letter from the man begging for mercy, and reminding Matthews that they were both Masons, and upon that letter the man was convicted and sent to the County Jail.

"A Hoosier, who has been to New York, has formed a very poor opinion of the manners and behavior of the people of that city. He saw finely dressed ladies holding toothpicks between their teeth, elegantly dressed gentlemen chewing their toothpicks, and making an annoying noise at the theaters and picture galleries; and others filling the stages with smoke. He says the New Yorkers carry the word "beg pardon" at the end of their tongues, and are constantly doing things which call for that apology.

THE æshtetic penciler on the Carson times thus understands himself concerning Maggie Duggan, the female kicker with the Soldene Company "Her dancing was a revelation of the possibilities of the art. As a supple and sinuous high kicker, she corrals the top waffle. Although opposed to kicking we file an exception in her mercurial case."

VIEW OF A SQUEALING BABY. "I don't care for a quiet baby; but I dote on a squaling one," said an old bachelor. "Why, how strange!" admiringly chorused all the mothers in the room. "Not at all," responded the bachelor; "because, you see, as soon as the brat begins to squall it's always taken from the room."

OUT in Greenwood county, Kansas, there is a Second Adventist who believes that the world is coming to an end this year, still he has taken out a five-year mortgage on a neighbor's farm with interest at 12 per cent. By their mortgage shall they be known.

THE Western Union telegraph line has been completed for thirty miles along the Carson and Colorado. It will be finished to Hawthorne in about two weeks.

"Now we are nicely settled," exclaimed the happy new little wife, "If we only had a cow, Harry, we could have a nice soft bed," "Cow?" asked the poor husband. "Goose you mean. Geese yield feathers, you know, Mollie; geese—not cows." "Yes," said Mollie, with a twinkle; but cows give down, don't they, you stupid?" He uttered a snort of defiance and went out to chop some wood.

DID pou ever see a young woman slip down? Of course, you never looked, but then you've seen them. She don't flourish around like an intoxicated jumping-jack, filling the air with arms and bad words, as a man does; but she simply abbreviates, so to speak, like a crushed hat or a patent drinking-cup, while you stand by and wonder you never noticed that hole in the sidewalk before.

AN inference is sometimes so peculiar that oftentimes the most artistic natures cannot draw it. When a cynic said of a physician that his patients never had him but once, the doctor took it as a compliment, bnt the more knowing ones said that under such circumstances they should never send for him if they were taken ill, as they were not anxious to die young.

THE Roman Catholic Bishop Rogers at Detroit, Michigan, prohibits Catholics in his diocese participating or in any way aiding in holding any picnic excursions on Sunday for any purpose whatever. He also yrohibits the holding of fairs for churches, schools or charities without being first submitted to approval. He claims that these things are detrinental to the morals of the flock.

A WESTERN New-York farmer says he has always found that a horse of from 1,050 to 1,100 pounds can endure more than one of 1,300 weight. Another is credited with the remark that he never knew the same man to hanker for mules two times.

Peter Lewen, living near Detroit, says that two years ago he swallowed a lizard, which has constantly been growing and causes him endless pain, restlessness, vomiting, etc. His weight was 175 pounds originally and is now 73. He is 60 years old.

NO MAN can go to Heaven on another man's goodness. Every ticket of admission into paradise is marked, "Not transferable," or in the language of the colored thinker, "No gentleman admitted unless he comes ness self.

THE glass dress adopted by Miss Fannie Davenport is not destined to become very fashionable. A woman with the slightest defect in her figure could not afford to go round in a glass dress.

OVER 80,000 buffaloes have within six months been killed in Montana, mostly for their hides, which bring from $2.25 to $2.75. Men in the fur trade say the animal will soon be extinct.

EXTRACTED HONEY.

THIS HONEY WAS REMOVED FROM THE comb by centrifugal force, with a machine made for the purpose. It is therefore virtually the same as honey in the comb, only you don't have to eat the bees-wax, which is indigestible and therefore disagrees with many persons. When first extracted the honey is liquid, but nearly all pure honey will candy or granulate in course of time, especially if exposed to the cold. Putting the cans in hot water for a short time will bring the honey to its fluid state without injury.

This Honey is put up in 10 pound cans, with patented screw tops, which renders it convenient for family use, and especially for the mines, to which it may be packed, even upside down, without leakage. A neat label on each can gives full directions.

Price, $1 50 per can, or 12½ cents per ℔ at the Apiary, if customers furnish their own receptacle. For sale at Harris & Rhine's, Independence, and at the Apiary, at Jacob Vagt's place, Camp Independence.

WHAT THE TOURIST MAY SEE.

The visitor who now turns his eyes upon the California landscape it sees the hight of its loveliness. It is true that in some parts the yellow of summer ripeness is stealing in upon the scene, but taking the State as a whole it is in its loveliest dress. Fortunate are those who now look upon it. It is the peerless time when earth and air and sky play their sweetest parts, until house walls become prisons and roofs a burden. It is the time when California goes out of doors.

Visitors will be warned, no doubt, that the many hues of flower-flecked fields, which now entrance their vision, will fade away, and that the landscape will come beneath the reign of dust and desolation. To a degree this is true, though not to the extent it once was. The increase of orchard, vineyard and timber areas, the spread of forage plants constantly green by irrigation are doing much to break the old monotony of summer browns and yellows.

While strangers are prone to bewail the short-lived green of our landscape, they should not forget that it is from the death of our natural verdure that comes the life and prosperity of the greatest portion of our people. The drouth which cover the midsummer traveller with dust is the secret of the successful harvesting of our immense grain crops. With an eastern summer, grain growing on the scale now practiced would be impossible. And if the earlier drouth is thus salutary, the continuance of it is not less so, for it gives the fruit grower his opportunity. Cloudless skies from September to November are the secret of full success in our vineyards. Without them the ten-ton yielys of wine grapes would be impossible. Therefore, mourn not the death of the green, as one mourns without hope; for as we have said, it is the key to the prosperity of a number of our agricultural industries.—[Rural Press.

ARKANSAS LAW.—The Arkansas Legislature has recently passed a bill making it a misdemeanor to sell in that State a dirk, bowie knife, sword cane, brass knuckles, or pistol of any kind, except such as are sold for use in the army, navy or militia. Upon this a contemporary remarks: "Nobody would be worse off, and a great many lives would be saved if such a law prevailed in every State in the Union." We do not concur. The lawless would still carry weapons and the law abiding would be wholly disarmed and almost completely at their mercy. The best way to correct the habit of unnecessary and improper carrying of weapons is to require a permit in every case, to be very careful in the issuance of such permits, and to make the punishment for illegal carrying of weapons not a fine, but imprisonment for a good smart term. The habit of carrying weapons would soon be checked if such measures were pursued and if the police were vigilant in their search for weapons.—[Stock Report.

Bro. Gardner on Labor and Capital.

The Lime-Kiln Club is a facetious creation of the Detroit Free Press, and the reports of the imaginary meetings of the club, under the imaginary presidency of Brother Gardner, furnish the readers of the Press with perennial supplies of wit. The following is a specimen:

The Secretary read the following:

CHICAGO, March 30, '81.—Bro. Gardner—Please inform your friends whether you sympathize with capital or labor, and oblige a

WORKINGMAN.

"In the fust place, dar' am no call for me to sympathize with either," replied the old man in answer. "One am jist as necessary to the odder as two wheels to a wagun. Capital cl'ars away a spot an' builds a factory an' gins fifty or a hundred men a chance to airn a fa'r support fur demselves an' families. Dat factory would'nt be dar' 'cept fur capital, an its wheels can't move widout labor. If dis' workin' man wanted to draw me out on the question of strikes I has only a word to say. I believe dat de average employer pays his help a fa'r price an' all he can afford to. I b'lieve he knows his business, an' am mo' competent to run it dan de men who labor fur him. If I can't work fur a man fur de price he offers I stan' aside. If I hire a man I pay him de goin, price, an' I doan' let him tell me dat I mus' do thus an' so. Men strike bekase they can't dictate, but de same men wouldn't be willin' dat deir employers should dictate to dem how much rent to pay, what close to buy, and how to spen' deir wages. As I said befo' dar am no call fur sympathy in de case. De mo' strikes we have de less money will be put into manufactures. When a capitalist kin loan his money at good interest he am foolish to put it into a factory whar' demagogues kin hariss an' ruin him. Jist you remember what I'm talkin'. De mo' unions de less factories. De mo' strikes de less work. Do you tink I'm foolish 'nuff to take my $800 out'n de bank, whar' principal an' interest am safe as a rock, an' put it into a cooper-shop, whar' three workmen could sink de hull of it in one strike bekase I couldn't pay mo' fur makin' de bar'ls dan de same would sell fur? Shoo! Fings am comin' to a putty pass when de man wid a shovel on his shoulder kin boss de man whose factory turned out dat identical tool!"

Stonewall Jackson's Wagons.

George Alfred Townsend, writing from Atlanta, says:

"What do you think of Stonewall Jackson, Mr. Howell, from your connection with him?"

"Well, sir, his genius lay in two things—the thoroughness of his discipline and his devotion. I do not think he was a man of great natural ability. He could not talk at all. He was not an entertaining person. He was a rigid military man; educated at West Point, he had learned his lesson well, and applied it unflinchingly. I remember a single order which he always enforced, which, in my mind, accounted for a great deal of his success. It was that whenever we stopped on a march the wagons must go to the side of the road, and be unhitched with their tongues pointing to the road, so they could be driven up the road or down. Now that would seem to be a simple thing, but it accounts for the remarkable celerity of Jackson's marches. Suppose a man would stop and his wagon-tongue would point the wrong way, and at a certain hour in the morning we would begin the march, and that wagon would block up the road? If there were many such wagons the march would be delayed a certain time to let them get ship-shape. Jackson rode up and down his lines every day, morning and evening, to see if such orders as these were strictly carried out. If he should come to a place where there was a wagon with its tail to the road, he would stop and say: "Who has charge of this wagon? Where is your officer?" He would at once order that officer under arrest. He never let any one off. Every one knew what he had to do, and did it. Consequently, Stonewall Jackson was always ready to march. His column never was behind. When he met the enemy then came his devotion into play. He was a thorough believer in the cause of the South and he struck the enemon inspired.

Fighting Preachers.

Among the innumerable anecdotes told of Father Taylor, the sailor preacher, writes the Boston correspondent of the Hingham "Journal," we do not remember seeing one in print wherein the eccentric minister appeared as a representatve of the church militay. It was on the occasion of a camp-meeting some fifty years ago. Just after the meeting had commenced rumors of war had reached the camp. A gang of dissolute fellows, headed by a notorious bully, had signified their intention of breaking up the camp-meeting, but the brethern had paid but little heed to these threats, and proceeded with their exercises. One morning, just as the forenoon services were to commence, an excited and almost breathless brother rushed up to the preacher's stand with the news that the gang of roughs were on the march for the camp-ground. Some confusion ensued, when up sprang Father Taylor, shouting in stentorian toues: "Who will go with me and fight these Philistines?" The first man to respond was Rev. Lewis Bates, father of the well known Rev. L. B. Bates. He was a man of large stature and herculean strength. Father Taylor was then in his prime, and very tough, wiry and muscular. Of fear he knew nothing. Several stalwart brethren at once volunteered, and in less than five minutes they were on the way to meet the foe. When just on the outskirts of the ground they encountered the band of ruffians, headed by their leader, a huge wicked looking fellow. "Now," says Brother Bates, "I will tackle that leader myself, and the rest of you make the best use you can of your fists and cudgels. The two giants approached and clinched. In an instant the bully was thrown to the ground with great violence, and the heavy foot of Brother Bates was placed upon his throat. In the meantime Father Taylor and his aids made such a vigorous assault upon the rest of the gang that they fled for dear life. Brother Bates now addressed the prostrate bully, who was writhing and choking under the heavy pressure. "Beg for mercy, you scoundrel;" and he did beg, and solemnly promised never to disturb another camp-meeting, upon which he was released. The brethren, having done their whole duty, returned like "Uncle Josh Whitcomb," to their prayers and meditations.

ALTITUDE OF RICH MINES.—The general surface of the Comstock lode, which must be classed as among the most famous and richest of the silver mines in the world, is about 6,000 feet above the level of the sea. The Sutro Tunnel, which intersects the Comstock 1,600 feet below the surface, is 4,400 feet above the level of the sea. The rich bonanzas of the Crown Point and Consolidated Virginia sections, which have yielded $200,000,000, were nearly if not quite down to the Sutro Tunnel level. In point of fact, the deepest workings of the Comstock are less thau 3,000 feet above ths sea level. There are no large bonanzas of ore found at that depth as yet, but there is no reason to believe that there will not be, extending perhaps far below the level of the sea.—[Eureka Sentinel.

GOVERNOR STANFORD proposes to to send E. J. Maybridge to Europe to continue his experiments of taking photographs of animals and men in motion. He has made wonderful improvement in this lately, and is now able to photograph a horse race from beginning to finish at intervals of a few seconds, wherein one horse gradually overtakes his competitors in the race, and a number of excited spectators are waving their arms and throwing up their hats in celebration of the victory of their favorite.

A GOLD HILLER in the Wood River country writes back to his friends on the Comstock, advising them not to go there this year. He says: "The country will be better prospected, and if good there will be better accomodations in another year. There are thousands on the road now coming in. But great as the rush is, I confidently expect to see a greater one the other way."

IT is rumored that Harry George, author of "Progress and Poverty," will take charge of the editorial columns of the New York Herald.

RAILROAD TAXES.—The Illinois Legislature has passed the bill taxing the Railroad companies of the State 2½ per cent on their gross earnings. It is thought a much better way than the method of taxing them on their property, whose value it is difficult to determine. The estimated product of the tax is $1,000,000 a year. The Illinois Central, the largest and most important line of road in the State, is not included in the arrangement, as under its charter it has always paid 7 per cent of its gross earnings to the State.

THE total number of narrow-gauge railroads in the United States is 149, with a mileage of 5,962 miles. In the past two years the net gain in narrow-gauge railroad construction has been one railroad and 1,774 miles of track.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

SATURDAY, MAY 14..... 1881

IT is a significant fact that nearly 60,000 immigrants landed at Castle Garden last month, and thousands more arrived at other ports of the United States, while the Canadian newspapers, instead of rejoicing at accessions by immigration to the population of the Dominion, were lamenting an exodus of Canadians to the United States. There is nothing in this fact to establish the opinion of the Montreal Star that "our form of government" is "superior to the American." On the contrary, the fact that Europe is sending us immigrants at the rate of 720,000 a year, while sending Canada almost none at all, is a pretty plain indication that Canada's troubles are to a great extent the result of political separation from this Republic. If anexation could be effected within a year, we have no doubt that the growth of the Dominion, in her industries as well as her population, would soon amaze the world. There cannot be much satisfaction to the people of the Dominion in the Star's prediction: There are men now alive who will see the exodus turn the other way. It will be from the overflowing States to Canada." Intelligent Canadians should know that Europe can pour immigration into the United States at the rate of a million a year for the next hundred years without overcrowding the country. It is futile to talk about the "exodus turning the other way." If Canada wishes to share in the prosperity of the United States she must become a part of the United States. As Gen. Grant said in Mexico the other day, we are not anxious to extend our territory, but as a favor to our cousins across the border we might consent to admit Canada to the republic.

GOVERNOR PERKINS has refused to sign the second bill passed by the Legislature providing for the expenses of the extra session. It will be remembered that the Governor originally called the Legislature for a twenty-days' session, and has signed one bill paying them for twenty-five days' work. It is not at all surprising, therefore, that he should veto their second demand for pay for work they have neglected to do. There is a tone of reproach perceptible in the veto message. The Governor refers to the influence brought to bear to induce him to convene the Legislature in extra session, and to promises of good conduct which were made by members of the two Houses. These influences and these promises induced him to perform the rash act of giving this body temporary life. Once again in legal existence, promises were forgotten or disregarded. The Governor admits that he has no power to adjourn the Legislature, but in view of their ingratitude he proposes to cut off their pay.

THE Supreme Court has denied the writ to prohibit the Controller from auditing and the Treasurer from paying any demands in behalf of what is known as "slickens." The decision was foreshadowed at the time the case was argued, and goes off on the proposition that the remedy sought was not the right one. The Attorney-General was asked at the time to have the case argued on other grounds, but declined. He has since changed his mind and has obtained a judgment pro forma in the Superior Court of Sacramento that the Drainage Commissioners have not usurped office.

THE Candelaria True Fissure of last Saturday contains an exhaustive description of Gold Mountain and the State Line mine, which fully sustains the flattering accounts so current concerning it. Nevertheless, the slow headway made towards panning out dividends, in connection with the glowing statements of the press generally, might make it appear to some that the managers were working more individual profits out of Wall Street, than the mine is likely to pay the stockholders collectively.

IT is rumored that the various crafts represented in the Trades Assembly of San Francisco were discussing the feasibility of putting up a straight ticket of mechanics for the next municipal election. By all means put up a mechanic ticket, a merchant ticket, a scavenger ticket, a clerk ticket, and last, but not least, have at least one ticket to represent the hoodlum element of Tar Flat.

REFERRING to the speech of our Assemblyman on the Mining Bureau appropriation, the Mining and Scientific Press says: "Mr. Wasson has made a good fight on this question, for which he deserves the thanks of the mining community. He has also been a strong advocate of continuing the State Engineer in office, at least until all the maps, etc., are finished."

RISES TO EXPLAIN.

Gen. Brady, the late Second Assistant Postmaster General, has published a letter in which he attempts to justify himself. He says disappointed contractors and "malicious correspondents" are at the bottom of this persecution of himself and others. That if there was anything wrong in raising the pay of certain contractors the Congressmen who recommended the increase of service are to blame. That he doesn't care much about the matter anyway. In short, he gives the world to understand that he feels much as did that mythical individual who, while standing to his neck in the water, and finding himself refused admittance into the ark, told Noah to "go on with your old scow; 'tain't goin' to be much of a shower, nohow!" That is about the airy way Gen. Brady affects to treat these accusations, wherein it is shown that he and his pets have "got away" with some six millions of dollars in this star route business.

It is quite proper for the General and ex-Senator Dorsey, and would-be Secretary Gorham, and the entire gang, to keep up their courage, and say "you lie!" in a loud, firm voice, and all that. And it is quite likely the extent of their rascalities has been somewhat exaggerated—that is, that some of the raises for increased mail service on a number of these star routes were justifiable—nevertheless, enough is already shown to satisfy everybody that the General and his pards have perpetrated frauds sufficient to send every one of them to State Prison for the rest of their lives, provided they get their deserts. And the President has given orders to investigate the matter to the bed-rock, no matter what "high places" may be brought low; and Postmaster General James says he will never rest till every official implicated in the star route frauds is dismissed. Sixth Auditor McGraw and Disbursing Officer O'Connel came to grief last Monday, pursuant to that determination.

A LATE cablegram has the following regarding a new achievement of science: "A remarkably interesting experiment has just been made between Calais and Dover, between which places conversation has been kept up viva voce by means of a new kind of telephone, which has been patented under the name of the electrophone. Not only were words whispered into the apparatus at Calais to listening hearers at Dover, and of course vice versa, but the listener was perfectly able to distinguish by mere tone of voice the person who was speaking at the other end. It should be observed that while the human voice was being transmitted through one of the wires the other wires were being used for the transmission of ordinary telegraph messages. Moreover the experiments were made between the hours of 10 and 4 o'clock—that is, in the keenest part of the day when the wires are requisiting. The voice of the speaker was distinctly heard as soon the wires were joined to the apparatus; and conversations were carried on in the presence of competent spectators. Experiments with the same apparatus then continued without interruption in the midst of the conversation precluded by the simultaneous working of several machines. At the time, at the London terminus, the voice of the speaker was heard as plainly as though he had been in the room. There can no longer be any doubt that it is perfectly practicable to converse across or rather under the sea by means of submarine cable. The inventor maintains that it is just as easy to talk across the Atlantic as from one room to another."

PROBABLY hereafter this will be known as the "railway age." No other activity is so prominent, so constantly widening the sphere of its operations, or awakening so much personal feeling everywhere. Of course this last is because it touches the personal interest of almost every individual. Political questions were formerly thought the most absorbing, but railroad questions are fast finding their way into national affairs, if not setting themselves above nationl jurisdiction. The question of taxes, of land titles, of fares and freights, furnish problems for statesmen. Meanwhile the building of new roads, and the consolidation of old ones goes on with unexampled rapidity.

IT is fashionable just now in England to organize all the new companies with £1 shares. Indian gold mining companies seem to have set the fashion. The English papers think the idea a good one, as it enables small capitalists to invest, and gets as many shareholders who will be likely to attend meetings of the companies.

Two years after the hanging of Troy Dye for murder the Supreme Court has just rendered a decision confirming the verdict of the lower Court which tried and convicted him. It is fortunate that the decision of the Supreme tribunal is what it is, because, were it the other way, it might create some embarassment.

IT is stated by an Italian writer on the recent earthquake at Ischia that the animals on the island showed the most positive foreknowledge of the catastrophe. He says: "Some minutes before the shocks were felt the oxen and cows began to bellow, the sheep and goats bleated, and rushed in confusion one on the other, trying to break the wicket work of the folds. The dogs howled terribly, the geese and fowls were alarmed, and made much noise. The horses which were fastened in their stalls were greatly frightened, leaped up and tried to break their halters. Those which were proceeding on the road stopped suddenly and snorted in a very strange way. The cats were frightened and tried to conceal themselves, or their hair bristled up wildly. Rabbits and snakes were seen to leave their holes; birds rose, as if scared from the place on which they had lighted, and fish left the bottom of the sea and approached the shores. Even ants and reptiles abandoned, in clear daylight, their subterranean holes in great dis order, many hours before the shocks were felt. Some dogs, a few minutes before the first shock took place, awoke their sleeping masters by barking and pulling them, as if they wished to warn them of the impending danger, and several persons were thus enabled to save themselves."

THE following from a late number of the Los Angeles Express refers to a bullion-producing property situate in Inyo County; "Mr. Carloz Cruz got in from Resting Springs Mine this morning, bringing with him several bars of bullion whose aggregate value is $13,000. This is the output of the company's mill after a run of thirty-six days. The mill has ten stamps and its production from the quality of ore now may be relied upon to average ten or twelve thousand dollars per month. The mine is owned and operated by a Los Angeles Company, and we gladly note this evidence of its prosperity."

THE enormous immigration is getting to be as old a story as the great success of refunding was a year or two ago. But it is still worth while to note the fact that the arrivals at Castle Garden during the month of April reached the number of sixty thousand, an average of two thousand a day for the whole month. This was much the largest number of arrivals at New York during the history of emigration. The influx of foreigners during the present calendar year bids fair to come nearly or quite up to three-quarters of a million persons.

THE New York Conservative, a paper devoted to legitimate mining, has this sensible paragraph: "It is nonsense to talk of buying a mine only when there is twice as much ore in sight as the price asked for it, for mining is just as safe and legitimate as any other industry, luck serving no better purpose in mining than it does elsewhere. Indeed, mining, when conducted on a true business basis, has dealt most bountifully with those who have embarked in it their energies, their brains or their money."

THE recent municipal elections in South Carolina develop the fact that politics no longer influence local questions in that State. In many of the towns the voters divided upon the question of "license" or "no license"—the former being in favor of granting saloon licenses and the latter against it. In other towns white and colored citizens divided on matters affecting the localities respectively, and in some cases citizens' tickets, composed of men of both races, were elected.

IT is reported that there are seventy-three engineers and four hundred subordinate workmen of various grades engaged in making a detailed survey of the Panama Canal route. At the point where it is proposed to dam the Chagres river they have sunk a shaft one hundred feet without finding bed-rock, and are getting anxious, as no other foundation will be suitable for the great dam, which is to be the largest ever built.

ACCORDING to the Los Angeles Herald Railroad Commissioner Stoneman has declared his intention of answering Beerstecher's slurs upon him at the next meeting of the Commissioners, on the 10th of May. Judging by the vigorous language of the brief protest of the General, so vigorous that one of the Commissioners tried to hoodwink the public into believing that it had never been written, the statement will make good reading.

THOMAS HAWKINS, who murdered Henry Robbins in Mono county, has been legally acquitted and turned loose to murder some body else, at his convenience. He is the seventeenth person turned loose in Mono County in the past three or four years after trial for murder. If it wasn't for "Law" many cutthroats would come to grief.

VIRGINIA CITY, Nevada, has ceased to be a municipal corporation, and the Storey County Commissioners have assumed control of the government. Gold Hill has also disincorporated.

Senator Conkling, in a lengthy speech before the Republican Senatorial caucus, ventilated his grievances in the Robertson matter. He says Robertson is, politically, a mighty bad egg; that he had said during the Chicago Convention that he (Robertson) would vote for a Democrat rather than for Grant. Also, that the President had displayed very bad faith toward himself (Roscoe). Nevertheless, Roscoe drew his murky picture much milder than was anticipated. He can rely on only ten Republican and eight Democratic votes to vote with him against Robertson's confirmation.

It is said Stanley Matthews will be confirmed, but by the closest kind of a shave. Of the nine members of the Judiciary Committee, but one (Lamar, a Democrat) is in favor of a favorable report. They don't want for a Supreme Judge a life-long railroad attorney like Matthews.

General Stoneman is out in a long letter, boldly charging his brother Railroad Commissioners, Beerstecher and Cone, with having sold out body and breeches to Stanford & Co. Quite likely.

Practical Uses of Electricity.

Fire Engine No. 9, of Cincinnati, has an engine house which is certainly fitted up with every modern improvement. The last feature introduced is worthy of description. In the sleeping room, the beds, instead of being ranged against the wall, are placed in the same relation to each other as the spokes of a wheel. Running through the centre of each collection of coverlets and attached to the under one is a brass fastening, and from this leads a stout white cord that, with the others joining in a common centre, form a rope that passes up through the ceiling, where the other end riding over a grooved wheel is made fast to an eighty-pound weight. At the initial movement of the "little joker" that begins its rounds while the alarm is being sent in from the box to the tower, a catch releases the weight and the same instant the bed-clothing is dangling in a united bunch half way up to the ceiling. The time used, therefore, by the men in disengaging themselves from the coverlets is saved, and the amount, while small in itself, when added to the other second-saving devices, become an important factor. The service rendered by the "little joker" is almost incredible. Operated by electricity, it performs the following wonderful feats, all of which are done simultaneously: Registering the number of the box from which the alarm is coming, and before the alarm is sounded on the bells it swings a bracket under the engine boiler, and, turning on the gas, sends a half-inch in diameter jet a foot high through the well seasoned kindling. The stable doors are thrown open, and at the same time a revolving wooden bar at the rear of each stall, and to which is affixed rawhides, turns rapidly, giving the horses an incentive to vacate as quickly as possible. Meantime the trap-doors, thrown back by the same means, make clear the descent on slippery poles to the firemen, from whom the coverlets have been snatched.

How A Mine is Worked.

"I wish you would tell me all about the way men get gold and silver out of a mine, my dear," said a lady in Brooklyn the other evening to her husband, as he peeled off his coat and sat down in three chairs for the evening. "I always thought they first bored into the ground with a pay streak until they found the shaft, and then they drifted for the assessment, and when they found that they just put a blast in the indications and salted the dump. Now it seems that you don't do it that way. You follow up the micaceous slate until you strike the bias fold. Then you see if you can find a color that matches the copper-stained trilobites, that you prospect, and you—"

"No, I must stop you there. You are getting a little off the vein. You probably have the right idea, but you are using terms that are not correct. After they get the wall rock on the dump and pinch out the night shift, they salt the contact and blast out the vertical chilblain. Then they drift for the blossom-rock, baled hay and poverty till they strike varicose vein. After that it is a short job to put on the bias fold and sample the stockholders. Where bituminous duplex bisects the brocaded porphyry and scallops the gouge with cross-eyed shirridge and bicarbonate of bilious colic interlaced with moire-antique wads of free-copper and free milling erysipelas."

Then he laughed a cold, hard laugh, and went to bed. If husbands would only explain these things to their wives, how much pleasanter our homes would be.

FELIPE CHAVES, than whom there is but one larger capitalist in New Mexico, unhesitatingly declares that all the hope there is for New Mexico is an influx of American miners and capitalists, to open and develop the mineral resources of the Territory. He owns 600,000 sheep.

More Excitement in Tulare.

A dispatch from Hanford, Tulare county, dated May 10, gives the following:

Deputy Marshal Dunlap and his posse have continued their acts of eviction today without any disturbance whatever. The household goods of three farmers near Lemoore have been removed from their houses in the same way as has been done in the four cases already reported. The three formally dispossessed to-day are Dr. Freeman, Thompson Standart and John Standart. This makes seven acts of dispossession in all The same person, O. C. Jackson, of Sacramento, was formally placed in possession of these places by the United States Marshal, as the Representative of the Southern Pacific Railaoad Company. Mr. Jackson did not, however, remain on any of his newly acquired ranches, but invariably left in company with the Marshal's party, never allowing the settlers to become acquainted with their new neighbor. The latest information, believed to be reliable, is that the wagons of the Marshal's party were placed on the cars this afternoon, and they will all leave this region to-night by rail; but Bowen and his men, increased in number, will remain somewhat longer, for a purpose not yet fully explained. Besides Asa Bowen, the following persons are here on the busines of eviction: Len. Harris, O. C. Jackson, George Karcher, Anthony Green and Frank Rider, all from Sacramento; Fred. B. Davis and Ned Davitt, from San Francisco, and J. Enos, John Sharp and Allen McKenny, from "the Lord knows where." It is said that some of the above-named leave on the cars to-night for parts unknown.

THE ladies of Paris live a la Grand Seigneur. Not alone that they have carriages for shopping, for traveling and for their rides in the Elysian Fields, fashion now demands that they must have their own railroad carriages. Our own Mrs. Mackey, from San Francisco, has her carriage, which is a fairy palace on wheels, costing her husband 150,000 francs. The Baroness de Rothschild travels also in her boudoir on wheels, which is, however, not quite as costly as that of her American competitor. Countess Petoska has purchased the palace car of Mme. Musard, the mistress of the deceased King of Holland, who bought it from the estate of the Duke de Morny. It is a costly pleasure, but enables the ladies to enjoy all the comforts of home while they are flying through the world. Aside from the excessive fare paid for transportation, 10,000 francs annually must be paid the railway company for keeping the carriage in running order.

THE Eureka Sentinel of May 10, publishes the following letter, dated at Resting Springs, Inyo Co., Cal., April 30, which explains itself: "On the 24th of this month one "Chloride Jack" committed a most cowardly murder here, for no other reason than that certain parties were "down on" the man that was killed. The name of the murdered man was Patrick McGraw. "Chloride Jack" is well known in your State. He waylaid McGraw on the road and shot him twice through the back. McGraw lived about 12 hours after being shot. Jack got away for the simple reason that there is no Justice of the Peace here nor officer of any kind nearer than 200 miles. He is heading for your section of the country. Please warn the people of his character through the Sentinel, and oblige, A. C.

LOS ANGELES is not the only place in which the "higher law" which we discussed obtains. In Shrevesport, Louisiana, S. M. Thomas, whose daughter had been seduced by his brother-in-law, killed the seducer. Thomas was tried and the jury on Saturday last brought in a verdict of manslaughter, with a recommendation to the Court that the lightest sentence possible be imposed. The telegraph brings word that Thomas was to-day sentenced to an imprisonment of one hour and a fine of one dollar and costs. Lest this merely nominal punishment should be considered too much of a condemnation of Thomas's action, however, Judge, jury and populace joined in a petition to the Governor for an immediate pardon and a remission of fine.—Los Angeles Express.

"THIS seat seems to be se-kewered," the schoolmaster remarked as he sat down in his chair and skewered himself on a bent pin. "And if I could just find the little boy who made the plat of the hall and marked off the seats I would chalk his back for the rest of the amusement season." As he stood enthusiastically grasping through his fingers the long, limber switch with which he proposed to do the chalking, the little boy who was thus offered an opportunity to dead-head himself into a free show sat in his seat and shivered with emotion, while he mentally resolved he would postpone any indication of merriment in which he might feel tempted to indulge until such time as he might be just about nine miles from where he then was.

A GOOD ROUTE.—The Greenly or Deep Spring toll road, leading across the Inyo range from Big Pine, is kept in the most perfect order, and quite to the surprise of anyone going over it for the first time, is one of the finest mountain roads in the great basin. With two slight exceptions in the new cut-off, the grade is so even that a buggy team can trot right along. With the advantage of this existing thoroughfare it were idle to talk about constructing any other road with the special view of shortening the distance to Lida Valley or Gold Mountain. In fact, after crossing the Inyo through Mazourka there is no practical route for a road to that country at all. However, on the present Deep Spring road saving distance can be gained cheaply by making a road through Soldiers' Pass, a low break in the mountains about one and one-half miles south of Gilbert's ranch. The route and distances, which we condense from a statement made by Messrs. Phillips & McKellips, would then be as follows: Independence to Big Pine, 28 miles; Big Pine to Owens River, 15 miles; Owens River to Toll House, 5 miles; Toll House to Antelope Springs, 12 miles; Antelope to Gilbert's 7 miles; Gilbert's ranch to Little Big Springs via Soldiers' Pass (the proposed new road) 14 miles; Little Big Springs to Cocomungo Springs, 2 miles; Cocomungo Springs to Tule Cañon, 6 miles; Tule Cañon Springs to State Line mine, 8 miles; total, 83½ miles. This distance could be shortened three or four miles by going straight across the valley and not diverging to Gilbert's. The pass referred to would not require more than two and one-half or three miles of road-building, and that on very easy grades, where the granite boulders can readily be disposed of, by being broken up or rolled out in the cañon, or rolled away from the sloping side. The advantage over the Present route would be 27 miles.

LIVELY.—Well authenticated reports, but lamentably incomplete as to such details as names, particular places, etc., are circulated concerning two or three scrimages in Lone Pine during the recent ebullition of life at that point. In fact, it was quite lively and sociable like. When, through bad marksmanship, or perhaps unsteadiness of nerve, the principals failed to get properly perforated by bullets, some of the demi monde and the riff-raff generally feebly followed suit by pugnacious punchings. Some of the black-eyes and "mansard-roofs" are said to have been quite Edifying to behold.

SPECIMENS.—Mr. Robt. Stewart, foreman of the State Line mine at Gold Mountain, through the care of James Hines, has placed THE INDEPENDENT under obligations for a couple of specimens of State Line ore. They may be seen at Mr. Woodhull's cabinet, and as described by him are of a free milling character. The quartz is massive, and of a nearly uniform light greyish color. Gold is visible in several places, which is free in quality.

SHIPPED.—The Owens Lake M. & M. Co. shipped, about the first of the present month, a $1,300-bar of bullion, the result of a short run on San Lucas ore. It was worked to a higher per cent. than was thought possible, showing an excellent mill process. Such ore ordinarily requires roasting. The company mill has another brick from another class of ore (out of the Armagh mine) to ship on Monday.

THE BRIDGE.—Contractor Sullivan has the work of rebuilding the Bend City bridge well under way. All the material of the old structure has been taken down and moved to the new site, and pile driving has commenced.

DEEP SPRING MINING DISTRICT.

The Indian Scout, Greenly, Lake and Cairo Mines.

Through the liberality and kind courtesy of ex-Sheriff W. A. Greenly, one of Inyo's old-timers and most tireless workers, a member of THE INDEPENDENT concern lately enjoyed his first ride across the Inyo Mountains, taking in on the trip many of the main points of interest of Deep Springs District.
